Belgium Calls All Troops As Nazis Mass on Border

GERMAN FLIGHTS OVER TERRITORY ALARMS COUNTRY

Fliers Had Mapped Plans of Belgian Forts, Documents Found on Plane Said To Have Revealed.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 14.—(Sun-day)—(AP)—Belgium by radio and courier late last night suddenly called all soldiers on leave back to their posts throughout the kingdom.

There was no official explanation. Private reports, however, said that strong German troop concentrations and movements on the frontier seemed to have been behind the order.

Messengers sped through Brussels in freezing weather and entered cafes, theaters and night clubs to summon soldiers and officers.

New Men Called.
Earlier, the defense ministry had cancelled air raid precautions trials scheduled for Sunday. Here, also, officials made no explanation.

There were indications that new men were being called to the colors.

Several groups of officers living in Brussels hotels checked out suddenly.

The sound of constant artillery fire was heard across the frontier from Luxembourg, but the Grand Duchy itself was reported completely calm.

Dutch Unruffled.
In The Netherlands, officials at The Hague said the cancellation of Belgian leaves left the situation unchanged for the Dutch.

"There is not a single reason for disquiet," they added.

This was the third time since the European war began that Belgian soldiers have been recalled abruptly from leave.

Last November Belgium mobilized 350,000 men for a "state of active defense." It was not announced how many men would be affected by tonight's order.

Report Maps of Forts.
(The United Press reported the measures were taken, Belgian sources said, because of almost daily flights by German planes over Belgian territory recently and because of German newspaper articles regarded as hostile to neutral countries.

(There were rumors that the Deepest Penetration Into Germany Finds Austria 'Fairly Well Lighted.'

WITH ROYAL AIR FORCE, IN FRANCE, Jan. 13.—(UP)—British airplanes were disclosed today to have made their deepest penetration into German territory by flying over Austria and Bohemia.

In bitterly cold weather, pilots of the Royal Air Force reconnoitered last night as far as Vienna, the former Austrian capital, and Prague, the capital of the dissolved republic of Czechoslovakia.

The long-distance reconnaissance planes took off from the British Royal Air Force base in France. The weather was cold but the night was clear and the sky filled with stars.

'PEGGY' MITCHELL UNDERGOES KNIFE

She Postponed Operation Long Time To See 'Gone With Wind' Premiere.

Margaret Mitchell Marsh, author of "Gone With the Wind," was reported "doing fine" by Piedmont attaches late yesterday following an operation for abdominal adhesions yesterday morning.

The adhesions had been causing trouble for some time, her husband, John Marsh, explained, and the necessity for an operation caused his wife to take only a limited part in the premiere showing of "Gone With the Wind" here in December.

His statement follows: "This impending operation was the underlying reason why she could not participate, except to a limited extent, in the festivities at the time of the motion picture premiere of 'Gone With the Wind.' The adhesions have been causing her trouble for a long time and late last summer her doctors advised an operation. She told them it would have to wait until after the premiere.

"She wanted to see the picture.

SLUM WRECKING FOR GRADY HOMES WILL BEGIN SOON

Project Will Replace One of City's Worst Sore Spots With Modern and Sanitary Family Units.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Demolition of Atlanta's most overcrowded negro slum, the tight-packed rookery of sag-roofed houses lying between Grady Hospital and Hilliard street on the east and west, and between Decatur street and Edgewood avenue on the north and south, will begin within two weeks, officials of the Atlanta Housing Authority announced yesterday.

As soon as the site is cleared, construction will begin on the new Grady Homes project, a $3,000,000 slum eradication which will replace the old disease-ridden area with modern housing facilities for 616 families.

Bids To Be Advertised.

Bids will be advertised during demolition of the present houses and construction of the new homes is expected to begin shortly after March 1.

The area to be cleared shows up in housing authority surveys as one of the worst in the city. Six hundred seventy-one negro families were removed from the 255 houses marked for demolition. Charts show that the birth rate for the area was two and one-half times the city's average, and that the death rate was twice the average. Infant mortality was three times the city average, and the incidence of tuberculosis was twice as high as the average.

Thirty per cent of the houses had no running water. Less than half possessed indoor plumbing. Less than one house in three had a bath.

Constant Hazard.

The area, near which the great Atlanta fire of 1917 started, has been a constant hazard for years, housing officials said, and a big fire there in 1938 cast burning embers upon the roof of Grady hospital.

Much of the smoke nuisance in that section of town originated in that area, it was pointed out, as all the fires were in open grates or small stoves in which soft coal was burned.

Rats by the thousands infested the place, constituting a possible focal point for typhus fever, the housing officials said, and with the removal of the families a five-man poisoning crew under W. H. Edwards, city sanitary engineer, moved in to eradicate them.

To Replace Slum.

Replacing the straggling slum will be 53 new fire-proof brick buildings, row-house in type, containing 2,468 rooms divided into 616 family units. Each unit will be of two, three four and one-quarter or five and one-half rooms, not including in this count a bath and a large storage closet. Tucker & Howell were the architects, associating with the firms of Cooper & Cooper, Frazier & Bond, and George H. Bond.

Rents in the old slum houses averaged $3.50 a room per month. Rents in Grady Homes will average $4 a room per month, but this figure will include all utilities such as lights, water, heating, cooking and refrigeration.

There will be a community house in which a day nursery will be maintained for children of working mothers, the house to sit on a four-acre play area.

Over the door will be a portrait

FINISHING OF WORK ON NEW MARIETTA HIGHWAY ORDERED

Final Construction of Four-Lane Road To Start in February; 18 Projects Will Be Let.

Final work on the four-lane super highway from Atlanta to Marietta will begin early in February, Robert MacDougall, state administrator of the Works Projects Administration, announced yesterday.

The state will pay approximately $396,000 of the estimated $465,000 cost, according to WPA engineers.

The Atlanta end of the highway has been completed for several months, awaiting final state approval for the unpaved sections in Cobb county.

MacDougall's announcement followed shortly after the State Highway Board, through Commissioner L. L. Patten, announced that the board had signed and Governor Rivers had approved a contract under which the WPA will assume the work of grading preliminary to the paving of the project.

18 Projects.

At the same time the board announced 18 projects, the largest letting since last July, estimated to cost $1,409,364, will be awarded February 9. Some of the projects will draw cash from federal and state funds, while others are 100 per cent federal financed. Others are federal and state aid, half federal aid, and half state post roads financed.

Approval of the Marietta road project will insure the early completion of the first super highway in the Atlanta vicinity. Already partially completed, the final work will include clearing, grading and paving of approximately seven and a half miles.

Important Artery.

Long considered one of the most important traffic arteries in the state, the completion of the link will give this section one of the few highways of its type in the south and will afford long-needed relief for the steadily increasing traffic congestion on the present Marietta road.

Many motorists already have used the new route but the Cobb county end has been difficult to get over, particularly during the current spell of almost steady rain.

Among other factors, it has been pointed out that the new highway undoubtedly will play a big part in the reduction of accidents which have been frequent under the existing setup.

The Atlanta terminus is on North Side drive just south of Pace's Ferry road which, in many cases, will eliminate the necessity

Temporary Writ Made Permanent For W. L. Miller

GENERAL JOHN E. STODDARD.

Adjutant General Gets 20 Days, Continuous Sentence To Run Until He's Purged of Contempt.

NEITHER OFFICER FILES AN APPEAL

Miller Aide Hints Federal Courts May Be Asked to Intervene.

Adjutant General John E. Stoddard and Lieutenant Colonel J. H. Skelton, of the Georgia National Guard, were held in contempt of court and given jail sentences yesterday in an order issued by Judge W. R. Smith, superior court judge sitting in Nashville, Ga. The officers were charged with interfering with W. L. Miller, ousted chairman of the State Highway Board, in disregard of a temporary restraining order, when Miller attempted to enter his office at the state capitol.

At the same time, the court made permanent a temporary injunction restraining any officer or enlisted man in the National Guard from interfering with the court's order not to keep Miller from his office.

Stoddard Sentenced.
Stoddard was sentenced to 20 days in jail and also given a continuous jail sentence to run until he purges himself of contempt. Skelton received only a 20-day jail sentence.

Omar W. Franklin, associate counsel for Miller, explained the continuing jail term for Stoddard meant he was sentenced to jail "until he complies with the court's order and stops interfering with Miller."

Neither Stoddard nor Skelton filed an appeal yesterday. They may appeal later, however, it was said. Stoddard was not present nor represented. Preston Arkwright Jr. appeared as counsel for Skelton.

The court's order will be turned over to Lanier county officials and will be transmitted to Sheriff Mott Aldridge, of Fulton county, for service.

If the Fulton county sheriff is unable to execute the order, he will report back to the judge, who will then call on the Governor for assistance.

James A. Branch, counsel for Miller, said in court yesterday that "if the Governor fails to pro-

For tonight it was revealed that barefoot American children are very much taboo subjects.

BREWER SELECTED TO DIRECT ANNUAL RED CROSS DRIVE

Atlanta, DeKalb Chapters Will Conduct Combined Roll Call for First Time in History.

Appointment of Oby T. Brewer, Atlanta merchant, as chairman for the twenty-third annual roll call of the American Red Cross in Atlanta, Fulton and DeKalb counties was announced yesterday by Dr. Frank K. Boland, chairman of the Atlanta chapter. The roll call will be March 14 through April 4.

A leader in community affairs for many years, Brewer last year served as president of the Civitan Club and chairman of the men's central division of the Community Fund.

For the first time in their history, the Atlanta and DeKalb chapters are making a combined roll call. Officials expressed the hope a large increase in memberships would result.

C. A. Stair, last year's chairman, and Jere Wells, superintendent of Fulton county schools, joined in praising the selection of Brewer as chairman.

How Modern Grady Homes Will Look—and How Disease-Ridden Area Appears Today

Grady Homes will boast buildings of the type shown above, modern, clean, and fireproof, which will take the place of tumble-down shanties. The new project, one building of which is shown in the drawing above from Tucker and Howell, architects, will house 616 families at a rental of $4 per room per month. This price will include all utilities.

Forlorn and deserted lie these ancient huts in the Grady hospital area, waiting for the wreckers who will clear the site within the next two weeks to make way for the new three million dollar Grady Homes project. The area is bounded by (1) Grady hospital and Hilliard streets, Edgewood avenue and Decatur street.

VINSON CHALLENGES WALSH'S CHARGES

Most of Navy Building Already Laid Down, Says House Leader.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Chairman Vinson, of the house naval affairs committee, tonight renewed his argument with Chairman Walsh, of the senate naval committee, with a challenge to Walsh's contention that the United States had not laid down one ship of the 20 per cent naval increase authorized two years ago.

"I am at a loss to understand how anyone conversant with naval matters can confuse the situation," Vinson said. He added that the government now is building all but 20,000 tons of the total authorization.

Vinson's committee is holding hearings on the chairman's bill to authorize a 25 per cent increase in tonnage, or 77 new ships, at a cost of $1,300,000,000.

Walsh yesterday demanded that appropriations be made at once to construct the authorized tonnage, instead of approval of "another paper navy."

In justification of his bill, Vinson said the 1928 measure was passed in the light of impending world conditions, "but now we are facing realities."

RADIUM WORTH $10,000 WASN'T LOST AFTER ALL

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 13.—(AP)—It wasn't funny when attendants at Baptist hospital lost radium valued at $10,000, but they had a relieved laugh on themselves when it turned up right under their noses.

For three hours they searched in a garbage truck with a radium finder borrowed from the University of Tennessee because they believed the radium had been thrown out with the garbage.

The missing capsule was found on another floor of the hospital, where a physician had taken it for use on a patient.

Costa Rica counts it a distinction that it has more school teachers than soldiers.

This is the way the old slum area will look when the Atlanta Housing Authority is through, some time next summer. The city has granted permission for the straightening and widening of streets and the beautification of the area with trees. The court in the center is a four-acre playground. Facing it is a community house, dedicated to Henry Grady, in which a day nursery will be maintained for the children of working mothers. Work on the project will get under way next month.

WATER RATIONING LOOMS IN NEW YORK

will soon begin a house-to-house canvass to make sure that this is being done.

In 178 large hotels, placards have been posted in all rooms calling attention to the "extended drought" and asking co-operation through minimum use of water.

Engineers in the office of Water Commissioner Joseph Goodman are listing "non-essential" uses—such as swimming pools—that will be shut off in the spring or before if the drought continues.

The city already is drawing water from every source available to it and will have no additional supply until the great Delaware aqueduct is completed in 1944.

Thus any disappointment in the spring rains and thaws will force the city into water rationing. How this would be done has not yet been determined, but the matter is causing serious concern to municipal officials.

Dictatorship Possible.

Commissioner Goodman would not guess at what might happen should the drought extend beyond the spring. He described purification of sea water as "too difficult to consider" at present. In an extremity such as a water shortage the board of health has the power to set up a virtual dictatorship over all city affairs but this possibility has not yet been raised.

Commissioner Goodman said the water department is going ahead with its plans on the assumption the drought would continue. Heavy rains for a week would merely "start the reservoirs on the way back," he said, and it would take at least 12 inches of rain to make any appreciable difference.

Mayor F. H. La Guardia recently toured the water system and found the Ashokan reservoir—hundreds of miles north of the city—so low that long forgotten islands have reappeared. The foundations of the village of Gilboa, flooded in 1925, are clearly visible.

FIGHT COLDS by helping nature build up your cold-fighting resistance

If you suffer one cold right after another, here's sensational news. Dr. Elizabeth Vickery writes: "I used to catch colds very easily. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery helped to strengthen me just when I was feeling very weak. I am stronger, and was troubled very little with colds."

This great medicine, formulated by a practicing physician, helps combat colds this way: (1) It stimulates the appetite. (2) It promotes flow of gastric juices. Thus you eat more; your digestion improves; your body gets greater nourishment which helps nature build up your cold-fighting resistance. So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery been that over 30,000,000 bottles have already been used. Proof of its remarkable benefits. Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from your druggist today. Don't suffer unnecessarily from colds.

Does Long Drive Hypnotize Autoist? Safety Expert Asks

"Does the monotony of the open road, with miles and miles of telephone posts and trees whizzing by, hypnotize a driver?"

This question was raised yesterday by safety expert Captain James A. W. Killip, of Philadelphia, who was in Atlanta demonstrating his safety school on wheels.

"There must be some reason for the open road accidents, so many of which are not collisions, and it's got me wondering if there is such a thing as 'road hypnosis,'" he declared.

"Definite Hypnotic Effect." "From personal experience," he continued, "I'd say there definitely is a hypnotic effect on the lone driver who covers stretch after stretch of road, similar in appearance to that just covered, and so monotonous that the next thing the driver knows—or doesn't know—is that he is asleep."

"Safety research experts all over the country are so busy with meters, like my drunk-o-meter, steering skill detectors and stereoscopic tests that perhaps they haven't gotten around to working out a definite theory on the psychology of driving. I've worked out my private solution for this so-called hypnosis, though—drive in the nearest filling station and ask the attendant to call you in three hours. This ought to give you enough time to sleep off the spell," he said.

Psychology Not Sure—Yet. Dr. G. C. White, psychology professor at Emory University, agreed with Captain Killip. "But I can't draw much of a line between mental and physical fatigue," he said, "lulling yourself to sleep by driving over an unvaried road is not hard to do, the monotony produces drowsiness all right, but psychology cannot call it hypnosis—yet."

Whether or not the road has the power to weave a spell over the driver is something Captain Killip wants motorists to think about and sleepiness or hypnotic spell, beware the open road.

BUDGET COMMITTEE PLAN ABANDONED

Congress Economy Group To Wage Fight Against Increase in Figures.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Supporters of the Harrison plan to create a joint congressional budget-making committee conceded today that it was dead for this session, but senate economy advocates made it clear they would wage a vigorous fight to prevent any increase in President Roosevelt's budget.

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, chairman of the senate finance committee, proposed creation of a special committee of 12 senators and 12 representatives to study President Roosevelt's budget estimates. Harrison was in study of appropriation needs.

Subsequently, the house appropriations committee instructed its sub-committees to hold expenditures within the President's budget estimates. Harrison was represented, too, as having decided against carrying out his plan and to be hopeful, instead, that the senate would adopt the same idea as the house committee and put a ceiling on spending.

Economy-minded legislators said they would make their fight on the basis of holding spending down to the $8,400,000,000 total proposed by Mr. Roosevelt.

His conviction came upon his own plea of guilty to mail fraud in connection with the "gift" of an $11,000 yacht to former Governor Richard W. Leche, of Louisiana. He resigned his position as conservation commissioner at request of Governor Earl Long when evidence was brought out that millions of barrels of oil in addition to the fixed limit were flowing out of Louisiana. It was his responsibility to see that the monthly limit of production was observed.

Dressed in the blue-gray denim garb of a federal prisoner, today he was entering a ten-day period of quarantine, a number now instead of a name. At the end of his quarantine period he will be assigned to one of the work-tasks, probably clerical, in which well-educated prisoners are employed.

His entry made no stir, a spokesman for the warden saying: "We don't get excited about the arrival of any one man. I don't even know he is here."

of Henry Grady in his relief, and beneath it this inscription from his famous speech at Boston:

"Surely here in the homes of the people lodge at last the strength and the responsibility of this government, the hope and the promise of this republic."

90 Per Cent of Cost. Ninety per cent of the cost of the project will be a loan from the United States Housing Authority, working through the Atlanta Housing Authority. The remaining 10 per cent will be raised by the sale of bonds.

Some city landmarks will fall in the demolition of the area. The old Bell Street school property was bought by the Authority from the city, and the $26,850 paid for it will be used for improvement of Yonge Street school. The old stockade and the stables, reminders of days when Atlanta's fire and police equipment was horse-drawn, was sold by the city for $40,000 and the money will be used in building a new prison on the city farm and the addition of a hospital building there.

South river, a stream never seen by modern-day Atlantans, runs under the property. The ancient sewer which carries it will be replaced by a new line costing $35,000 and the soggy, filled-in bed into which the area now drains damply, will be more thoroughly drained and filled.

Ghost Town Look. The area now has the look of a ghost town of long ago. The houses lie empty, gutters banging. Cats by dozens prowl the strips of mud that served for alleys.

Within two weeks the wrecking starts. By March building will begin. Light and air will come into the dark warrens. The people who come back there to live will still be poor. But at least they can be clear and comfortable and free of diseases that breed in filth.

The Grady Homes project is one in a series which is putting Atlanta in the forefront of slum clearance work in the nation. Other projects under way or authorized are Clark Howell Homes, 630 units on 40 acres, costing $3,466,000; John Hope Homes, 606 units on 32 acres, costing $2,821,000; State Capitol Homes, 616 units on 28 acres, costing $3,021,000; and John J. Egan Homes, 548 units, on 20 acres, costing $2,016,000.

POLICE HEAD FIRED IN DETROIT SHAKEUP

Superintendent Accused of 'Neglect'; Two Detectives Are Still Missing.

DETROIT, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Police Commissioner Frank D. Eaman, appointee of Detroit's new mayor, Edward J. Jeffries, created a sensation tonight by removing his next in command, Superintendent Fred W. Frahm, on charges of "neglect of duty."

The removal order, developed in connection with a mystifying robbery case involving the disappearance of two detectives, was followed immediately by Frahm's announcement of his resignation. His removal had been technically a suspension.

Just before Frahm's removal, Chief of Detectives John A. Hoffman, for 23 years a member of the police department, had asked to be retired because of "inferences of improper conduct," made by Commissioner Eaman.

The action climaxed a long investigation into a robbery last summer for which four men are on trial. The two missing detectives are state witnesses. The victim was supposed to have been returned $1,000 by the detectives, but he said he never received it.

HEARING ON BUDGET OPENS TOMORROW

Few Changes Expected in Tentative County Sheet of $4,918,992.

Public hearing on the 1940 Fulton county budget will be begun by county commissioners at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, but with little chance that any material additions can be made to the $4,918,992.88 tentative sheet already prepared, it was indicated yesterday by James L. Respass, of Respass & Respass, county auditors.

Under the budget law, the county must conduct the public hearing, and the formality will be followed. It was pointed out, however, that all anticipated revenue for 1940 with the exception of about $3,000 held in reserve, already has been allocated in the tentative figures.

Commissioners will meet in the commission meeting room on the fifth floor of the courthouse, and hear delegations, and then will proceed to adopt the definite budget for the year's operations.

Included as the first item of appropriation in the 1940 budget must be a 1 per cent reduction of actual 1939 receipts, estimated at $49,904; $200,000, representing one-fourth of the outstanding indebtedness of the county prior to 1939, and outstanding county warrants, estimated at $356,902.

Seven Veils Dance—What's Coming Off Here?

The Utica, N. Y., Civic Music Society says it's a strip-tease, and it wants no part of it. But Dancer Thelma Biracree says it's no such thing, and to prove it here's the finale—with clothes on! Cause of much tumult and shouting up there is Thelma's "dance of the seven veils."

Now here's Thelma talking things over with Orchestra Conductor Nicholas Gualillo in a Syracuse night club. Heads totter over the table, they hatched a plot by which even yet, they say, the people of Utica may see the banned act.

2,000 MARINES SAIL FOR WAR EXERCISES

Will Test Vulnerability of Caribbean Defenses to Landing Forces.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(UP)—More than 2,000 marines from the Quantico, Va., base were at sea tonight en route for two months of training during which the vulnerability of Caribbean defenses to landing forces will be tested. The marines, commanded by Brigadier General Holland M. Smith, leader of the first brigade of the fleet marine force, embarked from Norfolk, Va., aboard ships of the Atlantic squadron. Included in the brigade are infantry, field artillery, chemical warfare units, engineers and tanks. They will be joined by the first marine aircraft group commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Field Harris, which will fly from Quantico to the maneuver site. It was indicated that the exercises will be carried out in the area near Culebra Island, scene of similar landing maneuvers last year when the entire United States fleet participated in practice problems in the Caribbean.

FRANCE AND SPAIN AGREE ON TRADE

Pact Expected To Restore Commerce Almost to Two- Billion-Franc Level.

MADRID, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Conclusion of a new French-Spanish trade agreement, which authorities said was expected to restore commerce almost to the 1933 level of 2,000,000,000 francs (about $45,000,000), was announced tonight. The announcement was made at a reception at the French embassy to celebrate successful culmination of the negotiations started several months ago. Exact terms of the pact were lacking, but it was learned it provides stabilization of each country's imports with exports. France will buy iron, lead, zinc, mercury and pyrite. Spain will buy French wheat and phosphate from North Africa, rice from Indo-China, and automobiles, chemicals, pharmaceutical products, books and newspapers from continental France.

Where Will Reds Strike Next, the World Wonders

Recent History of World's Biggest Nation Points to Other Invasions; Soviet State Occupies one-Seventh of Globe's Land Surface.

By The Associated Press.
Russia is like an iceberg, in that the biggest part is out of sight. The part that shows up in the usual maps these days is European Russia—about four times as large in area. But out of sight doesn't mean out of mind, either of the nation's nerve center at Moscow, or of the countries that border on the Soviet Union's vast Asiatic domain. The arrows indicate the many points where Soviet influence—sometimes pressure—is felt. Talk that the Soviet may try to increase her influence at some of these points grows out of such recent history as:
1. Her march into Poland. (The land she got has been absorbed by two of the Soviet republics, though the exact division between them is uncertain.
"Assistance" Pacts.
2. Her "mutual assistance" pacts with the Baltic states.
3. Her invasion of Finland.
4. Her unsuccessful attempt to conclude a pact with Turkey, which signed up with the Allies.
Also, it grows out of such ancient history as Czarist Russia's designs on Persia (now Iran), where Britain has important oil concessions, and India.
Soviet reverses in Finland may make the shadow of the Russian bear less formidable. Her first-line army numbers 2,500,000 men, but Finland keeps a big force busy. There are troops in former Poland, too, and there have been reports of others on the Turkish and Iranian frontiers. And despite signs of increasing Russo-Japanese amity, it is believed unlikely Russia will greatly reduce the size of her forces in the Far East. So her armed might is pretty well split up.
Railroads Inadequate.
Another factor is Russia's inadequate railroad system, which might be disastrously overloaded if the Soviet had a war on two fronts.
But there is also Big Boss Stalin.
His country is huge—occupying more than one-seventh of the land surface of the globe, with 165,000,000 people (speaking some 120 different languages). It is also rich—with the world's largest wheat acreage, 73 per cent of its manganese (essential in steel-making), 32 per cent of its oil, one-third of its forest acreage, much of its gold and iron. With most of its resources undeveloped, Stalin might appear to have plenty of work at home.
But events since August prove that the Big Boss is not content to stay there—and that no one can be certain what he will do.

Covers Ripped Off.
Without a moment's hesitation she ordered the covers ripped off. Back in the NRA days of 1933 when her superior, Miss Frances Perkins, the secretary of labor, wholeheartedly being an untapped market for shoes, southerners considered this a slur on the south and made known their opinions in various effective manner.

Miss Lenroot, however, denied that the Perkins incident had anything to do with her action today. "I simply thought it unfair to American school children to represent them as going to their classes barefooted," Miss Lenroot explained. "I had not realized before I saw it that the picture might be unjust. When I did, I ordered a new cover supplied."

That remedy was too late, however. The slick paper covers showing a blonde little girl being escorted down a sunny lane by two little boys (all sans shoes) just had to be ripped off and thrown away and the formal report had to be distributed without benefit of formal dress. The conference started Thursday, is held once each 10 years.

Do You Want A Baby?

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT that "Complete unity and happiness in married life is brought by babies," and that lack of children in the home is one of the greatest causes for discontented marriages. Also that woman was intended for Motherhood, but too often she has a functional weakness. During an experience of more than 40 years specializing in conditions peculiar to women, Dr. H. Will Elders developed a simple home method which has brought new hope.

Happiness has been brought to many who were childless because of functional weakness. Husbands have written the most glowing letters of gratitude in such cases. Now we want other women suffering from functional weakness to learn about this splendid method and how it may be used in the privacy of the home.

We have printed an illustrated comprehensive treatise on the merits of this method, in which Dr. Elders intimately wrote of many important subjects relating to the female organs that are vitally interesting to every woman. It tells how you too may often combat your troubles as have others who reported the arrival of babies after being childless for years, due to functional weakness. So often again certain women may enjoy the desire and activities of Nature's most wonderful creation—a normal, fully developed, vigorous woman. STODDARD, SKELTON HELD IN CONTEMPT vide the necessary assistance, there's another way to get it." Judge M. D. Dickerson, who assisted Judge Smith, asked what that way was.

"We'll cross that bridge when we get to it," Branch replied. Branch indicated the federal court might be asked to intervene if the order was not carried out. He would make no definite prediction on this point, however.

Stoddard could not be reached for a statement last night. Attaches of his office said he was out and they did not know when he would return.

In presenting Skelton's case, Arkwright argued that Skelton was a resident of Hart county, and did not come under the jurisdiction of the court over which Judge Smith presided, assisted in an advisory capacity by Judge Dickerson and Judge W. E. Thomas. The judges overruled this plea.

Arkwright also pleaded that on January 5 Skelton had been relieved as commander of the national guard, but that once called out it is under the jurisdiction of the civil courts, and that its acts are to be treated as those of sheriffs or other peace officers.

Branch contended that the Governor has a right to call out the national guard, but that once called out it is under the jurisdiction of the civil courts, and that its acts are to be treated as those of sheriffs or other peace officers.

Cites Case.

Branch also cited a case from the United States supreme court. In that case Governor Moody, of Texas, issued an executive order and called out the national guard to curtail oil production in east Texas oil fields.

Representatives of the oil companies appealed to the federal circuit court of appeals in New Orleans. The circuit court granted them an order superseding the martial law order. The decision was upheld by the supreme court. Miller's defense also cited West Virginia and Kentucky cases in which the state supreme courts decided that civil law superseded military law.

In connection with the court's ruling on the permanent injunction, it was pointed out that when there is no defense the order of the trial court becomes absolute and is the same as if it had been upheld by the supreme court.

Won Four Orders.

Miller previously won from the same court a series of four orders which recognized him as rightful chairman of the highway board. Last week he obtained from Judge Smith a temporary injunction restraining the national guard from interfering with him pending yesterday's hearing. Stoddard and Skelton, however, refused to accept service of the summons and a Fulton county deputy sheriff tossed copies of the papers in Stoddard's lap and at Skelton's feet.

The court held the summons had been served legally on both men. When Stoddard barred Miller's way to the chairman's office last Monday, Judge Smith issued the supplementary citation for contempt.

Miller was dismissed from office by Governor Rivers last December 2 after Rivers charged the highway executive had used his office to build a gubernatorial campaign and asserted he was ineligible for office because he held an advisory position with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, a federal agency.

LEADERS IN HOUSE SHOW OPPOSITION TO LOAN FOR FINNS

U. S. Must Not Recognize Invasion as 'No. 1 Credit Rating,' They Declare;
Very Serious—B or a h.

By FRANK McNAUGHTON.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(UP)—House leaders said tonight that as much as they would like to help Finland they could not support a federal loan to that nation. The United States must not set the precedent of recognizing invasion as a "No. 1 credit rating," they argued.

These leaders indicated privately that they would oppose any of the several pending measures to extend direct aid to Finland in her resistance to the Russian invasion. The United States treasury cannot afford such a venture, they said, and furthermore, even though this instance might not compromise United States neutrality, it would set a precedent that likely would involve us.

Earlier Senator William E. Borah, Republican, Idaho, said that although he sympathized with Finland he thought that the matter of a loan was a very serious problem. He said he would not pursue any course that might involve the United States in the European conflict.

One house leader explained that perhaps the most serious objection to a loan to Finland would be the precedent it would set. He cited this example in explaining his stand:

"Suppose money is lent victims of aggression such as Finland. As in the case of Finland the argument would be made later, perhaps, that France is a similar victim and in need of financial help. If Switzerland or Holland were invaded in the spring, as many military strategists predict, these countries could present an A-1 credit rating, the same as Finland, to bolster their pleas for money. Where would we be?"

Other congressional leaders said that no step should be taken by this country that might prejudice its position as an agent for peace negotiations.

Meanwhile, it was said in congressional circles that the Treasury Department would not object to proposals to authorize a Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan to Finland. Various legislative plans have been submitted to Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau Jr. and Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones for opinion.

Congressional sources said that another plan for a Finnish loan would be to make it from the $2,000,000,000 secret stabilization fund. Virtually none of this money is being used now. It was understood, and a loan from it would circumvent the objection of Finnish credits boosting the national Bewildered by the riptide nature of Russo-Reich relations, a poor Volhynian family huddles in a rickety wagon, bumping down the long road that leads back to Germany. The Berlin propaganda ministry reports many German nationals are returning from the Soviet.

The Berlin-approved caption on this one says Nazi soldiers are helping Volhynian Germans load their possessions into wagons for the return journey. Propaganda officials stress the point that they're going back to the land of their ancestors to re-establish their homes.

Men, Arms Pour Into Finland

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Men and munitions are pouring into Finland and the most effective aid in her fight against Soviet Russia is being given by Scandinavian countries.

Despite governmental attitudes of neutrality, citizens and officials of these neighboring nations openly assert Finland is fighting a common cause in preventing the westward sweep of Communism. Neutral observers estimate that more than 6,000 Swedish volunteers already are on Finnish soil in addition to several hundred Norwegians. Last Thursday, Copenhagen sources disclosed that the first company of Danish volunteers had landed in Finland.

A recruiting office in Stockholm, Sweden, is doing a lively business openly. Many adventurers from the United States and other countries have enlisted there with the Swedes.

Sweden makes it easy for the officers and men in her army to go to Finland. They are released readily for volunteer service. Some of her best officers have gone after resigning from the Swedish army.

A central agency co-ordinating collections in Sweden sent voluntary gifts for Finland up to this afternoon totaled 8,500,000 kronor (about $1,991,000).

(In the United States, former President Herbert Hoover in charge of collecting voluntary donations for Finland, announced credits for $600,000 had been telegraphed the Finnish government.)

Independent Voters of U. S. Sitting High in Driver's Seat

Majority of Them Opposed to Third Term for President Roosevelt, Dr. Gallup Finds in Poll; Republicans Show Gains.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Copyright, 1940.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 13.—As the American people turn their attention to the business of electing a new President next November, a nationwide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion reveals that neither the Democrats nor the Republicans have enough "regular" party members at this time to capture the presidency. The balance of power is at the present time, the survey shows, rests with a large bloc of political "Independents"—to whom the actual candidates and the platforms are likely to mean more than the party labels.

The size and political temper of this independent bloc is something which may give the political leaders of both major parties plenty of concern between now and election day. In his Jackson Day speech Monday night President Roosevelt himself declared that the problem of the Democratic party would be to hold its supporters "among those independent voters, and don't let us forget it."

The present Institute survey underlines the job which President Roosevelt has marked out for the Democratic party, and indicates that the same problem faces the Republicans. To find out how many voters now regard themselves as "regular Republicans," "regular Democrats" and "Independents," the Institute asked a carefully chosen cross-section of more than 9,000 voters throughout the United States.

"In politics do you consider yourself a Democrat, Independent, Socialist or Republican?"

The replies of voters from Maine to the Pacific coast point to three vital facts:

1. Approximately one voter in every five (19%) regards himself as an Independent at present. In a nation with approximately 60,000,000 eligible voters, this means that about eleven and one-half millions consider themselves tied to neither major party.

2. Of the remaining voters, the largest share consider themselves Democrats. The "Republicans," who for many years prior to 1932 were generally considered the "normal majority party," are still in the minority. Whereas 19 voters in every 100 call themselves Independents, the survey shows that 42 think of themselves as Democrats and 38 as Republicans. Approximately one person in a hundred calls himself a Socialist or a supporter of some other minority party.

3. Unnoticed by most political observers, however, the number of voters who consider themselves Republicans has increased substantially since the days—dark for the GOP—following Roosevelt's re-election. In May, 1937, the Institute found that 31% of the voters considered themselves Republicans, while 42% considered themselves Democrats. Today the figures are 38% and 42% respectively.

Perhaps, in the months ahead, the typical Independent voter will stature reported in a similar survey that only 33 persons in every 100 called themselves Republicans. The trend is shown in the following figures:

TODAY'S SURVEY.
"Democrats"	42%
"Republicans"	38%
"Independents"	19%
"Socialists" and others	1%
100%
MAY, 1937.
"Democrats"	31%
"Republicans"	42%
"Independents"	15%
"Socialists" and others	2%

In each survey the Institute found a handful of voters (an average of 4 per cent) who were undecided about their proper classification, but further tests have indicated that these voters, when pressed for their opinions, divide in the same proportions as those reported above.

As President Roosevelt claimed in his Jackson Day speech, the great bulk of the "Independent vote" was cast for the Democratic candidate in 1936. Of the Independent voters reached in the present Institute survey nearly three out of four say that they voted for Roosevelt last time. The actual vote of these Independents was:

INDEPENDENT VOTE IN 1936
Roosevelt	73%
Landon	23%
Socialist and other candidates	4%
100%

On the basis of the 1936 Presidential vote, this indicates that more than six million of Mr. Roosevelt's 27 1/2 million votes came from persons who consider themselves politically "fancy-free" at the present time.

But the big question ahead for both Democratic and Republican party chieftains will be: How will the bulk of the Independent vote be cast in November? Of course a great deal will depend on the type of candidate named by the major parties at their conventions this summer, as well as on the platforms and campaigns that follow. At this time, however, Institute studies show that the Independents are very closely divided on the question of a Republican or a Democratic administration in 1941, with a substantial group still undecided.

The Institute asked self-styled Independent voters: "Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election in 1940?" The replies are as follows:

INDEPENDENT VOTE TODAY
Favor Democratic victory	31%
Favor Republican victory	29%
Favor Third Party victory	2%
Undecided	38%
100%

On another Jackson Day program Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson urged the possibility that President Roosevelt himself is the only Democrat who can hold the bulk of the Independent vote for his party. But the Institute survey indicates that, like the country as a whole, a majority of Independent voters with opinions on the subject do not favor a third term for FDR at this time.

Perhaps, in the months ahead, the typical Independent voter will

DEMOCRATS COURT 'THE INDEPENDENT'

Group Holds Large Balance of Power.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—The latest emphasis of the New Deal strategists is on the "independent voter." He lobbied up on Jackson Day as their reason why the Democrats, if they have any idea of winning next November's election, must nominate a candidate whose views on economics, politics and government can be distinguished from those of the Republican nominee, whoever he may be.

To put it more simply, the Democrats were told they would lose unless they chose a man whose ideas are pretty much like those of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and bear little or no resemblance to those of a Herbert Hoover, or the late Liberty League.

Sugar Coated.
Mr. Roosevelt himself, for one, told them that. He did it gracefully, almost jestingly, with good jokes at the beginning and end of his speech to provide a sugar coating for an utterance essentially somewhat similar to the warlike statements of the past which have caused no end of strife.

Mr. Roosevelt touched upon the independent voter lightly and lovingly and left a more exact statement of what he meant to Robert H. Jackson, his newly appointed attorney general.

Jackson, who spoke at a Jackson Day dinner in Cleveland, had reduced it all to figures. Since the war, his thesis ran, the Republicans have consistently polled about 16,000,000 votes, did so in fact in their worst year, 1936, when they carried but two states. Something like that figure, he thought, was their irreducible minimum.

Democratic Figures.
Then, turning to the Democratic figures, he found they had gyrated between 8,300,000 for John W. Davis in 1924 to 27,400,000 for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936. No less than five elections have been swung by the voter who sometimes votes Republican, sometimes Democratic or half the time does not vote at all.

To this he added the theory that when it's tweedledum and tweedledit between the Republicans and Democrats, the independent stays away from the polls or votes for the Republican. So, the problem of 1940 could be solved, he concluded, by nominating a candidate with ideas such as those which brought the party most independent votes and its highest total of ballots, that of 1936.

He thought Franklin D. Roosevelt would fill the bill beautifully.

come to look more favorably upon a third term for the President, but at present the survey vote is 46 per cent of all voters with opinions on the question are for a third term, while 54 per cent oppose one now. In the Independents' case the Institute finds approximately one voter in eight (13%) undecided, while only 9 per cent of all voters are undecided.

Despite the fact that a majority of Independents are not anxious for a third term, however, President Roosevelt is the most popular single candidate with these voters to succeed himself.

In second and third place Independents with opinions name District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and Vice President Garner. Asked: "Whom would you like to see elected President in 1940?" Independents reached in the Institute survey answer:

Roosevelt (Rep.)	47%
Dewey (Rep.)	19%
Garner (Dem.)	10%
Vandenberg (Rep.)	6%
Taft (Rep.)	3%
Hull (Dem.)	1%
McNutt (Dem.)	1%
LaGuardia (Am. Labor)	1%
Hoover (Rep.)	1%

RUPTURED?

It's just as ridiculous to harness a rupture with unnecessary belts, straps, or bulks as to put harness on your head like a horse. Why did it when you get a Dobbs Truss that throws off the harness? The Dobbs bulletless-beltless-strapless Truss, with its exclusive patented softly-fitting CONCAVE-PAD, eliminates pinching, chafing, binding, and gagging. To those who have been wearing old-style trusses the Dobbs Truss is a revelation from the standpoint of both comfort and security.

Why not solve your rupture problem in the modern Dobbs way? We take a conscientious, personal interest in every case. We are not satisfied with our work until you are satisfied and happy. WAGE, LABOR ACTS TO BE EXPLAINED AT MEETING HERE Association of Manufacturers' Secretary, Counsel Will Try To Clarify Them on January 26.

Georgia employers, "befogged, befuddled and bewildered" by the complicated maze of the wage-hour law and the labor relations act, will hear expert clarification of their problems Friday, January 26, at the Biltmore hotel when the Associated Industries of Georgia and the National Association of Manufacturers hold a joint meeting. Slater Marshall, secretary of the Georgia organization, announced yesterday.

Speakers who will attempt to clarify the intricate laws governing employer relations are Noel Sargent and John R. Gall, secretary and counsel, respectively, of the Association of Manufacturers. "It will be a question and answer form of meeting," Mr. Marshall said, and the two leaders of the discussion should be able to answer any perplexing question now puzzling a Georgia employer.

"The meeting is particularly important at this time because of the new interpretations of the Wagner act now coming from the courts. Just the other day a federal circuit court of appeals at Chicago ruled that the manufacturer is not compelled to sign a contract with a labor organization. It held that under the law the collective bargaining procedure is mandatory, but that the result is not."

"On the same day another federal appellate court at San Francisco held that a worker has an equal right to join a company union, a national union, or to join no union at all, a decision which will apply in nearly every case of collective bargaining in the future."

Henry W. Johnson, president of the New Jersey Manufacturers' Association, will deliver the principal formal address of the day at a luncheon meeting. His subject will be "Industrial Organization Under Present Conditions."

C. S. Brosman, president of the Associated Industries of Georgia, will preside at the meeting.

Nazis Capture British Flyer; Belgians Rushed to Posts

There'll be no more bombing of the Nazi lines for Sergeant Herbert Russe (center), of Britain's Royal Air Force. Sergeant Hero's a prisoner, and chances are he'll see no more action for the duration of the war. His Wellington developed trouble behind the German front, and he had to make a forced landing. You see him as his two swastika captors brought him in.

Belgian soldiers like these were pouring back into their stations along the German frontier last night as the high command called them back from leaves. Sudden manning of the fortifications was attributed to the fact German planes have been flying over Belgian territory almost daily recently. Brussels heard rumors, too, that a Nazi ship which made a forced landing near the border several days ago carried documents proving that Reich fliers had mapped Belgian forts.

than 2,000 killed and wounded. It declared that the Murnansk railway, instead of being cut, had not suspended service for a "single minute," and that the Finns had not reached the frontier at any point.

The review continued: "While in the first three weeks important operations took place which ended in the creation of place d'armes for Soviet troops on Finnish territory, in the second three-week period operations in most cases were limited to ordinary clashes, reconnoitering detachments and small infantry units. The heavy cold which suddenly set in greatly facilitated the position of the Finnish troops but despite this, the latter proved incapable of efficiently profiting by the favorable situation."

"However, the foreign press, especially the French and primarily the French Havas News Agency, managed during this period to develop extensive operations in the field, fabrication and slanderous inventions regarding Soviet troops."

"A Laughable Lie." "Firstly, foreign agencies referring to mythical 'sources' in Geneva, Helsinki and Riga assert—not assert, but shout themselves hoarse—that Finnish troops have broken through the front in all directions crossed the Soviet frontier and waged operations on the territory of the U. S. S. R."

"This is an utter lie and a childish, witless, laughable lie at that. 'Secondly, foreign agencies, especially Havas, referring to the same 'sources' allege that in battles in the area of Suomussalmi the forty-fourth Soviet division 'lost 14,000 men.'"

"This allegation is due to the supernatural fantasy of its authors. The forty-fourth division in all had no more than 10,000 men on the front. Then how could it lose 14,000? In reality the casualties of Soviet troops do not exceed 900 men and they were due to the sudden cold which set in rather than to the actions of Finnish troops."

"But the foreign gossipers carefully pass in silence the fact that Finnish troops lost there not less than 2,000 killed and wounded and that members of the Finnish Schutz corps brutally killed their wounded in order not to leave tongues in the hands of Soviet troops."

British Planes Over Austria

By ROBERT BUNELLE.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—(P)—British air force answered persistent reconnaissance flights and attacks by German planes with a "gruesome" survey flight of the war, during the night and today.

Both sides appeared to be setting the stage for future aerial onslaughts.

As German planes dodged along the east coast of England for the fifth successive day, the air ministry announced that British aircraft had made mass scouting flights over Austria and Bohemia, dropping propaganda leaflets in the vicinity of Vienna and Prague and reconnoitering extensively in eastern Germany.

It was the first time in the war that British planes had been reported over the newly annexed parts of greater Germany. A British war correspondent in France said the flights had been made from French bases.

The British reported that two German air scouts were downed during the day but denied a Nazi high command announcement that two Royal Air Force planes had been destroyed.

In the war at sea it was disclosed that the trawler Lucida had gone down with the loss of all her crew of 12 after hitting a mine.

On the home front fears of sabotage were stirred by a series of incidents.

At Donaghadee, Northern Ireland, a series of shots drove off four men apparently attempting to cut the cable between Scotland and Northern Ireland, while at Hendon airport, in suburban London, sentries fired at an intruder who ignored their challenge.

Fire routed Northern Ireland's Governor, the Duke of Abercorn, and his household from 300-year-old Baronscourt castle. Explosions and fire swept a shipyard at Northwich, Cheshire, approximately 20 miles southeast of Liverpool, but officials said sabotage was not involved.

Nazis Refuse Meat to Jews

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—(P)—Germany's Jews, already subjected to extensive restrictions, have received another shock in calling for ration cards for the period of January 15 to February 11.

They found that coupons for a total of 125 grams (almost four and one-half ounces) of meat and all coupons for potted vegetables—such as peas, beans and lentils—were invalidated as far as they were concerned.

They further were denied certain general ration cards recently issued to all other Germans to enable them to obtain certain extras when the Nazi regime finds itself able to grant something beyond the ordinary daily allotment.

From time to time, for instance, a small quantity of sweets may be purchased upon presentation of a special card from which a coupon is clipped.

Jews must have the letter "J" stamped on their ration cards, enabling a tradesman to declare he has not in stock what the Jews ask for or in other ways to discriminate against them.

Jews are barred from appearing in stores or at markets before noon and after 2 p. m. Most of the supplies on the market have been sold by noon or only second-rate goods may be left.

Every German must have a clothes card to obtain wearing apparel, but Jews have been denied such cards on the grounds that they have been so well-to-do in the past they undoubtedly have reserves on which to draw.

The Jews' reply is that the seven-year-old Nazi regime marks a period in which their standard of living has dropped continuously and restocking of clothing became almost impossible.

Courts have held that the lease of a non-Jew may be cancelled if he persists in inviting Jews to his apartment, thereby giving offense to non-Jewish cotenants.

Of Berlin's 95,000 Jews, some 20,000 have been assigned to street cleaning, snow shoveling, road building and manual work, including forestry and gardening tasks. They are strictly separated from non-Jews.

Jewesses, ousted from work earlier in the Nazi regime, have been pressed into work also, serving chiefly as maids, farmhandettes and as textile workers.

Spring Weather Hails Ski Patrol

By the United Press.

Freely spring-like temperatures prevailed throughout most of Scandinavia yesterday while Germany and parts of southeastern Europe suffered from abnormal cold.

In Finland, the unseasonal thaw left the ground boggy and even more difficult to negotiate with troops and equipment than the hard snow had been. At the same time it curtailed the activity of Finnish ski patrols.

Everywhere the question was: Will the unseasonably warm weather help the Russians?

The answer appeared to be "no." The water-sodden ground offers even more difficulties to troop transport than had the deep, packed snow.

BRITISH SHIPS FLY TO VIENNA, PRAGUE

ever, the British pilots had great difficulty with ice conditions before they returned safely. Officials said there were no casualties and there were no planes damaged by either anti-aircraft guns or machine gun bullets—indicating that no serious opposition was encountered.

(In London, the air ministry said: "Last night extensive reconnaissance flights into eastern Germany were made by the Royal Air Force. Austria, Bohemia and northwestern Germany also were successfully reconnoitered."

"Security patrols were maintained over Heligoland Bight (Bay). All aircraft returned safely to their bases."

It was understood in London that some planes flew as far as Berlin. These putting out from England, in addition to planes flying from France, traveled at least 1,000 miles and were believed to have been the craft reconnoitering over northwestern Germany.)

The British planes scattered many thousands of propaganda leaflets on Prague and Vienna.

One plane was caught in a searchlight beam near Frankfurt on the return trip, but escaped.

The planes had split into two sections on their flight, one going to Vienna and one to Prague. Soon after leaving French territory the pilots sighted towns ablaze with lights in Switzerland, in contrast to the complete blackout in Germany. But Austria, the pilots reported, was not very well blacked out and the towns could be picked out from the air. Vienna on the Danube was easily located.

"We could see headlights of cars on the road and the city was fairly well lighted, one pilot said. The planes flew "comparatively" low to drop leaflets.

Replaced on Seized Liner. Nazis Quickly Find Bomb

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 13.—(P)—How the crew of the captured German liner Duesseldorf tried to sink her with a time bomb while a British prize crew was aboard was told today by an authoritative source.

The 4,930-ton prize of war, captured off Chile December 15, arrived here yesterday under British nationality and renamed the "Poland" in honor of Commander John R. Poland of H. M. S. Despatch, which seized her.

This is the story related by the informant. At the time of the capture the Nazi crew was transferred to the Despatch and the prize crew put aboard.

As the Duesseldorf proceeded, the German captain was overheard to remark in German to one of his crew: "They won't get far." A British officer reported to Commander Poland who at once suspected a time bomb had been planted.

Commander Poland ordered the German crew back on board their ship and told the men to find the bomb or they would be left to blow up. They found the bomb.

GERMAN SHIP MUST STAY IN FLORIDA PORT

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 13.—(UP)—The German freighter Arauca must stay in Port Everglades, the harbor into which she ducked to escape the British cruiser Orion last month off the Florida coast. Judge John W. Holland ruled in federal district court today.

He denied a request of the Hamburg-American line, operators of the Arauca, for transfer of the German vessel to Key West where lower wharfage charges could be arranged. Companies which have attached the Arauca with libels amounting to $453,000 objected to the suggested transfer, arguing it would be possible to scuttle the Arauca during the transfer.

WARSHIP ESCAPES BEHIND SMOKE SCREEN

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Jan. 13.—(P)—A gray warship seen hovering off Fort Lauderdale today was reported by Reuben Munroe, charter boat captain, to have laid down a smoke screen and dodged behind it when Munroe's boat approached.

The captain of the tiny craft said the vessel apparently was a cruiser and flew a flag he thought was British. It was bigger than the cruiser Orion, which chased the German freighter Arauca into Port Everglades last month, he added.

URUGUAY TO INTERN CREW OF GRAF SPEE

MONTEVIDEO, Jan. 13.—(UP)—It was learned reliably tonight that the Uruguayan government has decided to intern for the duration of the war the members of the crew of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee, who remained here after the vessel was scuttled December 17.

The members still in Montevideo were wounded in the battle with the British cruisers Ajax, Achilles and Exeter off the Uruguayan coast December 13.

Most of the Graf Spee's crew reached Buenos Aires, where they were interned following the ship's scuttling.

400 RED PLANES RAID FINLAND

By WADE WERNER.

HELSINKI, Jan. 13.—(P)—The Finnish high command announced tonight that more than 400 Soviet Russian airplanes, some of them raiding southwest Finland, were observed over the country during the day.

An army communiqué said the damage was relatively slight because of the defense of Finnish anti-aircraft batteries and fighting planes.

The communiqué also said that on the eastern frontier Finnish troops repelled enemy attacks at Aittajoki, and that yesterday they had destroyed on various fronts 12 Red army tanks and three armored cars.

HOOK-UP TO TELL OF FINNS' PLIGHT

An eyewitness account of conditions in Finland will be given in a trans-oceanic two-way broadcast between Herbert Hoover, in New York, and a representative in Helsinki, over a nation-wide CBS hook-up tonight at 6 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. (Atlanta time). Radio station WGST will be the local outlet.

This announcement was made in a telegram yesterday to P. S. Arkwright and Ryburn G. Clay, Georgia co-chairmen of the campaign, from New York headquarters of the Finnish Relief Fund drive.

Of Scandinavia weighed puzzling reports of Russia's military movements.

Russian bombs fell close to the United States legation in suburban Grankulla.

The Grankulla district, where many foreigners took up temporary residence after the Soviet invasion, was joined severely by the detouring bombs.

In Helsinki, two men and one woman were on a death list made public late tonight and 20 others, including nine women, were reported injured from the 40 bombs rained on the city by the raiders.

Threats by Radio. (A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch later said 13 persons were killed and 71 wounded in the air raids today. Five hundred bombs were reported dropped.)

When the sound of the raiding planes died away, Russian broadcasts, apparently emanating from Moscow, went on the air threatening Helsinki with complete destruction.

With today's raids, military observers drew the conclusion that the Soviet high command was seizing every opportunity in favorable bombing weather to strike terror into Finland's civilian population to offset failures on the war front.

High clouds which permitted bombers to disappear at will and dodge defensive fire made today perfect for their work.

Withdrawal Reported. Swedish and other Scandinavian correspondents in the field reported a partial withdrawal of Soviet troops from Linnahamari, the port of Finland's extreme North Petsamo district. Other Scandinavian reporters, however, told of preparations for a great Russian advance from the Salla district, 200 miles south of Petsamo but still in the Arctic Circle, with 40,000 men already massed for action, others coming up and

These reports came against the background of air raids and stories that loud speakers in front of Red army positions in the Karelian isthmus were blaring to opposing Finns: "Surrender within 48 hours or the Germans are coming."

Series of Alarms. Other cities hit in today's air raids included Hyvinkaa, railroad junction some 30 miles north of the capital.

The first raid came at 2 p. m. (6 a. m. Atlanta time), and for two hours there was an air raid alarm extending for 50 miles around the capital.

From a hill outside Helsinki I saw one flight of nine bombers roar in from a southwesterly direction. They were about 10,000 feet high.

Ten minutes later I saw nine bombers flying back south. Apparently it was the same squadron.

People Calm. A big cloud of smoke puffed up on the horizon where the bombers had been.

Passengers on a number of motor buses, which had been halted by air defense guards and ordered to the shelter of trees, got out and watched calmly as the two-motored bombers flew overhead.

Returning to the city, I found that most of the bombs had landed in the streets, making craters a yard deep.

Others landed in the water, merely breaking the thick ice.

In the southwestern part of the city, however, there was considerable damage by the incendiary bombs. At least six houses were ruined and one was burned. Hundreds of windows were broken. A church was badly damaged and one bomb landed 20 feet from a large hospital.

One foreign correspondent told me later that he saw a Soviet bomber blown to bits at 5,000 feet.

Three planes which dodged down to 2,500 feet were reported to have used their machine guns, dropping a number of 20-kilo bombs (about 44 pounds) and incendiary bombs at the same time.

Near one bombed house, I picked up a number of old coins of the Czarist period and a Russian knife and cigar lighter.

Apparently they had fallen from a plane.

Reds Charge 'Animal Fear'

MOSCOW, Jan. 13.—(P)—The Soviet Russian army command declared tonight that "animal fear" before the prospect of a military bloc between Germany and the U. S. S. R. had inspired what it described as foreign reports that German military instructors were reorganizing the Red army. It said the report was a "stupid, extraordinary lie."

It was also announced in the day that Russian planes had bombed "railway junctions and military objectives."

The long statement asserted that only 900 Russian soldiers had lost their lives in the Finnish campaign and these casualties were "due to the sudden cold which set in, rather than to the action of Finnish troops."

On the other hand, the war review issued by the Leningrad area military headquarters declared Finnish troops have lost not less

SISTER OF MORGAN HAS 'AWFUL TIME' WITH U. S. PARENTS

Friends of France Head Doesn't Know Why Mothers Don't Want Girls To Serve Abroad.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Miss Anne Morgan, president of the American Friends of France, says she is "having an awful time with American mothers who don't want their daughters to go to France."

"Frankly, I don't know why," said the spinster sister of J. P. Morgan, financier. "There is plenty of splendid work to be done there."

Miss Morgan arrived on the Italian liner Rex yesterday, wearing the natty uniform of her organization and ready, she said, to "fight it out with these mothers who are hampering our work."

"Mothers," she explained, "particularly American mothers!" Miss Morgan said she planned to organize committees of American girls to serve overseas with her organization, an outgrowth of the one which she headed during the World War.

The future of the hemp industry in this country, says the Department of Agriculture, seems to depend largely on developing varieties free from marihuana.

CANAL AND FORTS PROTECT BELGIUM

Three Lines of Defense Lessen Odds of Superior Attackers.

By The Associated Press. Belgians believe a German attempt to invade their little country will not meet with the success it did in 1914.

Military men say the Albert canal, the Liege fortification system and the defense works of the northeast will give the little Belgium army a chance to hold back the Nazi legions until help comes. Backbone of the defense is the canal which runs 75 miles from the Ardennes mountains to the sea at Antwerp. It is 250 feet wide and from 15 to 20 feet deep—a formidable water hazard.

Perfect Battle Ground.

The canal is said to answer the old infantry sergeant's rule for a perfect fight: "Clean out a clear field of fire and then blast hell out of the enemy."

The first line of defense is along the 35 miles of Belgium's common frontier with Germany. Fortresses at Eupen and Malmédy have been linked and extended by a system of trenches, block houses and reinforced concrete machine gun nests which would exact a heavy toll of attacking troops.

Behind this is a stronger line of fortifications fashioned after the French Maginot line and then comes the canal.

Belgium's army entrenched behind these fortifications might hold a superior invading army at bay for weeks, military experts say.

Weak In Air.

Chief weakness in the Belgian defense is the air—a weakness which proved disastrous for Poland. With only about 300 airplanes and virtually unprotected airfields, the Belgians would fall easy prey to Nazi air might.

However, the closeness of France and England would ensure the help of their combined air forces which would do much to offset this weakness.

Britain's sea strength is counted on to protect Belgium against an attack on the coast.

MOTHER COLLAPSES AT TROOPER'S TRIAL

'Why Did He Kill My Little Child,' Parent Screams; Case Goes to Jury.

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., Jan. 13.—(AP)—A mother's cries of "Why did he kill my little child?" rang out today at the trial of a suspended Pennsylvania trooper and brought a judicial rebuke and a warning to the jury which received the case shortly after.

The outburst came in the closing hours of the week-long trial of Corporal Benjamin Franklin, 30, charged with second degree murder and manslaughter in the shooting of 14-year-old Joan Stevens last June 5.

Franklin, a husky six-footer, pleads self-defense, saying he fired when the girl threatened him and Trooper Edward J. Swartz with a "gun" that "looked real," but turned out to be a toy. The shooting took place in a police car. The Town Gets Even With Roosevelt, Shifts Birthday

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 13. (UP)—The city of St. Augustine has settled a score with President Roosevelt.

If the President can change Thanksgiving Day, said the city officials, we'll change his birthday. And they did, setting Saturday, January 27, as the date for observance of Mr. Roosevelt's birthday party for infantile paralysis sufferers. The President's actual birth date is January 30.

Troopers were questioning her about a bank holdup "tip" they said she had volunteered.

Shortly after the three women and nine men jurors had examined the death car today, Mrs. Mayme Stevens collapsed in the courtroom and screamed:

"My poor child—oh, why did he do it? God says, 'Thou shalt not kill.' She didn't know any different. She was only 14." Franklin appeared unmoved. Two women jurors dabbed their eyes with handkerchiefs.

clared his ineligibility because of tradition against active army men taking office.

A soldier of the old school, General Shunroku Hata is among the Japanese who have advocated prosecution of the war in China until all "anti-Japanese resistance" is ended.

He was placed in command of Japanese forces in the Shanghai-Nanking area in February, 1938, and eight months later directed the final push which brought the fall of Hankow.

"Japan is prepared to fight any nation, not only the Soviet Union, when all other means have failed to protect her national rights and interests," General Hata once announced.

A graduate of the Japanese Military Academy, he is 61 years old and comes of a family long connected with the army.

Abe's resignation had been expected for several days, following predictions that his government would fall if the United States declined to react favorably to Japan's proposals for reopening the lower Yangtze to third power trade. This was considered as an overture to facilitate a new trade understanding with the United States when the present treaty is terminated—upon Washington's initiative—January 26.

The premier's resignation was handed to Emperor Hirohito during an audience at the imperial palace in mid-morning. The cabinet had met just previously to formulate its resignation.

Last night, General Abe saw Prince Konoye and urged him to become premier again.

of course, and she also felt that her absence might be construed as indifference to Atlanta's big celebration and lack of appreciation of the many fine things her home city has done for her.

Waiting Difficult. "At that time, it was expected that the premiere would be in September, and the doctors consented to the delay. Then the date of the premiere was moved up to October, to November and finally to December. The waiting was made more difficult for her by a severe attack of influenza in November, and at one time, early in December, we were very doubtful that she would be able to last it out. But she did, to her great satisfaction, and now after a vacation trip and rest ordered by the doctor, the operation has been performed.

"Her brief speech of thanks on the night of the premiere was very sincere, because she might have been denied the pleasure of sharing in that extraordinary event, if the people of Atlanta had not shown her such consideration and thoughtfulness during her illness. Both of us are very grateful."

Tickets to Birthday Dances To Go on Sale Tomorrow

Indications Point to Greatest Celebration in Drive To Raise Paralysis Funds; Allen Looks to Campaign Exceeding $16,500 Quota.

Sales of tickets to Fulton county's four public dances to be held in celebration of the President's birthday on January 30 will begin tomorrow under the most favorable auspices since the custom arose of using Mr. Roosevelt's birthday to raise funds for fighting infantile paralysis.

Organization of the Fulton county committee was completed last week by Ivan Allen Sr., county chairman, and committee members, ticket sellers and other workers are "rarin' to go."

Mr. Allen yesterday expressed satisfaction with the results of the organization meeting of his committee Friday night, and said that with the spirit shown at the session, the Fulton county drive should exceed the county quota of $16,500 net.

Mail Campaign.
Headquarters in Room 550 Henry Grady hotel under the direction of Bob Cobb was preparing for an intensive mail and personal solicitation campaign, with orders for several thousands of tickets already "in the bag." The Fulton committee was heartened by the news that H. T. Dobbs, executive director of the Georgia Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, had turned over to Mr. Allen $450 in checks donated by Atlantans even before the campaign warmed up.

War veterans will join the campaign this week, devoting their efforts to pushing the sales of buttons during Button Week, January 22-27. Under a call by Logan Kelly, of Buford, past state commander of American Legion, commanders of the fifth district Legion posts, will meet at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Henry Grady hotel.

Workers at the Georgia committee's headquarters yesterday were engaged in distributing thousands of infantile paralysis buttons over the state for Button Week sales. Small buttons will be sold to school children at 10 cents each, and large buttons will be sold on the streets at $1 each.

Outstanding Bands.
Plans for the Fulton county celebration on January 30 call for dances at the Henry Grady, Biltmore and Ansley hotels and at the Shrine Mosque. Nationally known orchestras are being engaged by Juddy Johnson, in charge of music, to play at the four dances. A number of interesting feature attractions will be presented, under the plans now being made.

Fulton county celebration officials said their plans call for the most brilliant celebration of the President's birthday ever staged in Atlanta. Tickets at $1 each will admit couples to all four public dances, but ticket stubs will be surrendered at each dance, so that while ticket purchasers may attend all four dances, once they have attended the first at a specific spot they cannot go back. This policy has been adopted to obviate confusion. Couples may spend the evening at any one dance, or may make the rounds of all four.

Private dances at several clubs are being planned to augment the Fulton county polo fund.

Georgia Gets Half.
Half of the funds raised in Georgia will remain in the state, to be expended by the Georgia chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis on care and treatment of cases in this state. The other half will be sent to the National Foundation to be used in research into the cause and prevention of infantile paralysis.

In Georgia last year, the state chapter aided 90 polio cases in more than 50 counties. Aid includes orthopedic treatment, braces and other devices to enable polio patients to regain their strength.

The John Marshall Law school yesterday announced its student body adopted resolutions pledging 100 per cent co-operation in the Fulton drive, and not only will contribute financially but will supply speakers to be used by the county headquarters. The student body appointed W. N. Eason, Ora Eads and Ted Cabok as speakers subject to call by the county headquarters.

WAR WATER COLORS WILL GO ON EXHIBIT

Painted by World War Company Commander Fighting in France.

Paintings of actual battlefronts in the World War will be exhibited at the High Museum of Art beginning tomorrow and continuing through January 30.

The series of water color paintings are by Stanley Wilson, of London. They were made while he was company commander in a Yorkshire regiment fighting in France.

The pictures were made during lulls in hostilities, rolled inside a newspaper and sent to London from the front-line trenches. A number have been preserved for permanent exhibition at the Imperial War Museum.

The most important of the group will be shown at the High Museum. They come from the Arthur U. Newton Galleries of New York.

At the same time it was announced that the "Three-County Art Exhibit," composed of works by artists in Fulton, DeKalb and Cobb counties, will open with a musical at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the museum. The musical will be sponsored by the music committee of the Studio Club of Atlanta. Mrs. William B. Elsas is chairman.

Hint to housewives: Stale eggs, sometimes thrown, are being sold by unlicensed peddlers in Georgia, the State Department of Agriculture advised yesterday.

CUTS PREDICTED IN GASOLINE PRICE

Transportation.

Reductions in the price of gasoline for southeastern consumers, as a result of pipe line transportation, was predicted yesterday by officials of the Southeastern Pipe Line Company, which has offices here.

The new firm, headed by A. Steve Clay, Atlanta attorney, is now constructing a 500-mile pipe line from Port St. Joe, Fla., to Chattanooga via Atlanta.

"Aside from economy, one of the chief advantages of gasoline pipe lines is increased safety," Mr. Clay said yesterday. "The line is the first in the southeast."

RICH'S BUDGET PLAN

Now everyone can have the beautifully furnished home they've been wanting! Not only people with restricted incomes but many with unlimited incomes, delight in Rich's Budget Plan. Cotton kings, filing clerks, bankers, grocers, architects, mechanics, engineers . . . all like their payments regulated this easy way. Recent additions to our Budget Plan customer list include a bank president, a prominent doctor and an advertising man who earns vast sums twixt breakfast and lunch. After all most people receive their incomes in regular amounts throughout the year. Plunking down several hundred dollars for furniture was a real strain on Mr. Snelling, and plunking down several thousand was a strain on Mr. Elliot. But budgeting these amounts over many months eliminated the strain in both cases.

Doing without and living in brave discomfort is no solution. Take the case of young Mr. and Mrs. Andrews. They bought nothing but "necessary furniture" when they started housekeeping and for a year their home was bleak. When Mrs. Andrews learned that she could buy all the "extras" and budget the lump sum for them, their house became a comfortable, charming home. The Andrews were so pleased with Rich's Budget Plan idea, that they've been telling all their friends about it. You, too, will find Rich's Budget Plan an easy way to completely furnish a home, "do over" a room, or get all the little "niceties" you've been wanting. Do come in and talk it over with our Credit Manager! There's no fuss, no formality. A brief, friendly chat opens a Budget Account for you . . . with terms to suit your individual income!

Have the home you've always wanted! You can afford it at

RICH'S

"What is Rich's Budget Plan?"

It's a simple business-like method of extending your credit, so that you don't have to pay for everything on the nail. You make a small initial payment, and the balance is arranged on weekly or monthly payments that are easy for YOU to meet. Incidentally, a Rich Budget Account establishes your credit and is a "grand" reference.

"Can we budget anything but furniture?"

Oh yes, you can budget a great many other things. Practically everything that goes into furnishing a house . . . floor coverings, furniture, curtains, draperies, china, glassware, radios, refrigerators, ranges, pianos . . . yes, just about EVERYTHING from fine antiques to handy gadgets.

"Can we trade-in our old furniture?"

Don't live with out-moded furnishings when you can trade them in on new furnishings and make your home charmingly livable again! Rich's appraiser will call at your home at your convenience to estimate the value of your things. You can apply the "estimated" sum as so much cash on the purchase of new furniture and new rugs. No charge or obligation for appraisal.

"Tell us about your decorating service"

Our staff of decorators will be glad to help you choose the coverings for a chair or the furnishings for a home. If you are furnishing for the first time, bring your floor plan. And, whether your income is limited or unlimited, they'll show you how to get the BEST results! Come in, talk over your problems, this decorating service is free!

FULTON PRIMARY MAY TAKE PLACE IN APRIL OR MAY

Courthouse Rally Tuesday To Decide If School Bond Issue Will Be Voted on With Candidates.

Indications were yesterday the date for Fulton county's primary will be set in April or May to facilitate passage of a proposed $750,000 county school bond issue for improvement of the physical plants. A public hearing on the primary date will be held Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock at the courthouse by a special committee of the county Democratic executive committee, Hughes Spalding, chairman of the executive committee's special committee, said.

P. T. A. Supports Plan.
Fulton Parent-Teacher organizations have rallied to the primary date, which is characterized as a "compromise" in order to help the school bonds, despite an attack on an early primary by Mrs. J. D. Thomas, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, who holds that the issue of an early or late primary was settled by a referendum several years ago, and any attempt to set a primary for spring months would be a breach of faith.

Spalding has announced that the public is invited to attend the hearings and that they will be continued long enough to give all parties interested the right to express their views.

After the hearing, the subcommittee will file its recommendations with the entire executive committee, headed by W. Stokely Northcutt, chairman.

More Voters Available.
County officers will be nominated in the primary, and proponents of the bond issue believe a larger vote can be obtained because of more general interest in the election if county officers are before the electorate than if bonds were offered alone.

Under the Georgia law, two-thirds of those voting on a bond issue must vote for bonds, and those voting for the bonds must constitute a majority of those on the registration list. This last clause makes it extremely difficult to pass bonds and was said to have been responsible for the defeat of the recent joint city-county bond issue for various public improvements.

Other members of the subcommittee which will hold the hearing in addition to Chairman Spalding are D. B. Gullatt, Mac Eulen, Jesse F. Monroe, W. Hugh Barnett, W. W. Warren and F. F. Allen.

While no member of the subcommittee would express any preference prior to Tuesday's hearing observers expressed the belief that the "compromise" date would be "generally" acceptable.

ROOSEVELT GIVEN HISTORIC LETTER Message From Burr Refers to Mortgage Suit.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—From an "amateur collector" of historic documents, President Roosevelt received his Hyde Park, N. Y., library today a letter bearing on a mortgage suit by Nicholas Roosevelt, the President's great uncle, against Aaron Burr.

The letter, written in March, 1826, was brought to the White House by Alden S. Condit, member of the New York real estate board, and his 13-year-old daughter, Avis.

It was signed by N. B. Doe, Albany lawyer, and notified Nicholas Roosevelt, whom he represented, that Burr was asking for a second continuance of the mortgage litigation. Burr, vice president from 1801-05, was a New York attorney at the time the letter was written.

TRAVEL AMERICAS, ROOSEVELT URGES

of Western World.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, noting that the "European war would 'deter travel' by American citizens to beleaguered areas, today proclaimed 1940 "travel America year" and asked the American people to do their vacationing in western hemisphere nations.

This, he said, would "further consolidate our unity" by promoting better knowledge of "our own and each other's countries."

"Whereas the exigencies of international conflict may be expected to deter travel by American citizens to the areas involved, and

"Whereas it is important that we in the Americas further consolidate our unity by a better knowledge of our own and each other's countries through the instrumentality of travel, and

"Whereas the facilities of the government of the United States may well be devoted to the encouragement of so laudable a program now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do proclaim 1940 as travel America year and do invite our own citizens, and friends from other lands, to join in a great travel movement, so that our peoples may be drawn even more closely together in sympathy and understanding."

Gateless Fence Problem Solved By WPA Crew

BENNETTSVILLE, S. C., Jan. 13.—(UP)—A crew of WPA laborers worked hard all day erecting a high wire fence around the municipal tennis courts here. They finished the job about quitting time and as the crew prepared to leave, they discovered:

No one had built a gate in the fence.

SPANISH RELIEF UNIT DENIES DIES CHARGE

Refugee-Aid Group Was Accused of Being 'Communist Front' Organization.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Officers of the Spanish relief unit replying to a statement to the effect that it is a "front organization of the Communist party" said that the campaign is purely a relief organization, unconnected "directly or indirectly" with any form of politics.

The statement was signed by Bishop Francis J. McConnell, chairman; Philip Merivale, vice chairman; Mrs. Caspar Whitney, vice chairman; and Dr. Guy Emery Shipley, treasurer.

The organization's files, the statement said, contain nothing that provides any ground for the Dies Committee conclusion, the committee never examined the organization's records, and no representative of the organization was permitted to testify before the committee concerning it. The committee, it said, "has been guilty of all rules of evidence and of the most elementary considerations of justice."

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNIT ATTACKS DIES WORK
NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP)—The American Civil Liberties Unit tonight recommended the discontinuance of the Dies Congressional Committee's investigation of "un-American activities" and described the committee's methods as "biased and colored by the political, social and economic views of its chairman and some of its members."

The union, in a 5,000-word review of the committee's work, urged that any future investigation be conducted by a non-political commission or by the senate and house jointly.

ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 14, 1940.

County Primary Date

Two years ago, on March 2, 1938, the people of Fulton county voted in a referendum on the issue of early or late primaries for county elections. The late primary plan won with 12,603 votes, against only 7,332 for the early primary.

That expression of the will of the people should have settled the issue, once and for all. However, public hearings on the setting of the date for the primary this year have been called, before a subcommittee of the Fulton County Democratic Executive Committee, to begin next Tuesday.

Various arguments, all based upon the specious contention that 1940, for one reason or another, offers unusual conditions, have been advanced in favor of an early primary, again, this year. There is a movement on foot to hold the primary in March, as it has been in recent years.

The disadvantages to the cause of good government and to the best interests of the general citizenship in an early primary are plain.

Primary results in Georgia are, as everyone knows, tantamount to election. Thus if an incumbent in office, seeking re-election, is defeated in a March primary, it means he is a "lame duck" official, responsible to no one, for the following nine months. Knowing his tenure of office ends with the year, he feels his actions are no longer amenable to public opinion. Which is, per se, an extremely dangerous state of affairs.

Professional politicians who, with their coteries of friends, families, dependents, job holders, job seekers and general hangers-on can usually count on a fair-sized solid block of voters, much prefer the early primary. For it always tends to keep these professionals in office. It is held so far in advance of the change in administration it is difficult for the average voter to work up much interest, hence he is apt to stay away from the polls in large numbers. Issues have not had time to be understood by the average man or woman and the voting, therefore, is apt to turn upon personalities. Professional politicians are always expert at "smearing" when it comes to rival personalities.

With no clear issues, with a comparatively light vote, an early primary gives the professional politician the best possible opportunity to swing the election his way with the above-mentioned solid block of interested voters.

Thus it has become axiomatic in practical politics that an early primary, or election, is to the advantage of the machine or faction in power and, conversely, disadvantageous to the citizens as a whole.

It is being argued in Fulton county, however, that the early primary is desirable this year in order to avoid a too-lengthy and confusing ballot if it should be combined with the state primary on the second Wednesday in September. Others contend that, by holding it in March, on the same date as the Fulton school bond election, it would tend to bring out more voters for that proposal.

All these arguments may be, basically, true. They may have merit. Nevertheless it is plain, from the long view, the sooner we get rid of the early primary the better. The voice of the people, in the March, 1938, referendum, spoke emphatically on the issue. The county committee may not be legally bound by this expression of public desires, but morally it is, most surely.

Argument to the contrary amounts only to quibbling. The people have spoken for a late primary. The voice of the people, in a democracy, should decide.

It is hereby conceded that a college youth organization which refuses to consider Russia the aggressor in Finland is young.

The Reds' showing in the Finnish wilds need become only a little sadder to be made up into a daytime radio serial.

Who now remembers when big Russia was putting on a great show of fearing Finland, for a gag?

When last seen, the matter of cutting expenses had been tossed to congress. This looks like the beginning of another of those fast double plays, in which economy is out.

Footnotes on War

The course of history is a mosaic of separate incidents, apparently unrelated forces and their consequent events, which ultimately fit into the pattern and complete today's segment of the measureless highway which leads into the future.

It is impossible to gain, for instance, a complete picture of the war in Europe, its present status and its probable future course. There are too many contributory factors, too many widely scattered forces, too much unrevealed evidence, to make the pattern clear. Historians of the morrow may be able to sort and to reject, to uncover things now hidden and to chart, after the event, the precarious course along which the world and civilization moves. We of today, though, are too close to today to separate the significant from the unimportant. Or to guess the final world picture which is slowly forming before our eyes.

Today, in allied and neutral nations, there appear to be but two broad avenues of war strategy open to Hitler. But none can guess which one of the two he will choose. One calls for a major offensive in the west this spring. The other calls for concentration of effort in north and southeast Europe, with the hope of gaining control of Rumanian oil before launching the big attacks against France and Britain.

From Switzerland comes a private report that it is the opinion there that Germany cannot keep up its present state of extreme mobilization for more than another six months. Hence they look for a major offensive, or a genuine peace move, by Hitler in the spring.

Some factions in France, it is stated, are advocating immediate war with Russia. They argue that capture of Murnansk and Leningrad would mean the end of the Stalin regime and complete rupture between Russia and Germany. This, they contend, is the quickest and surest way to win, and end, the war.

From Finland comes a report that Russian troops are so poorly handled by their officers that, whether they would or no, the Finns cannot help but strike down the Soviet forces like helpless sheep driven to slaughter. The Russians move to the front in masses and are simply mowed down, like ripe grain, by artillery.

It is reported that the Allies, France and Britain, have not yet reached air parity with Germany. Hence, it is said, extreme eagerness to speed delivery of planes from the United States.

A well-known authority compares British and German plane production to the output of automobile plants such as Rolls-Royce and Ford. The British planes are, compared to the German, as Rolls-Royce machines. Magnificently made, of long life and far superior in every way to the German. But the Germans turn theirs out much faster and, if they are but Fords of the air, nevertheless they are capable of inflicting much damage in the role of shock troops.

French designed planes are not so good. The best planes made in France are Curtiss machines, built under license permission from America. Yet, even the poorer French planes, it is said, are reputed superior to the German Messerschmitt.

And, a late date revelation: At one time during the attack on Poland, it is now stated, virtually the whole of the German mechanized army was immobilized by lack of gasoline.

Gasoline may well be the deciding factor in the war. For, without motor fuel, no units of modern mechanized warfare can operate. Planes can't fly, tanks can't move, transport trucks are stalled and mobile guns are helpless.

The winner of the war may yet be the side with most gasoline in the national tank.

Although, if sufficient and proper aid is rapidly forthcoming, the Finns may yet prove to be the chosen people to smash the keystone in the arch of the dictatorships.

Among late calendar novelties—along with the double-feature Thanksgiving—is the blue Tuesday, after the Monday holiday.

When Man Fails

The Bartley mine explosion illustrates again the frailty of human devices against the forces of nature. Every precaution human ingenuity can devise had been utilized to protect the lives of the miners against the dread chances of their livelihood. Yet death struck without warning, killing more than half of those who labored to bring the riches of Mother Earth to the surface.

The loss of life is tragic, because of the tremendous waste of human ability and because of the stark horror it brings to the families of the victims. Yet such tragedies must be expected as long as man seeks to wrest from the earth her bounties. Every ingenuity of man has been turned to the problem of making life in the long tunnels of coal mines as safe as possible. Yet every so often there must be, it seems, an inexplicable failure, and the price of that failure must be death.

If it were to be shown that the negligence either of the owners or of their employees is responsible, then punishment should be swift and severe. But from all accounts, every safety measure possible had been taken, the mine was regarded as one of the most modern and safe in the nation, and the terrific explosion was the result of a combination of circumstances which man cannot combat.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA Friday night at Athens I sat in the darkness of a moving picture theater and watched a picture unfold.

The acting was by an amateur cast of faculty men and students of the University of Georgia, by high school boys and girls and by some adults and young people not connected with the university.

The verdict of any critic, viewing it critically, would be "corny." Yet, I rather imagine it will have an influence greater than that of any moving picture which rural Georgia will see even though the others be portrayed by Hollywood actors and actresses of ability.

The picture is about a plot which has as its central theme the activities of a teacher of vocational agriculture and a chapter of the Future Farmers of America.

It has as its theme a paragraph from a speech which Henry W. Grady made at Dallas in the spring of 1888. He said:

"When every farmer in the south shall eat bread from his own fields and meat from his own pastures, and disturbed by no creditor and enslaved by no debt, shall sit amid his teeming gardens and orchards, and vineyards, and dairies, and barnyards, pitching his crops in his own wisdom, and growing them in independence, making cotton his clean surplus, and selling it in his own time, and in his own chosen market, and not at a master's bidding—getting his pay in cash and not in a receipted mortgage that discharges his debt but does not restore his freedom—then shall be breaking the fullness of our day."

So said Grady in 1888. Today the farm leaders attack the problem of the unpainted, fading farm house in the cotton fields with a few hens, perhaps, and one lone goat, perhaps, and no garden to be seen about it. The Future Farmers hold the most hope for that future.

HOW DID IT HAPPEN? One might well ask how it happened that farming came to be a profession lacking in prestige and attractiveness?

There is, of course, the obvious answer. Industrialization came. Cities grew to great size. And, particularly in the south, education left the rural sections. Indeed, if not yet has come back.

Electricity came to the cities. The load of human toil was lessened by water taps, by electric switches, by all the accessories of comfort. The farms, as a rule, knew them not. Only today is electricity finding its way, through government spending, to reach the isolated rural sections.

These were some of the reasons.

Then, too, the world economy ceased to be an expendable economy.

Markets failed.

All these things contributed.

Yet, they cannot be the real answer.

FAILURE TO MEET CHANGES Why was there a failure to meet the changes in economy and markets?

It seems to me, merely as an observer and not economist, the answer is obvious. It is a twin answer.

Education left the farm. Or rather was not available.

As education left the farmer and his profession lost prestige; ceased to hold the position in public affairs and in his local community which once he held.

The Future Farmers of America take their name from the fact that in Virginia a man began to think back that Washington and Jefferson both were farmers and both were members of the F. F. V. "First Families of Virginia." There were many others like them. "Why," said Founder Groseclose, "that also means 'First Farmers of Virginia.'"

It became a national organization and it holds much of the hope for the future.

"THE WOOL HAT BOYS" There are, of course, many well-known farmers of intelligence and standing.

But the demagogic politician; the organizers of crack-pot schemes, thrives best and does his worst with—

"The Wool Hat Boys."

The "Wool Hat Boys" are, as the politician who courts them knows, almost invariably poorly-stricken, illiterate or at least semi-illiterate today. They are a product of an educational era in Georgia when there were pitifully few schools of the grammar grades and even fewer of high school grades.

The average tenant or sharecropper farmer is, through no fault of his own, unprepared to face the problems which daily are his lot. This has been true for several generations.

They are not able to rationalize themselves with the world about them, even their own small, local world.

So, the Future Farmers, trained young men with experience of work combined with theory in practice, are a large part of the future. If they become, as their leaders and teachers believe they will, men who will know how to care for the soil, how to produce their own gardens and all or most of their own food and at the same time a few cash crops, then the future is brighter.

This picture which had its premiere at Athens may become one of the greatest inspirational pictures we have had for rural Georgia.

Here Is a Story
Provoking Thought.

Perhaps the story has already been published in the news columns of the local papers. If it is, I never, I must say, I read it in The Christian Science Monitor, of Boston.

Whether or not it saw the light of publication in Atlanta, some of you undoubtedly haven't read it. So, because of its value in thought-provocation, whether it is true or propaganda, it is worth retelling here.

The paragraphs which tell this story follow. They were written by a staff correspondent of the Boston paper and cabled from London.

"Finland's few bomber airplanes," it begins, "have been shot down over Leningrad. It is now disclosed. But they have not dropped bombs."

"Instead they have scattered many thousands of vest pocket New Testaments in Russian over city streets."

"Finns say that Bibles are better than leaflets and much superior to bombs."

"On land the Finns also are managing to deliver Bibles to the Russians who live under a regime where religion and scripture are banned."

"It is stated that many Bibles are mysteriously finding their way into advance Russian posts. The Finns do not believe Joseph Stalin can have succeeded in forcefully driving from Russian life the conviction that Bibles are better than leaflets and much superior to bombs."

USING GOD. There is no merit in being religious. Every man is religious in his own way. It is well to face the truth that nothing can express one's self more completely than his religion. It depends upon his attitude toward God, whether he would serve Him or use Him for his own selfish purposes. No matter what name he would call God—whether Jehovah or Baal—if he tries to employ God to serve his plans and purposes, paying Him in sacrifice or prayer, in grain or incense, he is degrading religion into self-service. There are many people, it is fair to say, who are doing this unconsciously.

We hear such people giving their "religious experience" to the benefit of the cause which God has bestowed them. They actually limit the radius of the providences of the divine, by the circle of their wants and wishes. They rest their faith upon the number of their prayers, which means the number of requisitions they have made upon the divine treasury. Unconsciously, I grant, their "religious experiences" reveal their attitude toward God. However, which they can use for the furtherance of their plans and purposes. Thus God becomes a participant in their petty prejudices, and is always on their side, because they are prompt in paying Him a religious revenue. Such a God is inevitably limited to the size of the personal worshiper. He is literally a god made in the image of the man.

Religious Selfishness. When one worships a god of private and personal interests, and whose providence is limited to the interests of the individual, an alien force, which shatters his plans and disappoints his hopes, will wreck his faith. If the power and wisdom of God are to be tested by the narrow ambitions and purposes of the individual, there must come rude shocks to one's faith, when forces enter into one's life which interfere with these personal interests. In its last analysis, the fundamental error in making one's self the center of his universe. When one's religion depends upon how well he is served by his god, he is apt to flee from altar to altar, and from temple to temple, in obedience to the strongest force which enters into his immediate experience.

This is the significance of the fickle flight of many people from cult to cult, looking for a "practical religion," a religion of "results." The experience meetings tell of these "results," and the list of things which they have "gotten" out of their religion. It is for this same reason that men bow down to "mammon." The purchasing power of money is overwhelming and irresistible, that sentiments, ideals, truth and love go down before its onrushing force. This whole conception of religion—one measured by what you get, and the results which it demands—results which can be weighed and measured, indulged in and wallowed in.

The God of Jesus. Now the God whom Jesus revealed is not one who is to be served by the individual, but one who is to be served by all men, because He is the Father of all men. Faith in Him is a faith that the welfare of each one is included in the welfare of all. Such a faith lifts the horizon of the soul of an individual or a nation. In revealing a greater God, such a religion reveals a greater universe. It bids the little soul match its ambitions with the plans for a world, as it enlarges his sympathies to include the welfare of a race.

It broadens the petty politics of a nation, which would move within the limited realm of its own revenue, and makes it big with blessings for the other nations of the world. That narrow-minded diplomacy which would shape the plans of a whole nation to conform to the commercial advantage of some national industry, it makes large with a message of liberty and hope for the backward peoples of the earth. Such a religion will make this nation refuse to turn its back upon its faith in the divine blessings of democracy. So I have heard Mr. Roosevelt say, "The priceless possession of liberty and the rights of the individual—to bow down before any form of centralized tyranny of force."

This religion which Jesus revealed is a faith in a God who is God of all the nations, and whose plans include the welfare of the least of all the children of men. Whose providences are not the private privileges of a fickle ruler, granted to the few at the expense of the many. And the wonderful invitation of Jesus to each one of us is to become "co-workers together with Him," that we may also be a blessing to all the world.

Heads or Tails?

Sam and I were comfortable in the new streamlined "Twentieth Century."

"What the hell! Let's spend another $10 and go swell. We ain't got nothing to lose anyhow, because expenses is deductible," Sam said sagely.

So we travelled swell and seated behind our cigars and magazines, we prepared for a long trip to the coast. Sam looked at pictures and I tried a bit of serious reading, but my heart was not in it. I could not tear myself away from thoughts of Finland and smearing columnists and political liars and the next congress. Sam, on the other hand, was laughing to himself. He was not at all having a great time with himself.

"Sam," I said, "if it's funny, don't keep it. Maybe it's one of those 'Confucius said,' stories that's going the rounds?"

"No," Sam replied, "it ain't nothing like that. I was just thinking about a woman I met at a New Year's Eve party who gave me an eyepiece on account of why rich people like Myron Taylor fell for the CIO. Mrs. Millstone, I says to her, 'how come you think like you do when you've been loaded down with rocks since you was born with a golden spoon in your mouth?'"

WHERE WAS REVOLUTION? "Why," she says, "don't you really think that Roosevelt saved us from a revolution?"

"Where was this revolution?" I asked.

"Why," she says, "didn't he put an end to the revolution by closing the banks?"

"Listen, Mrs. Millstone," say I, "I heard of saving a revolution by closing banks, but I never heard stopping one that way."

"Well," she says, "anyhow by his liberal program he saved American business; also the capitalist system; also democracy."

"So I said to Mrs. Millstone, straight in the eye and saw she wasn't kidding. No, Sok, this woman of the diamond circle of the opera house, who can write checks that if you and I was to try and cash them, we'd be held for large sums of money."

Somebody told her that Roosevelt saved this country from revolution by handing over business to the CIO and the rest of the money to some guys who think they're the princes in a fairy tale."

LIVE FOR THE RICH "I'm not surprised at that Sam," I replied. "I've heard that argument often. It's the New Deal line for the rich. They say just the opposite to the young fellows in the Students' Union."

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Dismissal of Hore-Belisha.

The reasons for the dismissal of Leslie Hore-Belisha as British minister of war are still obscure. Perhaps they will remain so for some time. One can only speculate about them. But several things must be taken into account.

Mr. Hore-Belisha is not an endearing personality to those who come into regular contact with him. He is startlingly brilliant intellectually, and that is a quality that is usually suspect in Great Britain. If one has it, one should, it seems, keep it as carefully concealed as possible. Mr. Hore-Belisha, who has degrees from half a dozen universities, more or less, including Heidelberg and the Sorbonne, is a classical scholar who reads Latin and Greek daily. That, at least, is his reputation. He is arrogant about his intellectual prowess and that does not help, particularly in dealing with army men. In the house of commons he was always known as the best master of the ironic jibe in that body of effective talkers. But the ironic jibe does not increase one's popularity in council meetings.

He is terrifically ambitious; his idol is Disraeli, for whose day-to-day life he can account, even to the size of his shoes. And he has the reputation of being a master of intrigue.

He was a wonder-child—a major in the army, during the last war, and a member of the house of commons at 25. He is given to the spectacular—he once slapped a critic's face in public and made the nation ring with it. And he is a Jew, which neither in England nor anywhere else is an advantage.

THE SANDS AFFAIR

Mr. Hore-Belisha has also been under fire in the past for various matters—for instance, in the Sands affair. Duncan Sands, a member of the house of commons and a son-in-law of Winston Churchill, charged, in the summer of 1938, that the air defenses of Britain were in a seriously inadequate condition. Mr. Hore-Belisha threatened his investigation by a military court, and Sands charged that the attorney general had threatened to use the official secrets act to gag him. At this time the house of commons took the side of Mr. Sands, and Hore-Belisha was reprimanded.

It is difficult, furthermore, to see why the Nazis should find any cause for rejoicing in the dismissal of Mr. Hore-Belisha, except, of course, for propaganda reasons. They are doing their best to exploit it as a welcome evidence of Nazi tendencies in Great Britain. But it would seem likely to indicate a more vigorous prosecution of the war, rather than the opposite.

There are several viewpoints in England regarding this matter of the prosecution of the war. There still a considerable "appeasement" bloc, whose program is to hold the British hand, count that Hitler will be overthrown by Goering—who might, they think, renounce all claims to further "Lebensraum," restore old frontiers and liberties, enter into economic agreements with Britain and France, and, in short, establish a conservative rule under the army or a restored monarchy. This group also hopes for a possible defection of the German war spirit under Goering, into a crusade against Bolshevism.

OPPOSITE BELIEF

At the other pole are those who believe that the issue, having been conjoined, a swift and vigorous prosecution of the war is the best policy and will bring about an end to the war. They believe in money—in the long run—hold the morale of the country and make possible the reorganization of Europe along lines compatible with freedom, order and co-operation. They argue that Hitler can better stand the "permanent war" than the Allies; that unless he is forced to use up vast amounts of materials in active warfare, he can keep the country together and behind him; that the only thing that will break down the Nazi regime will be serious defeats, and that Hitler is holding his followers because the German people believe that Britain and France have no stomach for the war.

In the center is the group who believe that Britain and France should wait; that time is on their side; that the blockade is working; that Russia's aims are in doubt, and that she may yet come to blows with Germany in Scandinavia or Finland.

PROPOSER OF DEFENSE

Mr. Hore-Belisha is known to have leaned toward this latter viewpoint. He is an exponent of the ideas of Captain Liddell-Hart who, until a few weeks ago, was the military expert of the London Times and whose book, "The Defense of Britain," has been said to have been written at the instigation of the war minister.

Captain Liddell-Hart believes that the defense has a great advantage over the attack, that the chief risk of losing a war lies in trying to win it by the mirage of a decisive victory, and that the most effective modern warfare is a sort of superguerrilla war.

He questions the wisdom of sending large expeditionary forces to the continent, and holds that the object of the war should not be to conquer the enemy, but to prove to him that he cannot conquer, either. To what extent these have been Mr. Hore-Belisha's views, this column does not pretend to know, but he was certainly very closely in touch with Captain Liddell-Hart. And the soundness of such views would also depend upon what the Nazis may, in the opinion of the British intelligence department, be planning to do. If, as Lord Lothian seemed to predict in his Chicago speech, the Nazis themselves are planning a terrific offensive in the spring, the defense plans of Britain might well take a different turn.

Nor is it possible to see in Mr. Hore-Belisha's dismissal so simple an explanation as that the "generals" have won over the civilians. Winston Churchill is certainly a civilian, and as brilliant an intellectual as Mr. Hore-Belisha. His star, however, has been in the ascendancy ever since the masterly defeat of the Graf Spee. And Mr. Churchill is an activist.

MORE ACTIVE WAR LOOMS

It would seem, therefore, to this column that the dismissal of Mr.

Representation Should Be Equal

Editor Constitution: For the purpose of having equality of representation in the national congress at Washington, all states are divided into congressional districts of equal population for the election of each member of congress. There are 10 such districts in Georgia defined for that purpose having equal population. If the representation in the state government was based on equal number of representatives in the state legislature from each congressional district, there would be equality of representation in the state government from all parts of Georgia. Political equality representation is not practiced and is not allowed in this state. For example, the third district of Georgia is composed of 24 small counties of small population, of small area each, and small amounts of state taxes paid toward all expenditures of the state government. This third district has 48 members in the state legislature, while the first district has only 12 members. The cost to the state government of the mileage travel expense of its members and service fees paid its 48 members makes the third district the most costly to the state as well as being the one which pays the least state taxes.

The great variation in the population of Georgia counties as well as the small size of many of them makes it impossible for the state government to have adequate revenue for many necessary and important state departments. There is no state in the Union which has as large a number of small counties of small population, taxing the state to the state government as are found in Georgia's third congressional district. There are other districts of the state nearly as full of small counties as the third district. The effect of over-representation of small numbers of people into small counties makes the state permanently on the edge of bankruptcy. If there were 20 members in the state legislature from each district without regard to the number of counties the people have formed in their district there would always be 200 members in the state legislature that would give equality of representation from all parts of the state.

ROSE HUBNER MCGUIRE.

Hore-Belisha can only indicate the expectation that the war, very soon, is to pass into a much more active phase, in which greater unity of command will be essential. Mr. Hore-Belisha has, perhaps, fulfilled his function. He has greatly modernized the army. He has gotten rid of a great deal of dead wood. He has assured the British troops of better living conditions than any army has ever enjoyed in any history.

Even the generals, with whom he is supposed to be at loggerheads, are his own choice. His boldest move, after he was appointed war secretary, was in December, 1937, when he secured the retirement of Sir J. J. Dorell, chief of staff, together with many other members of the general staff, and replaced them in defiance of seniority by men a decade younger. He himself appointed General Viscount Gort to his exalted position.

As I Was Saying

By DANIEL WHITEHEAD HICKY.

Street Scene: Port Said

"In Cairo," they were saying, "Madera . . . Londontown . . . Around the Horn to Rio . . . I watched them with a frown, A dozen salty sailors. Their eyes a-squint, their shoulders stooped, And pausing there I heard The names they spoke in whispers: Rosita . . . Anna . . . Pearl . . . And not a port they conjured up But held a star-eyed girl.

A dozen salty sailors With lies upon their lips, A dozen merry sailors Swaying like their ships!

"In Singapore . . . In Baghdad . . . In Venice, in Marseilles, The names they spoke were music, Their tongues were flying spray, The gin was in their bellies, The gin was in their eyes, And deep into the night they talked, Enlarging on their lies. The bar was filled with clouds of smoke That morning, like a tide; When morning came it had to wait Impatiently outside!

A dozen salty sailors With lies upon their lips, A dozen merry sailors Swaying like their ships!

Port Said, at the mouth of the Suez Canal, and the harbor gateway to Egypt, has long been known as "The City of Illusion."—"The Port of Missing Men"—"Most wicked spot on the face of the globe." There have been many lurid tales about it; men are supposed never to come out whole again; it was a hot-bed of wickedness and vice. Port Said always got its men broke them; even the strongest were as clay in the sinister fingers of the dark harbor. Or so the stories went. So, naturally, it was with great curiosity and interest that I noted on my ship's itinerary that we were to drop anchor next morning off Port Said. But I was disinterested little wren, here and there, an hour and a half in port, before the train journey to Cairo, 100 miles distant, began. That was not much time to see "the world's most wicked spot." Anyway, I o'clock in the morning isn't a time to see any wickedness, here and there, in and vice simply don't run hand in hand along any harbor street at that hour! Somehow, I felt I had been cheated. But I would see what was going on, nevertheless.

As my tender approached the harbor town, I saw, fronting the sea, a long row of buildings, similar to those one might find in any harbor. They appeared to be all of about the same vintage, quite old, many of them disheveled-looking. As I wandered along the little town, bars and liquor stores seemed to predominate, although there was a scatter of wholesale houses handling dry goods, groceries and other staple products. Occasionally above the stores I could hear the raucous whine of the motor, and there a faint wheeze that might have been a radio struggling for a distant station.

WEARY-EYED BAR KEEPERS

I looked into several bars. All the bar-keepers seemed a bit weary-eyed, nodding about their vests spattered with remnants of a festive evening. In one I heard a faint, low laugh, swinging the door, I entered, to see a group of the saltiest sailors I ever looked upon, swaying before the bar in unison, their lifted glasses glittering in the morning sunlight pouring through the windows and the slatted door. They were laughing and that girl in a score of ports. They were speaking in Swedish, German and Italian; two of them in Greek. But they seemed to understand each other, or pretended so. And at the end of each story they would lift their glasses again, as though each was familiar with the harbor mentioned, or the girl whose praises were being sung. The sea men might easily have stepped from the salty pages of Conrad, or of Melville, for the sea was in their eyes, their laughter, the flash of their eyes.

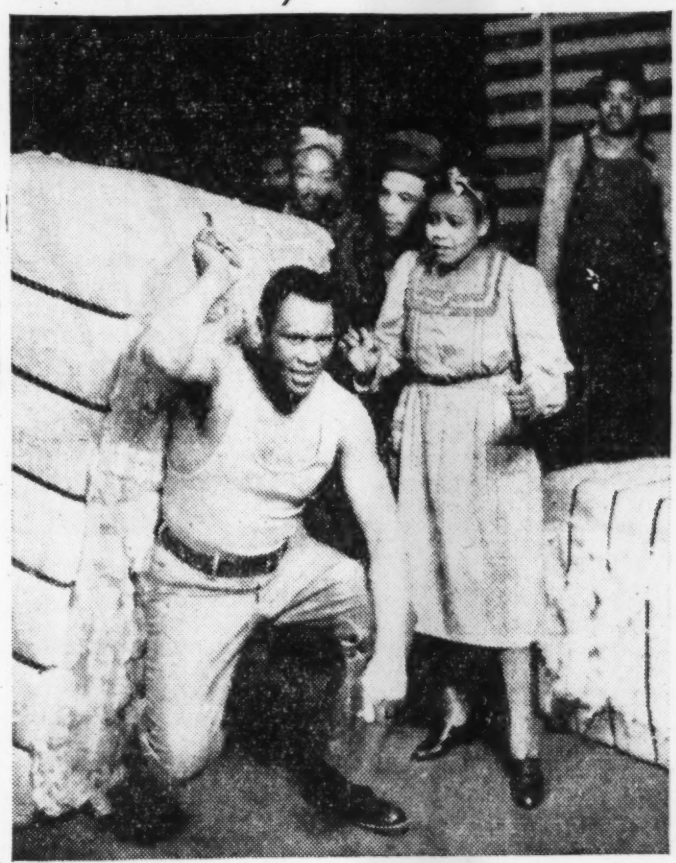

Turning back, I walked a block or two further up the harbor front. A dusky hand thrust from a doorway, offering me, in fairly good English, an abundance of frames per second. They would exchange with a lot of French money which it was difficult to dispose of in Port Said, and as I continued down the street, paying no attention to his bargaining, he assured me he was offering two francs for every one I could exchange for him. I took a French coin. But, fearing to enter into a trade with him, I went on, nodding my head. Whether he was disposing of some "hot money," or was really a distressed merchant, I never knew.

SEEMED LAWFUL

Soon I saw the American Express attendant running about the streets, endeavoring to round up all the passengers for the Cairo train, about to depart. Reluctantly I joined them, and my small group, I had seen no sin, no vice, no opium dens; there wasn't a single blotch of blood on the streets; none dried in the corners of the gutters. I had found no dagger, still wet, along the sidewalks, had heard no piercing shrieks, no cries of "Help! Help!" I had seen no one being dragged down a dusty stairway. I saw no young girl swinging by her hair from a shuttered window. Everything seemed lawful, peaceful; the doorways were merely opened for business, as usual. But, remembered, I would be back from Cairo in another week; perhaps the schedule would allow more time in Port Said; perhaps, even, we would arrive at dusk, and not sail until midnight. Maybe Port Said would be in full swing then. Perhaps I hadn't been cheated, after all.

As the train chugged toward Cairo, I looked out of the window.

'John Henry' Totes a Bale

Sad, But True: Negro Folk Songs Bow to Jazz

By TOM SANCTON.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 13.—(AP)—Railroad Bill was the worst old coon and he shot McMillan by the light of the moon.

The old-time negroes thought it was worth the telling so they make up a song and some of them still sing it.

Cross-eyed Sally caught their fancy, too.

She was a big gal with liver lips and kidney feet, so black you could mark her white with charcoal, so cross-eyed the tears ran down her back.

They sing about Bad Stagolee who shot old Billy Lyon, the gambler, with his smokeless forty-one. "Chief Maloney touch Stack on de shoulder, and say 'Stack, why don't you run?'"

"I don't run, white folks, when I got my forty-one!" "De judge he wrote Stack guilty, de clerk he found it down, next cold winter mornin' Stack was Angola bound."

VANISHING AMERICAN

But the old-fashioned southern negro who sang these tales of his heroes and bad men is the actual vanishing American, in the opinion of many of the writers on the folklore of this country.

Radio, highways, industrialization—all have beaten away his isolation and brought him jazz and blues and June-moon hits to sing in place of his old ring-shouts and "ballads."

One writer finds that this tendency to uproot "everything African exists even in Africa where records of London music hall ditties are preferred to the folk songs of the native."

This week Broadway got a look at one of the best singing legends the old-time negro has produced. It is the play "John Henry" which was written by Roark Bradford, once a New Orleans reporter who got bounced out of a copy desk only to find he could make half a million dollars and more writing dusky humor.

SINGING BLACK GIANT

John Henry was a singing black giant who could drive a mile of iron rods in the sun, went down. The role is a natural for Paul Robeson, and Robeson, who returned recently to the United States after several years in Europe, plays John Henry in his first American stage work since 1932.

The music was written by a former Brooklyn high school teacher, Jacques Wolfe, who became interested in negro music while stationed at an army post in South Carolina. He is the composer of "Glory Road" and "Shortnin' Bread."

The producer is Sam Byrd, a youthful North Carolinian known on Broadway for performances as "Duke" in the original cast of "Tobacco Road" and "Curley" in "Of Mice and Men," and also as the producer of two plays.

"John Henry" opened in Philadelphia a month ago to general applause. It is the product of a suggestion by Wolfe and years of work by him and Bradford. When Wolfe read the book several years ago he sat down and wrote some scores for the songs which Bradford had sprinkled liberally through the pages. The lyrics were of a type which Bradford had heard on his father's Tennessee cotton plantation, and in the little churches and prison camps which later he had found to be mines of purest black-gold lore.

Wolfe, aided by Mrs. Bradford, persuaded Roark to undertake the We were following the canal, mile on mile. Looking into the distance, over the vast stretch of burning desert, I saw great castles rising against the blue Egyptian sky; castles with many-colored domes, spires and minarets which seemed to be fashioned of spun gold.

Then, as the train turned sharply to right or left, the castles were lost, fading into the sky again. Several astonished passengers pressed at the windows, gazing at their marvelous beauty. Then all of us laughed, remembering, suddenly, they were mere mirages in the desert, mirages which occur at frequent intervals, fooling not only travelers from distant lands but the natives, as well.

Might not Port Said's wickedness, too, be a mirage, I thought, a mirage upon the horizon of the mind?

Anyway, a wine card lay before me. And Cairo was only a few miles distant.

book for a musical show. Wolfe went to New Orleans and played his scores for the writer, who in turn took him around to the churches and plantations to look and see for himself.

Wolfe caught the "True Ligion," so to speak, tore up his music and set to work on melodies with more of the south and less of Broadway in them.

Before Bradford took hold of the John Henry legend it was a fragmentary thing embodied in a few old ballads, told by the old people on a few plantations, sung sometimes in the railroad camps. In one of the oldest and purest versions, the story has a bitter restraint like that of the ballads of Scotland.

"John Henry said to his cap'n: 'Boss,

A man hasn't nothin' but a man, And 'fore I'll be beat in de sex-ton gang, I'll die wid a hammer in my han' . . ."

"John Henry had dat pretty liddle wife, An' she went all dress up in

She walk ev' day down de railroad track To de place whar her steel-drivin' man fell dead."

In other stories he was a giant negro—never quite the size of the lumber country's Paul Bunyan but just as effective—who could love, fight, eat or work like any black men in the delta. He could sing, too, and make good jokes.

"If I ain't a nat'chal man," John Henry says, "den show me a nat'chal man and I'll mock him."

COULD PICK THE COTTON

In the cotton picking country, John Henry was the boy who could pick the cotton. On the river he could shoulder two bales of cotton and conjoin right up the steamer plank. On the Yaller Dog Railroad he needed two holders just to set the spikes. In the legends, he always comes to death in a struggle against a machine—tractor, spike hammer or loading winch—and on this point the negro ballad makers symbolically told of the conflict of their whole people with mechanization.

That the ring-shouts and the chanting are disappearing is something bemoaned alike by some white and negro scholars. Carter Woodson, negro historian, fears that his people are becoming a "race of imitators."

NEGRO TEACHERS

Lydia Parish, an authority on plantation songs and the wife of the painter, Maxfield Parish, blames much of this loss of individuality on negro teachers who try to "uproot everything African" by such methods as substitution of the English play song "Farmer in the Dell" for the sing-em-sister shouting of the old plantations.

"From the fact that Broadway is featuring negro actors, dancers and musicians as never before and the producers of a new negro opera are attempting to teach the Harlem actors to speak and sing like primitive southern negroes it is clear that this is no time for the negro to be disdainful of his African heritage."

It has come to a pretty pass when the negro who sings a spiritual as only a negro can, is determined to sing "Nearer My God to Thee," and the white man who sings a Brahms song to perfection is equally determined to sing "Roll Jordan, Roll."

Recompense.

When Christmas day has come and gone The New Year swings in line With visions of the loved-ones things My childhood's faith called mine My heart grows light, my footsteps too Take up the spring of youth. With quivering lips I fare again Life's fairylands of truth.

But when I come close to the place I called home, young and glad Give place to shining day My steps are slow and sad; For each new time I smile to greet One I loved long ago. The eyes that look into my own Are eyes I do not know. Grief-blind I stumble down the path Away from long ago. And face again the road to peace Give place to shining day For well I know two dear, dear lads With quivering lips I fare again Close by a wee, wee little lass At home awaiting me.

Life pass in full, though not in kind, For all it takes away: Give place to shining day And so I know no matter where With quivering lips I fare again Close by a wee, wee little lass At home awaiting me. MAUDE STEINHAUER WOLFE.

SWINGIN' IN THE HEADLINES

By TOM HAM.

A bunch of the boys was whoopin' it up in the banquet hall that night, And the kid that handled the radio dials was twirling 'em left and right, For a speech was ridin' the network air—from the party's guiding star— And the gang was honin' to hear the words of the erudite FDR.

It was ole Andy Jackson's birthday, sir, and the lads had rallied 'round To kick in a few thousand bucks or so, lest the kitty depleted be found. They'd come in "from Rabun Gap (as the saying goes) and from Tybee Light" To dig the old war chest out of the red—its accustomed pre-campaign plight.

Not only here, but the country o'er, up the Seaboard and down again They were singing their plaudits of Roosevelt—except maybe Vermont and Maine.

O the spirits were high in the banquet hall, and the welkin rang with cheer As they spoke of The Man in the White House, of their plans for the coming year. There was reverent talk in the Third Term vein (Would the President billy the beans?) And they boldly discussed the shellacking in store for the GOPPhilistines and "antis" and "Pharisees," in tranquility breaking their breads. There was Rivers and Talmadge and Howell, too, with a dove floating over their heads. And the speeches were fragrant with harmony while they glowed with cherubic bliss. For despite their internal dissensions, there was never a heckle nor hiss.

Still you couldn't but see, if you looked right close, that although the ninety and nine Were safe in the fold of the Jackson feast, there were some who were yet "out of line."

For out of the night that was forty above and into the din and the glare There'd straggled a rumor from out of the south to get in the peace dove's hair.

It seems that down yonder at Macon, Gee Ay, at another festive board, Was a sort of a "rebelcrat" rendezvous. (To take no offense you're implored).

Bill A., of the bold Macon Telly, and Milwee, from down in the east, Had called in some dissident brethren for a (pardon us) "chitlin'crat" feast. They, strictly agin' the New Dealers, had dressed up in blue overalls And had roundly lambasted the liberal boys, with jeers and razz-berry catcalls.

'Tis sad, but thus has it been ever, in this gloried land of the free, That political pals rip asunder at times, when on policies they disagree.

So the Jacksonrats dined in Atlanta, at twenty-five smackers a head; They piled up a stake for the war chest, and were all quite sufficiently fed. And they toasted their wandering brothers, then sent up a prayer and a sigh, As the chitlin'crats et down at Macon, on hog-vine and cold tater pie.

But away with this talk of the menu; let's wind up this sonnet of woe, For what does it matter what Democrats eat, so long as the Repus eat crow? And as for this split in the fam'ly, 'twill heal as have those in the past, And when the guns boom for the ballot, the line will hold solid and fast.

So rip, snort and rear while there's time, my lads, and gobble your chitlin' hearty, For soon comes the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party.

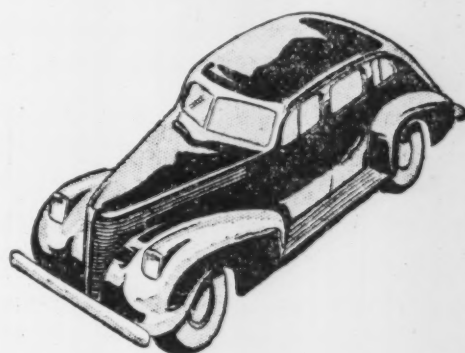

Boys Eager To Join Forest Fire Patrols

Editor, Constitution: Your editorial regarding the "Wildfiremen" and "Junior Volunteer Patrols" move is so thoroughly interpretive of the campaign, we wish to offer a word of thanks and congratulations. Judging from a continuous stream of letters and cards from rural sections of Georgia, plus the very practical help from a number of sources in Georgia, the campaign will be especially successful this year in this state.

We are preparing an exhibit of the cards and letters from boys from 19 states, and for the inspiration to the public. These will be put in a prominent place later. W. L. SHADDIX, Acting Director, Southern States Forest Fire Commission, Atlanta.

OLD GRAND JURIES TO CONSIDER FATE OF PRESENTMENTS

Tom C. Law Calls Parley To Learn Why Findings Usually Are Filed Away To Gather Dust.

They want to know why—usually—nothing ever happens.

So members of grand juries of the last two years will meet January 22 to delve into the fate of their presentments which are prepared after much investigation and taking of testimony.

"For the most part," declared
Tom C. Law, foreman of the July-August, 1939, body, who yesterday called the meeting, "the present-ments have been filed among the county archives to gather dust."

The call for the gathering was issued after a meeting of grand jury officers. It will be held at 7:30 o'clock that night at the Henry Grady hotel.

League Invited.

The group, which included at least one officer from each of the 12 grand juries of the last two years and of the present grand jury, voted to call the general meeting of all members of their juries and invited the One Government League to present its plan to them.

Details of the program will be arranged, Law said, after return to the city this week of W. Eugene Harrington, president of the League, who was away at the time of the grand jury officers' luncheon at which the invitation was voiced.

Mr. Law's letter calling the meeting follows:

"If you still feel that the recommendations made by your grand jury were good ones, please join us in a meeting of all members of the last 12 grand juries and the present one to be held in the Henry Grady hotel at 7:30 o'clock
Monday, January 22.

All Invited.

"A group including an officer of each grand jury, including your own, met informally at luncheon this week and instructed me to arrange this meeting. While each officer agreed to send a special invitation to the members of his own grand jury, I am taking the liberty of writing you now, in addition, so members of all the grand juries may have simultaneous notice of the date at this earliest possible time.

"In attending, you will not be in any way committing yourself to any specific plan for carrying out recommendations which your grand jury made, in good faith and after hard work, for the improvement of your community... recommendations which, for the most part, have been filed in the county archives to gather dust."

"You simply will get, at first hand, fully and officially, all the facts about one plan which many of your fellow grand jurors believe to offer the only permanent remedy. The grand jury is the link between the people and their government and no plan can succeed without your support."

142 PUT TO WORK DURING LAST WEEK

79 Jobs Are Regular, 63
Temporary, Says Employment Manager.

The second week of 1940 brought jobs to 142 more residents of Fulton and DeKalb counties, of which 79 were regular and 63 were temporary, according to Alfred F. Scogin, manager of the Georgia State Employment Service's Atlanta office.

These workers added to the 111 placed in private employment the week ending January 6 brought the total to 253 jobs recorded this month.

New applications for employment showed an increase again this week with 693 registrations compared with 547 taken the preceding week and 338 for the week ending December 29. This brought the total number of applicants listed as available for work to 35,755. White applicants number
23,083 and 12,672 are negroes.

Forty white-collar jobs were filled with 29 clerical, six sales and five professional workers. Six skilled craftsmen were found jobs.
Eighty-six service and seven production workers were placed and three physical laborers were put to work.

Joseph Zeff, sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary on a charge of sending obscene literature through the mails to Birmingham school children, yesterday sought release from the federal penitentiary here on a writ of

ued by Federal Judge E. Marvin

GEORGIA MOVIE STARS STAGE FARM World Premiere

M. D. Mobley, state director of vocational agriculture, cast in the movie as a vocational agriculture teacher, explains the origin and purpose of the Future Farmers' movement to Al Fowler (playing the part of Fred Dale) in one of the dramatic scenes of the picture. Walter Langford (Mobley) was shot accidentally by Dale on a deer hunt. Dale is accused of attempted murder and Langford, convinced of Dale's innocence, attempts to help him and get his interest in the F. F. A.

Is Dixie Stealing The Football Show?

By W. A. ALEXANDER,
Head Coach Georgia Tech Football Team.
As Told to Craddock Goin.

THERE IS widespread complaint that southern colleges are raiding the north of its likely football talent. Someone compiled statistics to show that 32 Pennsylvania boys are playing on southern football teams this year.

It was largely due to the brilliant playing of a New York City boy, George Stirnweiss, that North Carolina defeated New York University. A short time later a Hatfield, Pa., second-string center helped the same team deliver a thumping 30-to-6 defeat to the University of Pennsylvania.

Other boys with no Confederate background are out to do or die for Dixie. Chaps who write pieces for the paper have much fun wisecracking about difficulties facing a southern coach in whipping his boys to a civil-war fighting spirit for inter-sectional games, with so many Yankees now enlisted under the banners of the Lost Cause.

Oddly enough, the problem of student migration is more serious to us in the south than it is to the northern colleges, even if Major John L. Griffith, head of the Big Ten, did speak out so bitterly about "southern raids" at a conference session last spring.

The problem is particularly disturbing in Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and the Carolinas. In Alabama recently an irate legislator figured that 43 per cent of the students at his state university are from other states. It was pointed out that every Christmas special trains run from Jersey City to handle the large holiday crowds of northern students attending the University of Alabama.

Southern educators have been embarrassed for a long time over the growing number of young men and women of the north knocking on their doors for an education. Our state appropriations have been spread mighty thin throughout the years, making it difficult for us to take care of the educational needs of our own youngsters. It has been suggested that some northern youngsters regard the south as promising better economic opportunities, and they wish to get in on the ground floor as it were by acquiring a southern education—and maybe a southern accent.

In some southern states it's likely that lower tuition costs are attractive to outsiders. Undoubtedly lower living costs and other economic factors make college life more attractive in the south than, say, at Yale, Harvard, Princeton or some mid-western institutions. In all fairness we also must admit that entrance examinations at some southern institutions are not as rigid as at some of the eastern and western colleges, where secondary schooling long has been on a higher plane than in the south.

This could hardly be true of all southern colleges, however. There is a popular legend that at Georgia Tech boys have "flunked out" and entered other institutions. We are not smug enough to give this thought official endorsement.

Although it is not easy to figure out what our northern visitors have in mind, I am sure of one thing: Very few come south to play football!

At Georgia Tech we have boys from 40 states and seven foreign countries. The overwhelming majority of boys from eastern, western and far western states don't even try for the football team.

We have fellows from California and Washington who don't even ask for suits. Twenty-two of the 1939 football squad of 42 players are from Georgia. Twelve are from border states. There are two from Texas, two from Maryland, one from

COACH ALEXANDER.

West Virginia, one from Indiana, one from Missouri and one from New York.

While I have made no actual survey, I believe the other 12 teams of the southeastern conference are made up overwhelmingly of southern talent. The University of Georgia football squad, for instance, is 75 per cent a Georgia product.

If North Carolina has its New York Stirnweiss, its opponents will tell you that the Tarheels also have a Louisiana boy, Jim (Sweet) Lallane, who has worried them half crazy, as well as a number of line men from Carolina.

A rule passed by the Southeastern conference a few years ago probably has given rise to a wrong impression. Immature reporters sent out word that we had "let the bars down," which could mean things we didn't mean. We merely faced the subsidization problem fairly and honestly. We decided openly to allow a worthy football student room, board, books and tuition, his actual educational needs, so long as he could keep up studies.

No cash is involved.

Our athletic department takes no credit for the high scholastic ranking of our football players at Georgia Tech. The faculty automatically takes care of that situation. If a boy doesn't make good grades, he not only doesn't play; he doesn't even stay in school.

This idea that Dixie is stealing the football show is all bosh. I don't believe any section has a monopoly on good players, unethical practices or scholastic ideals. We

The Modern Trend Of Climate

By TOM HAM.

ASK Grandpa. Go on, ask him. Then ask the old man who runs the shoe shop down on the corner. Tackle almost any old-timer around this time of year, get him strung out on the weather, and what does he tell you?

The ice may be inches thick on the drive; the lawn may be white with snow; the mercury may be cuddling deep in the thermometer bulb—but chances are the old gentleman will draw himself up with Spartan scorn and render a verdict that goes something like this:

"Winters nowadays aren't as cold as they were when I was a boy."

You've heard it a thousand, yea, ten thousand times, and you've humored Grandpa his opinion, figuring he was in one of his Battle of Chickamauga moods. But the screw part about it is that—according to actual records of the weather men—the old boy is absolutely right. Winters really aren't as frigid as they were in the late lamented "good old days."

But if you'll take a bit of advice from Atlanta's Meteorologist Mindling, don't be expecting the seasons to flatten out into one balmy year-round spring any time soon. And go right ahead with the payments on that stoker. For, from all indications manifest by the Honorable J. Pluvius and his elements, the set-up will be spring, summer, fall and winter right on down the line for a good many Annos Domini to come.

Be wiser, he urges, than a lot of screwball pseudo-scientists who have grabbed their pencils, slide rules and barographic geesebombs to figure out the end of this alleged "trend to warmer." Don't go out on a limb with the conviction that this thing is going to keep on indefinitely until the arctic blossoms with water hyacinths and palm trees shade the North Pole from a tropical sun. For with the clinical approach of the scientist, Mr. Mindling says it has happened before and probably will happen again.

An interesting study along this line was made public recently by one J. B. Kincer, chief of the Division of Climate and Crops of the United States Weather Bureau, Washington. Mr. Kincer assembled data from observation posts scattered all over the globe, as far away as South Africa, and analyzed the results over a 20-year period. Samples of the evidence were these:

"Portland, Ore.—Seventeen of the past 20 years warmer than normal, warmest year of record 1921, every year since 1922 above normal."

"Omaha, Neb.—Fifteen years warmer than normal, warmest of record, 1931."

"Washington, D. C.—Seventeen years warmer than normal, warmest of record 1921, every year above normal since 1926."

"Capetown, South Africa.—Nineteen years warmer than normal, warmest of record 1927."

Mr. Kincer looks over the results of his survey and cautiously sees myriad blessings, which might accrue to mankind—if old Mother Nature is on the level and means to keep it up. For instance, a genuine warming up of the earth involves lengthening of the growing season—that period bounded in the spring by the last killing frost and in the fall by the first. A fluctuating thing at best, this growing season has lengthened some under influence of the so-called trend to the tropical, having its effect, of course, on agriculture. You can cruise up that agricultural tributary of the situation and have a lot of fun. There are some, for instance, who go so far as to envision the climatic addition of vast acres to the nation's productive land—the equivalent of two more food-producing states—a northward expansion of Dixie.

Such is the possibility, they tell you, in this increase of frost-free season, and you can draw others from a fertile imagination. But don't get Mr. Kincer wrong. Doping his weather on the basis of past performance, he knows the fickleness of same, and he wouldn't be surprised at any time to see a reversal of the trend kick all these rosy dreams into a cocked chapeau.

Then there is a darker side to the picture, for there are some who link this warming up with the droughts which have GEORGIA'S first 1940 World Premiere of a motion picture was held in Athens, Friday night at the Georgia theater.

All the usual first night fan-fare accompanied the premiere showing of "The Green Hand," motion picture made from the book by the same name by Dr. Paul W. Chapman, dean of the University of Georgia College of Agriculture. The story is one of southern agriculture and the Future Farmers of America, and the cast is an all-southern one.

The 900 people who attended the premiere showing included the east and prominent local and state figures, and other specially invited guests. The affair was invitational. Spotlights were used in front of the theater and visitors and notables were introduced. The entire program was broadcast over the Athens radio station.

The city of Athens turned Saturday into an occasion of civic importance; merchants co-operated and decorated their windows; several thousand out-of-town people saw the movie which was shown at all three Athens theaters during the morning.

A full length feature picture, "The Green Hand" was filmed with regular movie cameras on standard 35 mm film. Most of the prints, however, will be made on the small 16 mm film for portable machines used by schools where the picture will be shown for F. F. A.

Despite the length of the movie, only amateurs have roles—many of Future members of high school age, and others dignified university professors and county officials who never expected to get closer to the movies than a front row seat in a theater.

Nearly six weeks were required for "shooting" the picture in real movie style with inside sets in Hardman Hall on the College of Agriculture campus and outside scenes primarily on the Ag campus. Shots of a court trial in the movie were made in the superior court chamber of the Clarke county courthouse and ocean and yacht scenes filmed on a two-day trip to Savannah.

All members of the cast except a few minor parts were paid for their services as well as the property men who handled lights and scene changing. Cost of the picture is set at approximately $15,000.

Alpha Fowler Jr., president of last year's freshman class at the University of Georgia and recently state F. F. A. president, plays the leading part, although virtually without previous acting experience. He participated in only one high school play and claims that presiding at F. F. A. meetings, stage work at his father's theater where he gave money away on bank nights, and inheritance from his dad are responsible for any theatrical ability. His performance was largely responsible for the director's remark that this movie is "the best job of amateur acting I've ever seen."

Young Fowler comes from Douglasville, where a motion picture theater was named for him long before he got a crack at the movies. Son of A. A. Fowler, member of the Georgia house of representatives and prominent farmer and businessman, he received the most outstanding student award at Douglas County High school in 1937 and edited the D. C. H. S. Gazette, school newspaper. Late last month he became the first Georgia student to solo in the aviation course now offered.

Immediately after filming was completed, during the summer, Fowler returned to the farm to follow a plow and perform ordinary farm chores. He expects to major in agricultural economics at the university and probably enter the Lay school.

Beautiful Betty Johnson, 19-year-old Savannah girl who had the feminine lead in "Good News," a musical comedy presented by the Savannah Playhouse in May of last year, plays opposite Fowler as the "heart-interest." She has appeared in broadcasts over Station WTOG as a soprano soloist and aspires to be a radio singer or a movie actress. Fond of dancing, she's a typical American girl though a bit peculiar in that she doesn't like modern jazz. Miss Johnson was one of five beauty queens who sponsored Armstrong College's Freshman Ball in 1938 and was a sponsor at the University of Georgia military ball last year.

The cast includes Dr. Chapman, M. D. Mobley, state director of vocational education; Dr. Milton P. Jamison, head of the university's animal husbandry department; C. H. Bishop, manager of Sears Farmers' Market in Atlanta; Walter E. Jackson, sheriff of Clarke county; W. R. Cole, superintendent of schools in Clarke county; Dr. Henry A. Shinn, professor of law at the university; Dr. O. C. Adair, professor of rural education; Phillip Sheffield, University of Georgia law student, and Mrs. J. W. Bailey and Mrs. N. B. McCorkle, both of Athens.

Among F. F. A. boys in the picture are Pearce Elkins, Cairo; Scott Chamblee, Alpharetta; Paul W. Fouts, Roswell; Lonzo Pope, Camilla; Ralph Shumake, Roopville; Tommy Tucker, Walker Park; John Kelley, Vidette; Jack Bailey, Vidette, and Charlie Williams, Buena Vista.

Chapters in Jefferson, Winterville, Dacula, Athens, Watkinsville and Bogart supplied members for various scenes and three teachers of vocational agriculture assisted in the picture. They are J. L. McMullen, Jefferson; P. L. Elkins, Alpharetta, and H. J. B. Turner, Dacula.

In true movie style, "The Green Hand" was made in scenes, some of which take only a few seconds in the picture. Such practice requires little memory work and practice with each actor giving only one or two lines per scene. Each shift of the camera requires another scene, however short it may be.

Script for "The Green Hand" called for 197 scenes, although at least 215 were made before filming was completed. Extras came when the director had a bright idea and suggested ideas of emphasizing some important angle. No scene could exceed 200 feet of film since developing tanks had that capacity. With camera speed at 90 feet per minute, the scene time limit was slightly over two minutes. Longest of the closely connected sequences in the movie was a speech requiring six scenes; but these can be tied together so closely that virtually no break will be evident.

Typical procedure for the filming was something like this:

Actors reviewed their lines while Cameraman Frank Kirchner and property men arranged the set. Then came a rehearsal or two for proper positions in front of the camera as well as for proficiency in presenting the lines. Third step was testing lights to eliminate shadows before Director C. L. Venard checked another rehearsal for sound while Kirchner rechecked camera positions.

"Okay, here" from Kirchner at the camera and "All right, here" from Venard at recording equipment meant take positions for the scene.

No longer the hand-cranked camera of early cinema days, the movie camera is operated by remote control from sound recording equipment some distance away from the actual shooting. The cameraman merely watched to see that action was satisfactory. Sound records on special film in perfect co-ordination with action portrayed on another. Later the two are synchronized to make the sound film.

"Everybody quiet," Venard called through the loudspeaker and actors got ready. In front of performers stands a property man with the "sink," an apparatus bearing the scene number in large letters and equipped to make a loud click as a starting signal for the sound recording operator. The camera runs some 10 or 15 feet before any sound records. The scene number is thus registered at the beginning.

"When the 'Sink' signals for sound pickup, the property man steps out of camera range. Immediately as all action and sound is completed, another signal from the 'Sink' lets the recording operator know that the scene has been completed and registers the scene number at the conclusion. Then begins activity for the next 'shoot-ing.'"

Remarkably few retakes were necessary because of actors' mistakes. Principal difficulties came from noises near the set recording on the sound track. A railroad line near the Ag campus added to the inconvenience at times and rain occasionally halted filming. Microphones used with the movie camera were so sensitive that even wind interfered with filming some of the outdoor scenes.

Bright lights apparently didn't bother actors unduly except in winter scenes when wool coats plus heat from the lights added to their discomfort.

Little make-up was necessary only a bit of grease paint to prevent undue reflection of shiny faces. Selected by age and type to represent their parts actors didn't need elaborate make-up required for character performances in the movies. Nor were they anxious for more. Fowler commented, "Ugh, that make-up! It was some stuff out of a tube, and just like smearing tooth-paste on your face. It wouldn't permit free sweating, and you felt hot in the stuff. It washed off like axle grease."

The one hard-luck incident during the filming occurred just before the movie was finished. The sound camera was dropped nearly five feet on a concrete floor in Hardman Hall. Activity was delayed several days and some of the shots made after repairing the camera, had to be re-filmed because of imperfect sound recordings.

Future farmer chapters in Georgia have anxiously awaited the completion of the film which will retell visually the story

Sherman Learned Before He Died

THERE are those who still wonder if General Sherman ever knew how he, personally, was hated by the South. Did most of the criticism of his methods come after his death? Or did he live to feel the unrelenting hate of the rebels? Proof that Sherman died with full knowledge of the contempt in which he was held by the Confederacy is in a letter, written in 1871, and printed in the Mobile Register on August 25 of that year.

The letter concerns the head of a southern family who were victims of Sherman's cruelty during his march to the sea. The family, the mother of her two sons, were sent out of Memphis and left in the swamps of Arkansas to starve. The father, a surgeon in the Confederate army, was later called on to attend Mrs. Sherman during a serious illness. With all the adroitness he could muster, he concealed his identity from her until he had the opportunity of facing the general. Then, with facetious politeness, he declined to render Sherman a statement, explaining how he had saved the wife of a man who contrived to kill his own.

Here is the surgeon's own story of the incident:

"I was a surgeon in the Confederate army. When I left Memphis to join the army I was obliged, of course, to leave my wife and two little boys, who were then aged respectively five and seven, to take care of themselves. I devoted myself with great earnestness to the cause, and my wife, like other Southern women, sympathized with me. I gained, I suppose, some prominence, as my wife and children were singled out by Sherman, when he occupied Memphis, for his special hate. He sent them over the Mississippi river, and turned them adrift in the woods of Arkansas, with order that any boat which should dare to take them down the river would be confiscated. There they remained, in what state of anxiety you well can imagine, until they were found by an old family negro, who had managed to elude the sentinels in order to go to their relief. By this old negro's efforts they were conveyed down the river to another landing, and at 1 o'clock the next morning were taken on board of a steamer whose captain had been apprised of their situation. You can imagine my feelings when I heard my wife describe her sufferings, and then I decided, if ever Sherman came in my way, to be avenged."

"Not long after the war, I was traveling to St. Louis. About 2 o'clock in the morning I heard some one ask, in a loud voice, if there was a doctor on the train? I replied that I was a physician, and desired to know what was the matter. He said, 'Mrs. General Sherman was very ill in the sleeping coach, and unless relieved, he feared she would die. Said I, now my time has come, and I went at once to her relief. I never waited on a lady with such tenderness and attention in my life, and although she had a violent attack of cholera morbus, of eating impudently of eggs, the night before, I succeeded in giving her relief and sleep. She was very thankful, and desired my address, which I avoided giving her. When we reached St. Louis, she and her attendants and my sons and self happened to be in the same omnibus. Mrs. Sherman began a conversation about the bitterness that still lingered in the southern heart, and said the people had not been sufficiently humbled. One of my little sons, who was about 12 years old, replied:

"Madame, how can you expect anything but bitterness, when we remember how we have been treated? When I think about their sending my mother and brother here, and turning us loose in the swamps of Arkansas, I hate them, and always shall. The Yankees sent us out of Memphis without any clothing or food, away from any house, for no reason except that father was in the army."

Mrs. Sherman looked up in surprise, and remarked: 'Sonny, who could have been so cruel?'

'Why, General Sherman! he is the very man who did it, and I shall always hate him for it.'

"If a shell had burst, it could not have created more consternation and confusion. I did not say a word, and in fact not another word was spoken until we reached the hotel. When I had gone to my room, I said: 'Son, did you know that lady to whom you were talking in the omnibus?'

"No, sir."

"Well, I suppose you didn't, for that was Mrs. Sherman, General Sherman's wife."

"He replied: 'Father, I only told the truth, and I'm glad I did it.'

"In a short time afterwards, an officer in federal uniform called at my room and stated that General Sherman desired me to render my bill. I replied, I have no bill. He insisted—I declined. General Sherman then called in person, and insisted, in a very peremptory manner, I still declined, stating to him, 'General, I have no bill, and I am only too glad to be avenged for the manner in which you treated my wife and children. When I was far away and they had no other protector, for no other reason than because my wife sympathized with the cause in which I was engaged—I drove them into the woods to starve. I have had it in my power to aid materially in restoring your wife to health, and probably in saving her life. The fact that you know who I am, is all the bill I shall ever send.'

"At dinner a servant came to our table, and placed a glass at my plate and at the plate of each of my sons, returned with a bottle of wine, and filling my glass, stated that General Sherman requested the privilege of a glass of wine. He was proceeding to fill my sons' glasses, when the elder placed his hand over the glass and said: 'Never.'"

The First Typewriter Annoyed Mark Twain

By W. C. MUNDAY.

THEY say that when Vanderbilt, pioneer railroad magnate, was approached by Westinghouse with his now universally used air brake, he turned him away with the scolding that he "had no time to waste with young men who permitted their minds to drift into such foolish channels."

It has been pointed out that Columbus was chided because he proposed that the earth was round. Robert Fulton's theory that a boat could be propelled by steam was ridiculed as was Morse's idea that messages could be dispatched by wire.

So down through the ages it has been with anyone who came along with new thoughts or inventions—including those who conceived the typewriter.

And one of the first to express his sentiments of what he termed this "breeding little joker" was Mark Twain—all because the immortal creator of Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer, like most of us to this day, despised to write letters.

But we are getting ahead of our story. "It was 60 years ago this month," declares A. C. Plage, Atlanta representative of a typewriter company, "that a group of businessmen and inventors met in New York and formed a new organization to manufacture a machine for 'printing letters.' American Writing Machine Company was the name given the new enterprise."

"The machine" was the 'Caligraph, one of the first typewriters in a field which was but six years old. It is interesting to note that there remain some of these in actual use at the present time.

"However, like most innovations, the public did not respond and many difficulties had to be overcome before typewriters became recognized in the business world as an absolute necessity.

"Then, too, the public frowned upon the practice of 'printing' letters. Some resented the typewritten letter as a reflection upon their education—an insinuation that they could not read 'hand-writing.' Imagine! Friendships of long standing were lost and enmity incurred by the early users because of the use of the machine for personal correspondence.

"But some outstanding personalities of the era recognized the possibilities inherent in the machine that 'printed' letters.

I have on hand a copy of a letter the great humorist, Mark Twain, sent our company. He was one of the first to experiment with the typewriter and while I believe he liked it still and all, but—

"He wrote: Hartford, March 19, 1879.

"Gentlemen:

"Please do not use my name in any way. Please do not even divulge the fact that I own a machine. I have entirely stopped using the typewriter, for the reason that I never could write a letter with it to anybody without receiving a request by return mail that I would not only describe the machine but state what progress I had made in the use of it, etc., etc. I don't like to write letters, and so I don't want people to know I own this curiosity-breeding little joker.

"Yours truly,

"SAMUEL L. CLEMENTS."

"Since that eventful day, the typewriter field has kept stride with the march of American progress and today is one of the nation's major industries. Our company proudly looks back to our record of achievement."

Human nature remains the same, however. Folks are still curious, not only about new machinery but their neighbors and everything and everybody else. And still would rather be lashed at a whipping post in a Delaware and Maryland than to write letters.

Pioneer Auto Mechanic Milam Cranks One of the Early Models.

By DAVENPORT STEWARD.

BACK IN THE DAYS when urchins were advising stalled motorists to get a horse—in a period when an automobile's appearance created something akin to pandemonium—W. J. Milam, of 630 Bonaventure avenue, N. E., became the first auto repair man in Atlanta and the southeast.

He got into the business in 1907 more or less because he was a good sheet metal worker who could turn out a nifty fender more quickly and more cheaply than the manufacturers could supply one. Mass production wasn't the order of the day then.

The first set of automobile bodies ever built in Atlanta were the handiwork of Milam—in 1910 or thereabouts, he recalls. He built two and each rolled around on a Maxwell chassis for many a fair day afterward.

"I'll never forget that order," said Milam. "I didn't know how to figure the job—I took it. I was furnished a drawing showing what was wanted and that was my only guide."

"The job was done for Joseph G. Blount, who then was the Maxwell dealer here, and the order came to me through a fellow by the name of Maxwell."

"After that I built a good many other bodies for dealers and others who wanted them."

Streamlining a Diamond.

"About 1915 the Diamond Motor Company planned construction of an automobile factory in Atlanta and they came to me with a body-building job. I built it according to their specifications and, to this day, I've never seen better body lines on any automobile. The effect was similar to the streamlined effect of many cars manufactured today."

"The Diamond plant never was constructed, though, and that body I built for them eventually was shipped to Chicago. "Quite a lot of our business after awhile consisted of lengthening the chassis of Model T Fords. One fellow came in one day and said he wanted his Ford made 'to look like an automobile.'"

"Well, we made a lady out of that Lizzie. We lengthened the chassis and changed the all-metal runningboards to combination wood-and-metal affairs with lineoleum on the footboards. He liked the job, too, and drove it for a long time. Later he told me he hated to part with that car."

For four or five years Milam virtually had the automobile repair business in this part of the country sewed up. Of course, there weren't as many automobiles then as now, but he was drawing business from all the adjoining states and even as far south as Miami. For awhile he did all the work for the majority of the dealers in Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Florida. He was the first man in the southeast to use a wrecker—and that wrecker used to go on some long trips. Once it went to within a few miles of Augusta, where a hapless motorist was stranded as the result of a wreck. The repair bill was a little matter of $350.

When the automobile industry was in swarming clothes, repair men had to be able to manufacture parts in many instances. The factories simply weren't geared to turn out parts fast enough to meet the demand occasioned by fires, collisions and wrecks of all sorts.

Despite the fact there weren't so many automobiles on the streets and highways of the land in the 'teen years of the current century, there was still plenty of business for a good repair man. It seems that even then two automobiles would hunt one another out and collide on a lonesome road.

Milam is a veteran witness in automobile accident damage suits. Once his wife observed that he might as well rent out space in the courtroom, so as to be on hand when his name was called. Subpoena servers practically wore a path to his door. Almost all the cars built today—and almost all those that have gone the way of the Chalmers, the Maxwell and the Hanson—are good machines, Milam believes. Sometimes there's one that isn't so good, but usually the car that goes to the repair shop because of serious damage isn't there because of faulty construction.

The Cause of Accidents.

"Reckless driving always was the cause of most accidents," observed the veteran, who at one time worked thirty mechanics full time. "The trouble with most cars has been the people who drive them, anyway. An automobile is a delicate piece of machinery and should be treated as such."

Milam lays claim to building the first ventilated windshield. The automobile manufacturers started a year and a half later, he said. A motorist complained that his feet got hot while driving and asked Milam to do something about it. Milam did—but he didn't patent the idea.

Another thing Milam says he did first was use body solder in joints of cars. It took him about a year of experimenting to discover exactly the right proportions of lead and tin to use—and then he practically had to ram the order down a lead company's throat. The lead company was curious about the "wacky" order and sent a salesman to investigate. Before long, said Milam, the company was selling that body solder.

Today, at 63, Milam is still very much interested in automobiles and their ailments, driver-caused and otherwise. He looks at you out of clear, blue eyes and speaks of cars as many another man does horses. You look at him and see, not an elderly man in a neat business suit, but a much younger man in overalls turning his back on horses at a time when the urchins were yelling: "Get a horse!"

How Long Does a Dream Last?

By A DOCTOR.

AN object in the room falls to the floor with a loud crash. The sleeper awakes. At the very moment of waking he hears only the last echo of the noise—but in the single second which elapses between the fall of the object and the rousing of the man's consciousness, the noise of the fall has caused a whole series of illusions in the unconscious mind of the sleeper.

He sees artillery being marshalled, the guns are directed, there is an order to fire, the terrible roar of the cannon. And all this happens in the very moment of waking.

A French scientist dreamed that he was back in the days of the Terror of the French Revolution. He was brought before the tribunal; he saw all the famous figures of the Terror clearly; he was condemned and conveyed to the place of execution. He saw himself mount the scaffold; he heard the knife of the guillotine fall, and felt his head being severed from his body.

He awoke terrified—the carved decoration at the head of his bed had fallen down and, like the knife of the guillotine, struck his cervical vertebra. From the end of this dream had sprung the whole story.

From such experiences as these, scientists who are interested in the nature of dreams, conclude that the exact time of duration of a dream cannot be fixed easily. However, not all research workers are satisfied with this conclusion. They claim that it must at least be determinable whether the duration be long or short.

In order to investigate this problem, Professor Klein, of Texas, has carried out a strange series of experiments in his laboratory. Several students were put into a hypnotic sleep, and in their sleep some form of irritation of the senses was practiced upon them, through the ear, through the sense of smell or some other way. A stop-watch recorded the beginning and the end of the period of irritation of the sleeper who before being hypnotized had been asked to note his dream carefully and relate every detail.

To one sleeper the word "Fire!" was called out. He related the following incidents: "I was driving in a car near my home. I heard a cry and stopped. Another car had fallen over the cliff. A man crept out, he was injured, and there was another person under the car. It was a woman, and she was seriously injured. Together we carried her to the hospital."

The sleeper was awakened. The watch registered 20 seconds as the duration of this dream.

The experience of falling lasts only a short time, but one has the sensation of plunging into great depths. This usually happens soon after falling asleep, and is caused by a movement which influences the center of equilibrium.

This was proved by an experiment in which the subject was placed on a couch with his head resting on a pillow. When he was asleep a quick pressure was put on the couch near his feet, causing his feet to sink a little lower than the rest of his body. Instantly, in his dream, he felt that he was falling down—down—down!

The same experiment may cause different dreams with different people. When a number of sleepers were stroked with a piece of soft material, one man dreamed that his hand was licked by a cow; another that a woman friend softly patted his hand, while he lay ill in hospital; a third that a large dog snuggled against his hand, while a fourth felt an Angora cat rub herself against his arm. In all cases the duration of the dream was very brief.

A man may be observed thrashing about in bed for hours on end, during which time he is dreaming almost continually. But it is a fact that most dreams last an infinitely shorter time than the events they record would seem to demand.

The shortest dream recorded lasted only five seconds; the longest 90 seconds. The most common duration was about 30 seconds. It is fairly certain, however, that there are dreams which last much longer.

Reports of artists and poets seem to show that often a work of art was inspired by a dream. Tintin, the famous violinist and composer, is said to have received the notes of his famous Drill de Diable in a dream. Voltaire stated that he often composed verses in his dream and added that he believed they were not so bad. Goethe, who was a thorough self-analyst, said of his work that what he became aware of during the day often built itself up in regular dream at night. When he awoke he discovered either a wonderful new whole or the continuation of something that had already begun.

Dreams are, according to the well-known term, just foam—a foam which bubbles and then disperses on the surface of consciousness. Yet this foam originates out of some vast depths and is due to a definite event or suggestion.

RECORDED RHYTHMS

CLASSICAL.

CORELLI CONCERTO GROSSO, London Symphony: The able Bruno Walter conducts the London Symphony Orchestra in a virile and discerning interpretation of this classic by Arcangelo Corelli, one of the earlier masters of musical creation. The G Minor work, more familiarly known as the Christmas Concerto, due to the persistent legend that the composer sought to paint a tonal picture of the angels hovering over Bethlehem—a counterpart of Botticelli's masterpiece, "The Nativity"—has many moments of rare beauty and charm. This is especially true of the pastoral section. The work is well recorded. (Victor, Album M-600)

SPIN MARRIA and GRETCHEN AM ANNKE, Dorothy Maynor: In this release, Victor presents the disc debut of a young negro soprano who has recently become the latest sensation in the field of vocal art. Hailed by the celebrated conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, as a "native Flagstad," Maynor displays a voice of richness and power in these two Schubert numbers, both of which have long been popular with recitalists. The recordings are a foregone conclusion that more will follow. (Victor, No. 15752)

POPULAR.

MISSOURI WALTZ and THAT NAUGHTY WALTZ, Guy Lombardo: The maestro of the Royal Canadians leads his organization through two good old waltz tunes. Best features of the coupling are piano and brass; melody in sweet, slow tempo. (Decca, No. 2843)

LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD and HOLY SMOKE, Henry Busse: The "Hood" number features Billy Sherman vocalizing the plaint of the heroine of this modernized musical fairy tale; listenable, but not danceable. The "Smoke" number is a better dance disc than the other. Sherman vocals (Decca, No. 2928)

SWAMP FIRE and RIGAMOROLE, Jimmy Dorsey: The "Swamp" number is as hot as the fire it's supposed to be all about; good arrangement; danceable; all departments cut loose, with emphasis on drums. "Rigamole" has plenty of good brass work. (Decca, No. 2918)

LITTLE RED FOX and PINCH ME, Bob Crosby: A vocal by Teddy Grace, drums carrying most of the boom-boom and excellent work in the brass make for a danceable version of this popular "N'ya, n'ya" number. The other side has a vocal by Bob himself. (Decca, No. 2924)

Is Dixie Stealing Football?

have been accused of taking football too seriously in the south.

This is not supported by attendance records. The southern games attract nothing like the vast throngs that attend games in the east, the west and on the Pacific coast.

I don't justify the proselyting of players, either in the north or in the south. It is not even defensible in the light of the fact that northern colleges at one time attracted the cream of the crop of our southern prep players. It seems strange to find the situation reversing itself. For there was a time when the bulk of our crack prep stars went to college in the east or in the west. We put up no squawk—and neither did the western and eastern colleges.

Southern teams have made much progress. Our prep players come up better coached than they used to be, for there are many good prep coaches in the south now.

We win our share of intersectional games. But I do not agree that we dominate the picture. From year to year the tide changes. One year the razzle-dazzle of the southwest captures the public fancy. Later the titans of the Big Ten are called tops. Always the east for formidable Fordham, pantherish Pitt.

The Farm Premiere of how one boy, under the encouragement of a sympathetic teacher of vocational agriculture, and with the help of his associates in a local F. F. A. chapter, finds himself and develops a wholesome philosophy of life and selects objectives and goals worthy of his best efforts.

One of five books on the suggested first reading list in the national Future Farmer manual, "The Green Hand" has been read by a majority of the 200,000 members in the United States and the 8,337 members in Georgia. Fred Dale, the farm boy who is the leading character, is Dean Chapman's composite of thousands of rural youth inspired by the F. F. A. program.

The picture is designed as a medium to carry a lesson that will lead to much needed adjustment of the farming program of the south and as a means of recognizing the leadership of teachers of vocational agriculture and the contributions to better farming being made in the south by Future Farmer chapters. The movie closes with the hero winning a national F. F. A. speaking contest on the subject, "The New Agriculture of the South."

Title of the story comes from the first degree of membership in the F. F. A., the Green Hand. Members progress from one degree to another on the basis of achievements in farming, rural leadership, and personal success. Ranks in Georgia include Future Farmer, second degree; Georgia Planter, third, and Master Farmer, fourth. Only 321 boys in the state have reached the third ranking and only 18 have attained the fourth which is awarded only by the National F. F. A. convention.

Members of the 275 Future Farmer chapters in Georgia come from high school vocational agriculture classes. The first chapter in the state was formed at Statham in the fall of 1928 by A. P. Lewis about the time of the formation of the national organization. Henry C. Groseclose of Virginia in 1926, and later promoted the national organization. "The Green Hand" is dedicated to him.

The Modern Climate

beset the nations in recent years. And as for the why of the situation, you can find more theories—guesses, if you will—than you can shake a stick at.

One is that an increased output of carbon dioxide, occasioned by the greater use of motors and industrial furnaces, is responsible. Mr. Minding doesn't think so. He says this oxidation is so puny when compared with natural functions—breathing of the animal kingdom, for example—that it's still insignificant. In this rather commodious universe despite the age of progress which is upon us. And besides, there was a similar hike in America's temperature between 1780 and 1810—horse and buggy days.

Let's bring the thing home to Atlanta, now, and see what's been happening to local thermometers in the past few decades. Mr. Minding reached into a portfolio of his desk and picked out a potent little document covered with figures and charts. He pecked away at an adding machine for a few seconds and came up with the result as follows: Taking Atlanta's "mean temperature" for the months of January, 1879 to 1938, Mr. Minding delivered the answer in decade lumps. The ten-year averages (1879 to 1888, 1889 to 1898, etc.) panned out in order, 42.7 degrees, 42.6 degrees, 42.5 degrees, 44.2 degrees, 43.5 degrees and 45.7 degrees. Yep, he said, Atlanta's having warmer winters. The curve is going upward. But between the lowest and the highest average there's just 2.2 degrees difference, and Mr. Minding can't see that that's enough to get het up about.

So we can tally the results of our survey something like this: Ever since Oghu the cave man lugged his lady love over the glacier by her scraggly forelock, ever since the great ice cap started skidding back up the skull of Mother Earth, she's been running a little more fever, perhaps, every few centuries.

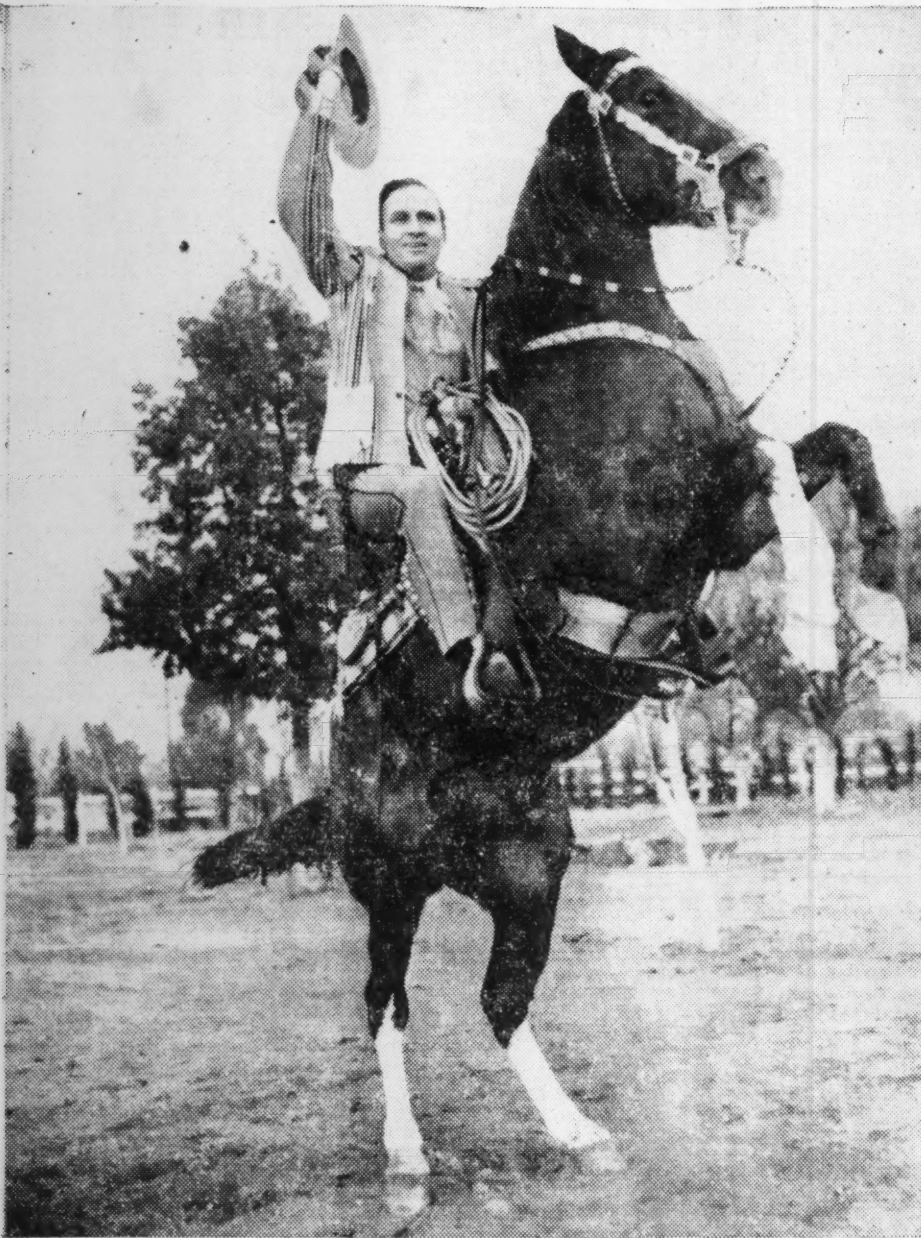

But the change is so slight—has been so slight ever since the very first weather observations were tabulated—that even yet these real McCoy take-nothing-for-granted scientists haven't been willing to take a long shot on the ultimate destiny of the elements.

They'll agree with Grandpa that winters nowadays aren't as cold as they were when he was a boy, but they'll stand him down that when HIS grandpa was a lad the Januaries were just as balmy as they are today. And, taking Jude Pluvius in their scientific stride, they'll tell you that at almost any decade now the curve will go down again, and the warm-to-cold-to-warm cycle will start all over until the grandpa of another generation draws himself up to opine:

"Winters nowadays aren't as cold (or as hot, as the case may be) as they were when I was a boy."

RADIO'S RICHEST Cowboy

By FRANCIS CHASE JR.

Gene Autry, no drug store cowboy-- can twang and sing.

HIS is the richest cowboy in the world. For three years the top-hand cowboy crooner on WLS' National Barn Dance; for five years the number one cowboy of the silver screen, his salary is terrific. Add to that salary his royalties from records, music, radio and personal appearances, sweat-shirts, cap-guns, pencils, soaps and other kid paraphernalia which bears his name, and you'll have a small idea of why Gene Autry has become the fair-haired boy of the income-tax department. Even Uncle Sam raises his eyebrows when the Autry income returns are filed each March.

He's the richest cowboy in the world, but he doesn't have a suit of clothes to his name. That's the way he wants it, and when you reach the spot that Gene stands in today, you can do the things you want. And right here we'd like to observe that the man hasn't changed an iota in the whole nine years it took him to climb from 'way down under to the top of the heap. From the day he was old enough to sing a leg over a saddle-horn and yell "Giddyup," he's gone in for high-heeled boots, ten-gallon Stetsons and shirts that cause rainbows to crawl back in their holes and pull their reflections in after them. Once, back in the days when he was at WLS, he made a bet—a quarter-of-a-century note against his wearing an ordinary suit of clothes—on a softball game, lost and, in order to fulfill the bet, had to rent a suit from a costumer's. On the screen, in radio, in his private life, he stays in character and, personally, I'd wear an iron mask if it would get me where the cowboy clothes have gotten Mr. Autry.

Of course, the cowboy clothes are just a small part of the Autry success story. There's a little matter of the Autry voice, which, if it doesn't cause Mr. Caruso to turn over in his grave, is still good enough to bring loud "ahs" from romance-loving ladies and romance-hating kids who jam theaters to hear him perform and put their own individual interpretations upon his crooning. That's no small trick in itself, this satisfying of such diverse audiences. Then, too, he is, for the ladies, a virile, he-man type they love to love, and the same goes for the kids.

He comes by his gifts naturally. Born to the saddle down in Tioga, Texas, just thirty-three years ago come December, his first lusty bawl was mingled with the belting of cattle on the range, and his nostrils came to know the smell of freshly branded steers. His is the honest love of the west and things western, bred of close familiarity. He early learned that the best way to keep a herd of restless steers from straying when camp was made at night was to ride around them and sing. On Sundays he varied his vocal efforts by singing in the choir of the Tioga church, pastored by his grandfather, and by the time a medicine show passed through Tioga—he was sixteen years old then—he was ready to try his talents on a more difficult audience.

Now, the technique of selling corn-remedies and liniment cure-alls in the Texas of that early day went about like this. A darkey would play a banjo, a singer would croon (they didn't call it crooning then)—a sentimental ballad that would soften sales resistance. Then the professor would give a scientific lecture on what his remedies would accomplish and start taking in the quarters. Gene got a job singing the sentimental ballads, and the professor reports that sales soared almost at once, especially among the feminine half of the audience.

His medicine-show experience was followed by a period of cow-punching around on different ranches in Texas and Oklahoma, almost always getting the sack because he disrupted the work routine. Other waddies used to forget to work when they heard Gene sing and play the guitar. Then he went to work for the Frisco railroad at Sapulpa, Oklahoma, becoming a telegraph operator. His second minor singing success came in the form of a rebuke from division headquarters of the railroad. Other operators along the line, headquarters learned, kept listening in while Gene played and sang into a telephone transmitter as messages piled up.

Jimmy Long, who has since collaborated with Gene on a number of songs, including "Saver Haired Daddy of Mine," was his boss in those days, and Jimmy felt that Gene had something. He worked with the young fellow, helped him to develop his style, and then, in 1928, persuaded Gene to go to New York during his vacation and try to connect with the Victor Recording Company.

New York wasn't too hospitable, and Gene fould himself getting saddle-sores from sitting in waiting-rooms hoping for a chance to be heard. Finally, on the last day of his vacation, he decided to give his audition anyway. He unsheathed his guitar in the waiting room and started singing. Nat Shilkret, a Victor official at that time, came out to see what the shout-ing was all about, talked with him, heard him out, and then gave him some history-making advice.

"You've got a good natural voice. Now go back home and get on the radio. What you need, is mike experience, and radio will develop you." Then Shilkret sat down and dictated a "To whom it may concern" letter.

Armed with this, Gene went back to Oklahoma and, more specifically, to radio station KVOO, in Tulsa. In those days singing on the radio was considered an honor, and the only reward performers received from the smaller stations was the knowledge that—maybe—hundreds of people were hearing them perform. As "Oklahoma's Yodeling Cowboy," Autry lassoed his listeners the first night, and as time passed it turned into a regular stampede. His range "twang" and his song-stories of the Old West found a responsive chord throughout the southwest.

In 1930, two years later, he made his first recording for Victor, the outfit that gave him to radio, and then, shortly afterward, he was hired by Sears, Roebuck & Company to sing over WLS, then owned by the mail-order house. When WLS was sold and the famous National Barn Dance program was started Gene moved over to it, and his fame and following—up until this time a purely sectional matter—became national. He was the idol of kids from one end of the country to the other. Fan mail poured in. They'd stampede him in the studio, gang up on him in personal appearance tours, and long after other members of the Barn Dance cast were home in bed, Gene would still be signing autograph-books for goggle-eyed admirers.

It was late in 1934 that Nat Levine, Hollywood producer for Republic Pictures, had a brainstorm. He was going to make a new type of western, a modern western that dealt with such streamlined subjects as government irrigation projects and fictional Sun Valleys. But there was more to his idea than just the revamping of the blood-and-thunder quackies of Tom Mix' day. He wanted a singing radio cowboy. Here was a producer smart enough to know that a man who has a large radio following to start with has just that much of a start over the fellow who begins from scratch.

Gene Autry was his answer. How this singing cowboy played and sang and rode his way to movie fame is a matter of record. It's no exaggeration to say that he brought back the westerner and for this rejuvenation he's been amply rewarded. In England and Scotland, where he and his horse, Champion, made a personal-appearance tour recently, audiences stood in long lines to get a glimpse of him. He is the favorite actor of Princess Elizabeth, and his English tour was a long, triumphal junket from one castle to another, with receptions not unlike those given a king. All this has changed the man little. In Hollywood he lives in a comfortable but adequate home. His wife, a former Oklahoma girl whom he married while working on the railroad, does the cooking. There is only a negro maid to help her. He still wears his cowboy suits, refuses to go Hollywood.

Whenever he's in Chicago or Tulsa he drops in at the radio studios where he worked, does a broadcast for them. His old friends are still his best friends. Smiley Burnette, the comic who supports him in pictures, was an old partner of WLS days and one of Gene's discoveries. Other WLS stars are used in almost every one of his pictures—Patsy Montana, the "Singing Cowgirl"; Lulu Belle, other Barn Dance personalities are taken to Hollywood and used in his pictures.

How the Hitchhiker Handles His Racket

By ODOM FANNING.

IF a college student hitchhikes 600 miles in a summer, that's news. But when at least 100 college students hitchhike six miles every day, that's routine.

Yet, to the dozens of Emory University students who depend on the "thumb" method of daily transportation to and from the university, hitchhiking has the same attributes advertised for gas—it's "quicker, cheaper, safer." And, in addition, it's more fun.

At noon and one o'clock, when the last class periods of the day end, students begin to gather at the junction of North Decatur and Oxford roads, Emory's Little Five Points. Here they hail every car going toward Atlanta, six miles away. As couples and sedans stop and pick up two or three students, other prospective riders join the ranks. Throughout the afternoon there are nearly always several students standing at the corner. Though most drivers seldom take more than four passengers, one lady recently picked up twelve in her large sedan.

Most of the students want to go to Atlanta, though some seek rides to the Little Five Points, Tenth street, or Virginia avenue sections.

An article in the Forum, August, 1938, tells the origin of hitchhiking: "While occasional vagrants have always wandered the highways, hitchhiking in its present form is little more than a decade old. It probably had its inception when the Florida boom attracted so many people with no visible means of transportation. The idea of soliciting free rides was rendered respectable when the super-realators provided immense buses for all who showed the slightest interest in an orange grove or a beach-development lot."

At least one Emory student just last year joined the Florida movement, attracted not by the real estate, but the weather. Intending to go only the six miles to Atlanta, he found that the man was driving to Miami. Stopping long enough to telephone his mother, the student traveled the more than 600 miles to the tip of Florida for a week-end trip.

Several weeks ago Keith Conley, a senior who lives at 1225 Lucile avenue, got a ride with a man who was going to Dah-longa to look over the newly discovered gold mine. Keith joined the gold rush.

Soliciting rides is democracy in action. One may ride with a man or a woman, young or old, white or colored. He may be picked up by someone in a truck; and, frequently, he is asked to help unload the truck when it reaches its destination. The writer has ridden with an insurance salesman who invited him to go into a customer's home and observe the ways of salesmanship. Recently, two Emory students were picked up by five high school girls who merely desired to meet some college boys. Though they were headed in the opposite direction, the girls turned around and took the two students all the way to town. Hitchhiker Rex Reeves, 331 South Central avenue, Hapeville, had the experience, unique for a well man, of being given a lift directly to his door in an ambulance.

Dr. H. W. Cox and Dr. J. R. McCain, presidents, respectively, of Emory and Agnes Scott College, are both thoughtful about helping student riders. "It's about the only chance I get to meet the students as individuals and chat with them," Dr. Cox says. Residents of Atlanta, and particularly of Druid Hills, are considerate of student hitchhikers.

The writer has caught a ride within 30 seconds after arriving at the corner. He has waited as long as an hour and a half without being able to get one. One morning when he was merely waiting on the corner for a friend, five successive cars stopped and offered him rides. That same afternoon, in an especial hurry to reach home, he thumbed 40 automobiles before catching the street car in disgust.

One of the most interesting phases of the hitchhiking experience is the fellowship. College presidents or janitors the drivers usually have a story to tell. About three-fourths of them want to tell it. Most conversation starts this way: The driver asks the student if he goes to Emory, what class he's in, what he's studying. No matter what the student may be majoring in, the driver will usually reply, "Well, that's a good field." Then, turn about, the student asks the driver: If he lives in town, what his business is, if he went to Emory. If either party is reticent the conversation may be very brief: "Are you going to town?" six miles of silence, and "Well, I thank you for the ride."

All students, of course, prefer heaters and radios in the cars they ride in, but they don't demand such luxuries. They fully realize that "beggars can't be choosers."

Perhaps as interesting as the rides one takes are the rides one doesn't take. Of these, the first kind is that which the student thinks he has. It begins when the driver—usually a woman—stops and says, "Yes, I'm going to town. Get in." At Little Five Points, or some other place several miles from town, the driver says, "Well, this is as far as I'm going." The second kind of untaken-ride is the one in which the student himself decides to decline the offered lift. When William Galloway, 1409 Oakland drive, had almost got into the car with a man once, he noticed a revolver on the seat. He quickly declined the ride.

Sometimes the drivers make remarks which leave their passengers uncomfortable. John Korman, 1101 St. Charles place, was unfortunate enough to get a ride with one of those women who think town is at Ponce de Leon and Lullwater roads—fully four miles from Five Points. Here John, forgetting that it is unlawful to hitchhike inside the city limits, began to thumb. Soon, Professor E. H. Rice, dean of men at Emory, stopped.

"Where are you going?" John asked after he had got into the car. "I'm going down to the police station," Dean Rice answered. "I've got to bail out some Emory students who were arrested for hitchhiking in the city limits!"

The New Shoes for Spring Set Keynote for Color

By YOLANDE GWIN.

WHEN you step out in the spring parade with your new high-heeled shoes, you can thank King Louis XV for this bit of fashion.

This French King lacked the height compatible with his dignity as monarch, so he endeavored to add the inches denied him by nature by resorting to heels of conspicuous height on his buckled shoes.

And Louis XV was not sensitive to the subject, for he had the heels of bright red, in marked contradiction to the black of the shoe fabric. In other words, he made of necessity a decorative feature and established a fashion which was immediately copied by the courtiers and the nobility of France and then spread throughout the world of elegance everywhere.

So as the 1940 shoe parade gets under way footwear will be more than a footnote in the spring mode. Definite originality marks the styles for every occasion.

Some of the highlights follow: There is a swing toward back decoration. Shoes are now being ventilated with dainty cut-out heel and side sections, leaving enough back to retain the heel snugly. The reptilian family are in the forefront and alligator, lizard, crocodile, watersnake and simulated versions of them will be grained on calf.

Patent—another top honor contender, divides allegiance between use for complete shoes and in unions that stress a distinctive shiny-and-dull duo, while gabardine models and faulle feature deff draped insects that add a proper dressy touch of costumes of more formal mien.

Suedes are still good, while lightweight calf and kid are definitely set to continue as prime favorites.

Dressy occasions continue to call for sandals. One of the newest themes shows a high collar-like strap for the ankle, and an intricate series of interjoined pieces for toe and heel.

Heels introduce more variety in their heights and shapes than in any previous year. You may compromise on any height you fancy, for heels will click from platforms to new spike attitudes.

Shoes are designed like tiny kegs, and little tri-cornored heels indicate the daring with which designers are enlivening styles. For you who desire sophistication, there is a clever corset-back model—laced up the back in a delightful simulation of Grandmother's "armor."

There will be a lot of color, but the spring lineup shows very practical hues, such as a turf tan oxford with brown "mud-guards" and upper trim, or a black patent sandal stitched in red.

You won't resist playing when you see the new playshoes and you will start planning for that annual vacation right away. Rubber composition soles, lighter in weight than formerly, add new talking points to play shoes. Most of these casual types highlight soft toe sections, especially the moccasin front, which is slated for general approval.

Wedge shoes with soles of brilliant red kid and tops of Paris blue buck, piped in red and with a red drawstring around the top will embark you gaily on that American Spring which fashion advises will be here, with patriotic colors flagging interest from head to foot.

Putting her best foot forward Miss Louisa Robert giving a cabana pump a studied eye while in the inset is a rolled bow front pump in patent leather.

Miss Mac Mooney shows her comfort in multicolored butterfly sandals. In the inset are California wedge with window models. This type is very new for spring and summer.

WHEN JUSTICE TRIUMPHED

Ne'er-Do-Well Staged Fatal $2,600,000 Texas Mail Robbery

By PETER LEVINS.

TWILIGHT was settling over Dallas, Texas. Down Jackson street a steady stream of traffic moved westward toward suburban Oak Cliff. Tired workers had turned their steps homeward, deserting downtown Dallas en masse. The date was Friday, January 14, 1921.

In the registry room of the Jackson street post office, not far from the Union Terminal, three mail clerks, George Street, Albert E. Smith and Jane Cullum, were sorting an unusually heavy—and valuable—shipment of registered mail which was scheduled to leave town on the 7 o'clock train. By 6:45 the work was done, the bags packed and ready. Then—

"Up with your hands!" The order came from a man standing at the barred window of the registry room. He had a gun in each hand and they were pointed at the clerks.

"Quick! Up with them! And don't make a move!" They raised their hands. Now guns appeared at other windows. The door to the registry room opened and a small, swarthy man entered, gun in hand. At the same instant Smith made a rash break for the general mailing room, where scores of employees were at work. One shot tumbled him over, and on top of that the firing became general.

George Street managed to pull Miss Cullum behind a big case, then he himself was felled by a bullet in the back. Another bullet struck a calendar over the crouching girl's head. Several shots crashed through the partition which separated this department from the mailing room proper.

"For God's sake, cut it out!" the robber in the registry room shouted to his four companions. "Do you want to kill me?"

"Let's get these bags out of here," the small man said nervously. "We've got to act fast."

They dragged three bags out and made a dash for the stairs. At the landing they were joined by another ally. Together they raced for a large touring car, and a few moments later were tearing eastward. As the police went into action, Clerks Smith and Street were removed to a hospital in serious condition. Another casualty was Anderson Moore, a colored porter. He had lost a finger during the shooting, although he'd been 100 yards away in the mailing room.

The first officers on the scene, Detectives Walter Hanson and W. E. Carpenter, got their best information about the robbers from C. C. Grasty, a postal clerk, who had seen their car in front of the post office before they entered. It was a dark touring car, he said, with yellow wheels. He noticed that it was parked facing east, whereas most other cars faced west.

"As soon as I heard the shooting, I dashed around the front of the building," he said. "The car was still parked there, with the motor idling, and there was nobody in it. I got the idea that I would ruin their plans if I drove away in the car, so I got in."

"But then a thin young fellow ran out carrying two guns. He dropped one and didn't bother to pick it up. He told me to get the hell out of the car or he'd drill me. I got out. Then the others came with the mail bags. I didn't get such a good look at them, but I'm sure I'd know that thin fellow if I ever saw him again."

Soon two postal inspectors, Captain C. W. B. Long and L. M. Kinsell, arrived to take charge of the investigation.

They learned from E. D. Pearce, a postal employee, that the license number of the car was 511-189. Another clerk, Oscar Miller, handed over the gun which the look-out had dropped. It was a .45 gun of popular make, with nothing to distinguish it from any other.

WOUNDED CLERK

MAKES STATEMENT

Another post office employee, it developed, had jumped into his own car and taken off in pursuit of the robbers. But he'd lost the trail because, just ahead of him, another car persistently blocked his way and delayed him at intersections. He recalled that it was a Dodge coupe.

At Baylor hospital, George Street dictated what was to prove a dying statement. In this he held of the holdup, and mentioned that the robbers wore blue suits. He said the man who entered the registry room weighed about 165 pounds, but he could give no further description of the criminals.

Said Mayor Frank Wozencraft, already harried by a general crime wave in Dallas: "This is the most dastardly crime in the history of this city. I want this case cracked if it's the last thing this police department does."

Every available local officer under the leadership of Acting Chief of Police J. H. Tanner, joined in the hunt. Police departments throughout northeast Texas were notified. But the evening passed without a further trace of the robbers. They had staged an efficient, if bloody, stickup, and appeared to have covered their tracks very well.

At midnight Tanner got a call from Captain Pat Ryan of the Fort Worth police.

"I may have a tip for you," said Ryan. "We're holding a man who might be wanted for that robbery of yours. We found him buried under a wrecked car. His pal had died in the crash. I suggest you take a look at our prisoner."

"What makes you think—"

"They had bankrolls on them, wrapped in Federal Reserve Bank hands!" "What kind of car were they in?" Tanner shouted. "Buick—a touring car with yellow wheels."

Tanner's eyes gleamed. "Hold him, Pat! We're coming over!"

The acting chief started at once for Fort Worth, accompanied by the Mayor and various other officials and detectives. At Fort Worth they learned that the prisoner, booked as John Doe, had thus far refused to talk, asserted the cops had nothing on him. But as soon as Tanner laid eyes on the bedraggled and bloody captive, he recognized him.

"Hello, Shilo!" he greeted. The suspect started, then relaxed and nodded.

"Yeah, You're right. I'm Shilo Scrivner." Four years before this, Tanner had chased Shilo Scrivner through the murky bottoms of the Trinity River after a single-handed payroll holdup of Sanger's department store. The officer had caught his man and returned the loot, $1,434, to the store. Scrivner had been sentenced to 10 years for the payroll job and 35 more for sticking up a drug store. Subsequently he'd been paroled.

Fort Worth officers explained that they found Scrivner pinned beneath the wreckage of a car on Fort Worth road. His dead companion had already been identified as Pat Murphy, alias Rufus Clements, alias W. W. Matthews, a criminal with a long police record, who had escaped from the Texas penitentiary no less than three times. Soon Scrivner was on his way back to Dallas. Chief Tanner thought over various ways to get him to talk. He realized that this would not be easy in this instance.

"You seem to be working under an unlucky star," the officer remarked.

"Maybe," the prisoner said.

"Got the rest of the money well hid?"

"I don't think it'll get away," Scrivner replied, sniffling a bit.

"It may not," said Tanner, "but neither will you, Shilo."

The officer lapsed into silence. Twenty minutes later he suddenly said, "Those boys you shot up are in bad condition, Shilo. If they should die—"

"They won't."

"But if they do, I'm only saying if they do, you, being the boss of this job—"

"I wasn't the boss," Scrivner blurted. "It was a guy from Dallas."

Tanner pressed his advantage. "Go on, Shilo. Talk—and talk fast. It's your only chance. Who planned this job?"

"I don't know his name."

Tanner snorted scornfully. "Still the same old Shilo, eh? Well, you know best."

"I'm not holding out on you. I don't know his name, but I can tell you where he lives. It's a big two-story house. The street begins with 'J.'"

The officer thought of Jefferson avenue, so they drove there. But Scrivner betrayed no sign of identification. "The house isn't here," he said. "I'd know it as soon as I saw it, and it isn't here."

They drove to headquarters, where Tanner called for a city directory.

CALL AT HOUSE ON JEFFRIES STREET

"Shilo," he said, "I'll read off the names of streets beginning with 'J.' This'll be your chance to help us." He began to call off the streets. . . . Jewett. . . . Jester. . . .

Jerry's court. . . . Jerome. . . . Jeffries. . . . "That's it—Jeffries!" exclaimed the prisoner.

Presently Tanner and the Mayor stood at the door of a house on Jeffries street. It was not quite dawn. As the door opened, they kept their hands on guns in their coat pockets.

But the person in the doorway was a woman about 35 or so.

"What is it? What do you want?" Her voice was soft and refined.

"Who lives here, ma'am?" Tanner asked.

Entrance to United States Post Office on Jackson street, Dallas, Texas, where band of robbers staged during theft of registered mail. One of the clerks was fatally shot.

"Mr. Rowan," she replied at once. "I'm Mrs. Rowan."

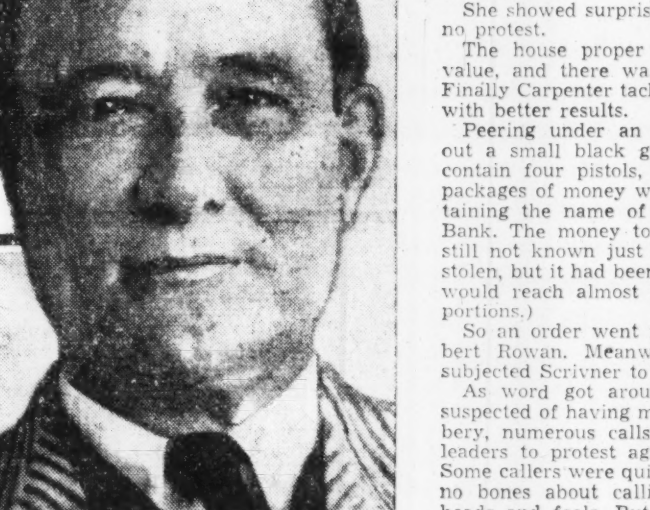

"Which Rowan?"

"Albert Rowan."

"Son of C. T. Rowan?"

She nodded, smiling, though still puzzled.

"Both Tanner and the Mayor knew the Rowans. The father, C. T. Rowan, a retired merchant, had risen from poverty to riches and was one of Dallas' leading citizens, owning a building named after him on one of the city's most valuable pieces of property. The son, Albert, now 42, handsome, polished and educated, had been a captain in the army. Mayor Wozencraft, himself a major, knew him well. The Mayor decided to take charge of the delicate situation.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Rowan," he said. "I'm afraid there's been a mistake. We're terribly sorry to have disturbed you."

They returned to the car feeling fools. Once in the car, they took out their feeling on Scrivner, calling him a double-crosser and a liar.

"I tell you that's the house!" he insisted. "Yes, and I'm Marshall Foch!" Tanner retorted.

The police car proceeded toward headquarters.

"If you'll take one more look, I can prove it," Scrivner said. "We almost tore the garage door off as we backed the car out. The garage is back of the house."

Tanner said nothing.

With Scrivner locked up, the acting chief returned to his office, where Detectives Hanson and Carpenter were awaiting him.

They reported no progress. Tanner in turn told of the night's events. A morning paper lay on his desk before him, and the headline read, "Police Baffled as Robbers Vanish Without a Trace."

"Shilo has a sense of humor, all right," the chief remarked. "Told us the master mind of this job lived on Jeffries street—then led us to the home of Albert Rowan, son of C. T.!"

"Rowan!" ejaculated Carpenter.

Tanner stared at him. "Why do you say it that way?"

"Well, it may sound crazy," said the detective, "but—Shilo may be right at that. It happens that Walt and I met Rowan last night. His car had bogged down about eight miles out of town—on the west road leading to Fort Worth."

It had happened about 11 p. m., he said. The two detectives had been scouring the west road and had come upon Rowan, whom Carpenter recognized, and a dark-complexioned man named Ben Luna in Rowan's disabled Dodge coupe. The detectives had taken them to a garage in Grand Prairie where Rowan gave orders to have the coupe towed into town. From Grand Prairie the stranded pair had caught an interurban to Dallas.

"During the drive to the garage Rowan said, 'How's tricks?' and I told him we were looking for the gang that cracked the post office," Carpenter related. "Rowan asked if any one had been killed and I told him two clerks were pretty badly wounded. Then he said he hoped we'd get the bandits."

Tanner rubbed his jaw. "This doesn't make sense," he said. "But I think we'd better check a little more on Shilo's story."

Carpenter and Hanson drove to the house on Jeffries street. Carpenter walked through the yard and found the garage door hanging on a solitary screw. Then he went to the front door.

"Sorry, ma'am," he told Mrs. Rowan when she appeared, "but we're searching the house."

She showed surprise and pain, but made no protest.

The house proper revealed nothing of value, and there was no sign of Rowan. Finally Carpenter tackled the back porch—with better results.

Peering under an old stove, he fished out a small black grip which proved to contain four pistols, all loaded, and four packages of money wrapped in bands containing the name of the Federal Reserve Bank. The money totaled $1,710. (It was still not known just how much had been stolen, but it had been hinted that the total would reach almost record-breaking proportions.)

So an order went forth to bring in Albert Rowan. Meanwhile Inspector Long subjected Scrivner to a severe grilling.

As word got around that Rowan was suspected of having masterminded the robbery, numerous calls came in from civic leaders to protest against this accusation. Some callers were quite incensed and made no bones about calling the police lunkheads and fools. But Tanner and his associates were resolved to go ahead. Rowan must be questioned.

That same morning Inspector Long succeeded in getting a long statement from Scrivner.

According to this confession, the plot had been hatched at the St. James Hotel, where Rowan and Ben Luna both had rooms. (These two, it developed, had been dabbling in gambling and bootlegging operations.) Rowan had instructed the conspirators—Scrivner, Murphy, Luna, George Meyers, Charles Wheeler and a man known to Scrivner only as "Johnny"—in the roles they were to play at the post office. Rowan had even provided some pistols.

SPLIT OPEN BAGS AT ROWAN HOME

The master-mind's own job was to serve as lookout, and to trail the touring car in his own garage in order to block pursuit. He was also to stand by for any emergency.

"It's a cinch, boys," the confession quoted Rowan as saying. "I've gone over the whole ground and you can't miss. We ought to knock off at least a million bucks."

Following arrangements, the gang had taken the Rowan home after the robbery. Rowan himself came in soon after their arrival. (He had seen to it that his wife would not be home.)

"Well, boys," he said, smiling delightedly, "you got clean away. I followed you, and I know."

The mail bags were split open at once. Scrivner said that there were $4,000 in cash, $50,000 in mutilated—and therefore valueless—money and "millions of dollars in Liberty bonds." It had been agreed that each conspirator would give Rowan 20 per cent. The five actual robbers got $800 each, and each gave Rowan $100 of his share.

To the gang's chagrin, most of the bonds were of such staggering denominations as to make them just about uncashable.

"We realized that it would be dangerous to keep the bags and Liberty bonds in the house," Scrivner told Inspector Long, "so Rowan delegated me and Murphy to hide the bonds until everything blew over. We did this—and a little while afterward the car overturned."

"Where did you hide the bonds?" Long asked.

Scrivner grinned as he replied: "Over by Lake Dallas. Want me to go help you find it?"

Long returned the grin. "No. I'm afraid we fight have to be finding you again if we let you out of here."

The postal inspector and a group of other officers set out for Fort Worth. After locating the wrecked touring car, they began to retrace their steps, combing the woods along the highway. Shortly afterward a carload of reporters, hot on Long's trail, pulled up and joined the hunt. Presently Gilbert Kneeland of the Times Herald tripped over something in the brush.

What he tripped over was a bag containing more than $2,500,000 worth of Liberty bonds!

That evening Attorney Lee Perkinson phoned Tanner to say that he had Rowan in his custody. "I give you my word," he said, "that I'll bring him and Luna to your office Monday morning." Then he hung up.

Obviously, if Rowan were guilty, then he would need time to prepare his defense—and to establish an alibi. Tanner decided to forestall that, if possible. His men found several witnesses to help incriminate the suspect.

M. A. Morris, a pawnbroker, declared that Rowan had redeemed two revolvers on the afternoon of the robbery.

Mrs. Charles Skaggs, a neighbor, said she had seen men leaving the Rowan home that afternoon.

And, most important of all, Mrs. Dudley

SLAYS JAILER, AND DIES Scene after Charles Emmet Gaines' attempt to escape jail after his conviction for murder. He killed a jailer but was himself shot down by a deputy sheriff. His body (arrow) lies in doorway at right.

Ferris was positive that she had seen Rowan airing his Boston bulldog in front of the post office at 6:20 p. m. the same day, thus corroborating Scrivner's statement that Rowan had served as lookout. Mrs. Ferris said she waved to him but he had chosen not to see her.

Attorney Perkinson kept his word. Federal indictments were returned against seven men, three of whom were still missing. The charge was for robbery, but when George Street died of pneumonia, on January 26, the local authorities indicted Rowan for murder. (Scrivner was not indicted on this charge for the time being, as he would serve as star witness for the state.)

Within three weeks, Rowan, Scrivner and Luna went on trial before Federal Judge James C. Wilson on the robbery charge and were found guilty. Rowan and Luna got 25 years each, and Scrivner's sentence was withheld pending his further services in the prosecution.

Rowan was tried on the murder count at Abilene, having won a change of venue. Another conviction brought him 40 years more.

That left three members of the gang still to be tracked down.

Eventually, after days and weeks of hunting, Inspector Long found the house in Fort Worth in which the robbers had lived. The trail had long since turned cold, but by diligent work he located an expressman who had hauled away a trunk. This was traced to Houston.

A double guard was placed at the express office, awaiting the claimant of the trunk. None appeared, so the trunk was opened. This developed nothing except the fact that Charles Wheeler, one of the missing men, was actually Charles Emmet Gaines. This discovery in turn led to the home of Virginia Gaines, his wife, who lived in Dallas, and a check on her mail led to Gaines' arrest in Indianapolis.

Gaines was convicted and sentenced to death. While in jail, pending his appeal, he and another convict made a bid for freedom on September 21, 1923. They killed a jailer, but a deputy sheriff got Gaines with a bullet through the brain.

Two to go. . . .

Meyers fell into the hands of the San Francisco police, charged with the robbery of a jewel salesman, shortly after Gaines died. Oddly enough, he had been hiding under the skirts of the government itself, for he had acted as a forest ranger. He got a life term for the jewel robbery and was then removed to Texas to face the earlier rap.

Meanwhile, Scrivner had not been sentenced because he had proved invaluable as a witness. Released pending disposition of his case, he had gone back to robbery and got 10 years at Huntsville. He was there when Meyers was returned.

Notified that he would once more be needed as a witness, Scrivner issued an ultimatum. "Get me out of this bank robbery charge, and cancel the mail robbery rap, and I'll testify," he said. "Do this, or else."

Result—Meyers was not prosecuted, but was returned to Folsom prison in California.

Next, Governor "Ma" Ferguson granted Scrivner a parole.

The federal authorities, much annoyed, grabbed Shilo as he left Huntsville. They took him before Federal Judge William Atwell and told him they wanted the prisoner sentenced on the post office robbery conviction. Judge Atwell ruled that, since the deferred sentence had not been carried over on the court's minutes from session to session, Scrivner could not be sentenced at all.

So they had to let him go, although it wasn't any time at all before another robbery landed the fellow back in Huntsville.

That left "Johnny," who was never found. One report had it that he fled to Paraguay, that he joined the revolutionary army there, and was killed in action.

Whatever his fate, certain it is that a pot of ill fortune was brewed that evil day in 1921 at the old St. James Hotel in Dallas.

The Colonel Designs A New Indian Legend

By TOM HAM.

"NOW, if I were aiming to instigate a yarn for the Indian legend trade, you can bet that I would cook up a corker. None of your Lover's Leap stuff for me!"

Thus spake that barnacled old frontiersman, Colonel Etain Shrdlu, as he dabbed a bit of varnish on the barked shin of his mahogany leg. He had just delivered himself of a jeremiad concerning the sad and stereotyped state of the Great Redskin Fable, and the old cerebellum was reaching out for more worlds to conquer. We listened.

"That fiddlefaddle about the Gogaw princess doing a jack-knife off the bluff to die with her lover when her Cupid-baiting old man finds them pitching clandestine woo is passe," he grumbled.

We egged him on: "Maybe you would make some changes, then?" And he snorted.

"Some changes! I'll say I'd make some changes!" The bar he roared and began to spin this yarn:

"On the shores of Gitchee-Goomee, by the shining big sea water, once upon a time lived lissome little lulu labeled Goldilocks, daughter of old Blitzkrieg, boss of the Bansees. And just across the swamp from the Bansees village dwelt tall, dark and handsome Hepcat, a rising young buck in the buckskin of the Jitterbugs."

"Now there'd been some trouble between the Jitterbug nation and the Bansees—an unfortunate matter of horse-theiving, the details of which I do not remember. Suffice it to say that Chief Buglebeak, sire of Hepcat, enjoyed the most malevolent brand of despicability which Blitzkrieg, a Republican, was able to conjure up within his buzzardly heart."

"So you can grasp the antipathy which stewed in the Blitzkrieg breast when a little bird told him one day (Note: His tax-ridden tribe had given him the bird early in his administration, the colonel explained) that his own personal daughter, one Goldilocks, was pining for the stalwart Robert Taylor of the Jitterbugs, nee Hepcat. And that on this very night the gal is dating her extracurricular sugarpie beneath the pokeberry tree on the mountain."

"So papa calls together a squad of his strongarm boys and gives them a load of the situation."

"And so, with stealth born of aborigine acrimony, the gorillas lope off into the woods, bound for the forest glade wherein the little tomato and her chum are wilting the foliage with their Romeoing and Julietting."

"Well, everything goes off according to the menu until, as they are approaching the rendezvous, one of the sneaker-uppers steps on a rotten footlog and crashes down an abandoned WPA storm sewer. There is some commotion occasioned by this whisper: "WHO WUZ THAT?"

"One of his henchmen answers: "That wuz you, ya slewfooted dope!"

"Which only adds to the chief's confusion as he picks himself up with the aid of some choice Bansees expletives.

"Now fortunately for our hero and heroine, the sound of Blitzkrieg's floundering has been wafted to the ears of young Hepcat, and he has whispered low to Goldilocks a tender warning: 'Inxay, Toots—the British are coming.' Whereupon Goldilocks has lit out for cover—so when Blitzkrieg and his buddies bust through the underbrush with a bull-moosish bellow, Hepcat is sitting there alone, reading The Constitution funnies."

(Good old Shrdlu—always a plug for the paper!)

"The chief sets up a howl: 'Who was that lady I seen you with tonight?'"

"And Hepcat, a gentleman and a scholar, gives him that immortal line from Chaucer: 'Nuts, my dear sir, to you!'"

"This nettles the old gent, and he makes a rush for the nonchalant Don Juan of the Jitterbugs."

"I isn't quite clear what immediately followed, but from sources close to the administration it was learned that a struggle of titanic proportions ensued between Chief Blitzkrieg and his posthumous son-in-law-elect. And in the alcoholic bewilderment that was his at the moment, the chief seized an arm which he assumed to be that of his adversary and forthwith flung the body attached thereto over the steep side."

"This, however, proved shortly afterward to be a grievous error in identity. For when the roll was called, it became apparent that Blitzkrieg had not seized Hepcat's arm—but his own—and had summarily disposed of himself by inadvertent suicide."

"Whereupon little Goldilocks runs out from where she's been hiding, her great, big, wonderful eyes drooping as if her little heart had split wide open. She stops, gazes fixedly at Hepcat, and cries out: 'My father! He screams demurely, 'He's DEAD!'"

"Hepcat flicks a fleck of imaginary dust from his bronzed shoulder and confirms her suspicion: "Dead as a doornail, Toots!"

"So Goldilocks, a strange light stealing into her orbs, reverently tiptoes to the brink of the precipice. She grabs ahold of a sapling, leans over and views the mortal remains of her father, the late Chief Blitzkrieg, splattered over the landscape below. Then with great tears coursing down her apple cheeks, she puckers her cherry lips and—

"PHFFFFFFTTTTT!"

"That damsel, sir, cut loose with one of the most fervent—the most touching—the most stentorian Bronx cheers that ever sprang from the lips of woman to go reverberating down the Hills of Habersham and the Valleys of Hall."

"To make a long story short, she and Hepcat hop into his waiting encyclopedia and speed away to hunt them up a parson. And to this very day, sir, she's sittin' there cookin' his collards at a fire before a cozy little FHA wigwam on the shores of Gitchee-Goomee, with a fine crop of papposes hanging from the rafters."

HE TALKED. Shilo Scrivner, arrested after he and a confederate wrecked their car, finally confessed to Tanner and involved son of a leading citizen.

PARTNER. Ben Luna, in whose hotel room the plot was hatched.

VIENNA— The Home of Cooking —by— SALLY SAVER

VIENNA of pre-World War days was a city notable for good food and good music. Why the two went along together no one quite knows, but in all the world there was no city of that period, or for a long time back, which could challenge Vienna as a cultural center and a city of excellent foods. It was famed for its Schuberts and its Brahms, and for its chicken paprika, wiener schnitzel and strudel. A giant city with three million population before the World War, its inhabitants, unless they were rich, lived in small apartments, and spent their evenings at the numerous restaurants which were such an important part of the city's life and culture. Franz Schubert spent most of the evenings of his brief life in the restaurants of Vienna and on a menu he scribbled the notes of his immortal "Hark, Hark the Lark." In these restaurants the great Brahms literally played for his supper!

Vienna is the home city of an Atlanta woman, Miss Margaret Hecht; and a chat with her reveals that old Vienna left an indelible mark upon her life and interests. She was born and grew up there, as did her mother, and appropriately enough Miss Hecht studied music and became an opera singer. As a little girl she learned, too, to cook and today in Atlanta, many miles and some years removed from old Vienna, Miss Hecht combines these two main interests. She teaches music all day, then evenings and days when duties are done she cooks, recreating the dishes which she knew as a child. Miss Hecht loves to cook and is justifiably proud of her cooking. Friends of hers had told me that invitations to her home are received with special delight because she is an accomplished hostess and always serves delicious foods which she, herself, prepares. When I called at her home, it was nearing the dinner hour and though Miss Hecht was in street clothes and perfectly coiffured, her kitchen was neat as a pin and on her stove a heavy kettle steamed, emitting tantalizing odors.

"Please let me see what you are cooking," I begged, and lifting the lid I saw the real Viennese paprika chicken—rich juices bubbled around luscious-looking pieces of chicken.

Hastily replacing the lid, she said: "Oh, I almost forgot my cookies!" and as she opened the oven door, I was right behind her peering over her shoulder. A warm, delicious fragrance met my nostrils. "Nut cookies," she explained, and as one baking sheetful was browned, I got to sample them. They were smallish, about the size of the hole in a doughnut cutter, quite crisp, rich tasting and delicious. The recipe is a very old one, as are most of Miss Hecht's Viennese recipes, having been handed down from generation to generation. Many of them are contained in an old cookbook which was Miss Hecht's grandmother's. So long used, this old cookbook is falling apart, but Miss Hecht still cherishes it and it lays on a cupboard shelf for ready reference, for even as good a cook as Miss Hecht must refer to recipes for accurate measurements.

Asked for several of her favorite recipes so that some of us, far removed from a city which gave to the modern world many of its most illustrious names, could cook some of the foods which they ate, Miss Hecht generously gave me these:

Wiener Schnitzel (Breaded Veal Steak)

1 1-2 pounds Veal breast.
1-2 inch thick. 1 tablespoon water.
1-2 teaspoons salt. 3-4 cup fine bread crumbs.
1 egg, slightly beaten. Lemon slices.

Cut veal in several pieces and flatten with meat pounder; sprinkle with salt, roll in flour, dip in egg mixed with water and roll in crumbs. Fry in hot, deep fat until browned. Serve with lemon slices.

Viennese Nut Cookies

1-4 pound shortening. 1 cup flour.
1 1-2 cups nut meats, ground. 1 teaspoon vanilla, or almond flavoring or flavor with brandy or sherry.
3-4 cup sugar.

Mix all ingredients and place in refrigerator to chill. (This mixture may be kept for days before cooking.)

When ready to bake, roll out dough and cut, placing cookies on a baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven until delicately browned.

Liver Dumplings in Beef Broth.

Beef or Veal Liver. Bread crumbs and 1 egg flour.
Minced onion. Seasonings.

Remove fibers and scrape liver. Add 1 whole egg, a little finely minced onion, salt and pepper to taste, and enough fine bread crumbs and flour to make mixture hold shape. Shape into tiny balls and drop into boiling beef broth. This is a soup.)

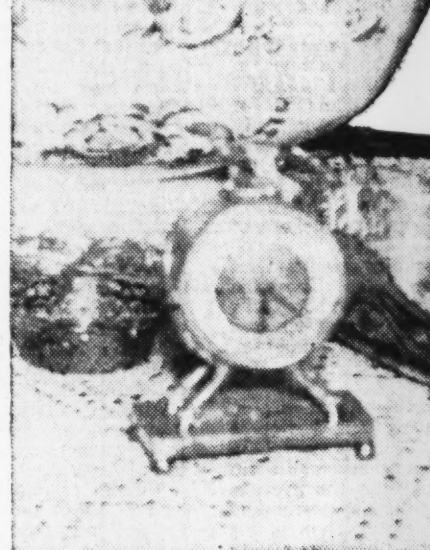

Paprika Chicken or Veal

2 young hens or 2 pounds veal. 2 tablespoons flour.
4 large onions. Salt and Paprika to taste.
3 tablespoons shortening or butter.

Unjoint chicken or if using veal, cut in pieces suitable for serving. Brown meat in cooking fat, laying slices of onion across meat. When browned, add salt, cover with 1 pint of hot water and simmer slowly in covered kettle until tender. Add plenty of paprika and thicken gravy with the flour. A little sweet or sour cream may be added to gravy, if desired. Serve with egg noodles or dumplings.

String Beans, Viennese.

Cut young beans in long thin pieces and boil in salt water until tender. Make sauce: 2 tablespoons flour, browned in 2 tablespoons butter, add 1 to 1-2 cups milk or water, juice of 1-2 lemons or that much vinegar, and a pinch of sugar. Heat beans to boiling point in this sauce and serve immediately.

Surrounded by antique bowl, clock, cups, glassware and other beautiful pieces which were her grandmother's or belonged to other of her ancestors, home-loving, music-loving Miss Margaret Hecht seems happy indeed. She is holding an old cookbook which her grandmother used as a guide in creating famous old Viennese dishes. Miss Hecht now uses the cookbook which is nearly 100 years old.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Flagstad Sings Again Here Saturday

KIRSTEN FLAGSTAD, who is universally acclaimed as "incomparable" and as the "greatest living singer" returns to Atlanta for a concert at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night in the city auditorium. Her concert is one in the All-Star Concert Series.

This is the third season Flagstad has appeared in Atlanta. Her first appearance here was several seasons ago when she gave two consecutive concerts at the Georgia Theater, and again two seasons ago when she sang in the Fox Theater. Each time her success was overwhelming. Atlantans simply worshipped the glorious beauty of her voice, and because of these past triumphs her return has been impatiently awaited by thousands who consider it a privilege of privileges to hear her.

This may be the last opportunity Atlantans will have of hearing Flagstad in some time, because she has definitely stated that if the war is on next fall she will not return to America next year, and she is making no contracts for either opera or concert in America next season.

Flagstad's was a family for whom music was the staff of life. She was born in Hamar, Norway, a short distance from Oslo. Her father was a conductor in Oslo. Her mother is a pianist and coach for both individual singers and chorus groups. She has two brothers, Ole, a conductor, and Lasse, a concert pianist. Her sister, Karen Marie, is a singer.

Kirsten began to study the piano as a child. Her beginning as a singer was largely accidental. At the age of 10, on her own volition, she learned the role of Elsa in "Lohengrin." Then she added another role—Aida. But formal vocal lessons did not begin until she was 16. She made her debut when 18.

Until 1933, however, all of her singing was done in the Scandinavian countries, mainly in Oslo and Gothenburg. In the summer of that year she sang at the Bayreuth Festival. Attracted by her triumphs Gatti-Casazza and Arturo Bodansky signed her up for the leading soprano Wagnerian roles at the Metropolitan for the winter of 1934-35.

She swept an unprepared audience completely off its feet at her debut as Siegmund in "Die Walkure" at the Metropolitan on February 2, 1935. Since that night the "Standing Room Only" sign has been out at her every appearance at the Met.

Flagstad's program for Saturday night opens with the scene and aria "Ah, Perfido" Beethoven. This will be followed by a Brahms group, including "Von ewiger Liebe," "O wuest' ich doch den Weg zurueck," "So willet du des Armen," "Ah ein Weichen," and "Meine Diebe ist grun."

A group to be sung in Norwegian includes three songs by Grieg, "While I Wait," "Bright Night," and "A Boat Rocks To and Fro," and two by Jordan, "And See She Came," and "Autumn is Near." A group by American composers lists "Songs for Lovers," Deems Taylor; "Rain Has Fallen," Samuel Barber; "Now Like a Lantern," A. Walter Kramer; "We Have Turned Again Home," Edwin McArthur, and "With the Tide," Winter Watts.

Flagstad will close her program with a group of brilliant Strauss songs, including "Befreit," "Du meines Herzens Kronlein," and "Wie sollten wir geheim sie halten."

Edwin McArthur, who has also become an Atlanta favorite, will be at the piano again for Flagstad's concert. One of his songs will be sung.

East Point Club To Present "Joy" Program.

"Joy in Music" will be the subject for the program to be presented by the East Point Music Lovers' Club at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the First Methodist church in East Point, continuing the selected outline for the year, "Emotions Expressed in Music."

Mrs. William A. Simpson, program chairman for the month, will present Sylvia Schillinger, mezzo-soprano, and soloist at the Gordon Street Presbyterian church, and Nell Thurman, well known pianist, and member of the Young Artists' Club, in a program especially built to illustrate joy in music.

Mrs. Martha L. Gowder is president of the club, and Mrs. Rochelle Weldon is chairman of the year's programs.

Kirsten Flagstad, Norwegian dramatic soprano, whose voice is of incomparable beauty, and who is recognized as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian roles, will appear in concert at the city auditorium at 8:30 Saturday night.

Schubert Festival Concluding.

The Schubert Festival, in progress at Shorter College in Rome since January 3, will conclude with two programs today and tomorrow night.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon, in the college auditorium, Robert Sheldon and Thomas Thompson, pianists, will play the "Sonata (Grand Duo) in C Major, Opus 140," by Schubert. This is probably the first time this work has been played in the south. The Shorter Choral Club, under the direction of Annina Mueller, will give the last half of the program, singing "Psalm XXIII," "Love," "Night," "Angels' Omnipotence," all by Schubert, of course.

The concert which was scheduled for last Sunday afternoon was postponed until tomorrow night at 8:15, due to illness of Miss Mueller last week. This program will feature Miss Mueller, who is a mezzo-soprano, singing Schubert songs, accompanied by Mr. Sheldon, and faculty and students of the piano department playing impromptu and moments musicals.

Junior Division Program.

The Junior division of the Atlanta Music Club, Helen Boykin, chairman, held its January meeting last Saturday afternoon at the Studio Arts building. Young Atlanta musicians presenting the program were Peggy Anne Pangborn, Arnold White-man, Mary Gartrell, Helen Jean Roberts, Beverly Bottoms, Ora Jean Iveyvalm, Sue Willard Andrews, Lois Harp, Shirley Anne Fox, Toy Watkins, Howard Candler, Angelo Cramer, Caroline Laurent and Barbara Macris.

Bonita Crowe's Songs Successful.

Two songs by Bonita Crowe, Atlanta musician and composer, which were released last week by Michael Keane, Inc., 113 West 57th street, New York, are meeting with instant success, according to reports Mrs. Crowe is receiving. These are the first songs of Mrs. Crowe's that have been published by a national publisher.

"The One Hundred and Twenty-First Psalm" is a beautiful sacred song, the accompaniment of which is equally adaptable for organ or piano, and should become a favorite church solo.

The lyric, "Journey's End," is a rare gem of other loveliness. The words are by Atlanta's own poet, Dr. Anderson Scruggs. Doubtless it will be extensively used in concert and on radio, for it has definite appeal.

Studio Club Gives Musicale Monday Night.

The Studio Club will entertain its members and friends at a musicale at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the High Museum of Art.

Atlanta artists presenting the program will be Elizabeth Orr, pianist; Robert Guy, baritone, accompanied by Mrs. William Elsas; and an instrumental quintet comprised of Elizabeth Jackson and Lorelle Tait, violinist; Senta Mueller, viola; Eleanor Hodges, cello, and Mozelle Horton Young, piano. Julian Harris is president of the Studio Club, and Mrs. William Elsas is chairman of the music group.

Third Annual Festival At University of Georgia.

The University of Georgia Music Department, of which Hugh Hodgson is the head, extends an invitation to the musicians of the state to the third annual music festival in Athens on February 1 and 2. The Roth String Quartet will be featured artists of the festival. There is no admission fee to any of the concerts, this being the university's tribute to Georgia's own musicians.

At 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, February 1, the Roth Quartet will open the festival with a concert in Memorial Hall. A concert will be given in the chapel that night, followed by a reception.

At 11:30 a. m., February 2, the Roth Quartet will play again. At 3:30 that afternoon there will be a round-table discussion for music teachers of the state, followed by a half hour of music by university students. That night, in the chapel, the Roth Quartet, with Hugh Hodgson, pianist, as assisting artist, will give a concert.

Szigeti, Hungarian Violinist, Inspiration for Composers.

Joseph Szigeti, the world renowned Hungarian violinist who will be heard in concert at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday night, January 23, presented by the Atlanta Music Club, was born in Budapest.

Szigeti made his first public appearance at 13 at the Royal Academy of his native city. Appearance in Berlin and Dresden followed, then a debut at Queen's Hall, London, where his success was so great that he remained in England for several years to come. In 1925 he made his first American tour, introduced by Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Although Szigeti's fame as an exponent of the classics is world-wide, he has introduced many of the new works of the violin repertoire and has received innumerable dedications of compositions from composers of today. Three modern concert—those of Busoni, Hamilton, Hartzy and Casella—were written for him, as well as a work of Ernest Bloch, a rhapsody for violin and orchestra on Hungarian folk tunes by Bela Bartok, and a sonata for solo violin by Ysaye.

Jooss Ballet to Give Concert At Erlanger January 27.

The Jooss Ballet, that original and inspiringly fresh ballet which has become such an international favorite, will be presented in concert at the Erlanger theater at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night, January 27. The Atlanta Music Club is sponsoring the concert, but it is an extra attraction, for which special tickets will be sold.

Note the change of place from the first announcement (the City Auditorium) to the Erlanger theater. This change was made so that full advantage of lighting effects could be used.

The Jooss Ballet is considered everywhere as magnificent entertainment, an incomparable dance ensemble, vibrant with youth, charm and beauty. All their dance productions are absolutely original.

Their Atlanta program offers three ballets, the first "The Big City," a ballet in three scenes by Kurt Jooss, with music by Alexander Tansman; the second, "The Seven Heroes," a comic ballet by Jooss from the fairy tale by the Brothers Grimm, and music after Henry Purcell arranged by Cohen; and the third, a ballet in two acts and six scenes, "The Prodigal Son," a legend and dance by Jooss, with music by Cohen.

Secrets of a Cathedral

Miss Seert has given us a Circle Mystery and the author of "Deeds Ill Done," which we liked horribly, again stirs us in a way which we don't like, but can't resist being stirred. You know, your hair stands, your spine crawls, you wish you were not alone, you love it.

We wish you what happens. We will have to pay the price of the book to get this satisfaction. Nonetheless, you can be told that the first murder unleashed pent-up hostilities. Mr. Marks' most recent novel, "The Days Are Fled," is suggestive of "A Tree Grown Straight." It is essentially a philosophic picture of a musician who failed to attain the distinction which his preparation promised, but who in a measure compensates through his instruction of a young genius. New York studios, study abroad, lyceum circuits, and the college campus provide the background. Aside from the deeper implications, the story has the qualities necessary to entertainment. In other words, it is a good novel, well worth reading.

VARIETY PROGRAM FOR OPPORTUNITY

The Atlanta Opportunity school is beginning the new year with a good attendance. Many students of the school held full-time jobs during the holidays and others were able to find part-time work. A large number of these students have returned to school since the opening last week, according to Major P. S. Woodward, principal.

Beginning at 8:30 in the morning, regular day classes in all departments are open until 6 p. m. daily in the central location, Spring and Baker streets. Special classes are available for employed adults who may attend school two or three days a week. In these classes any person of any age may secure training to meet his needs on the job or in his daily life. He may attend one day or five days a week as he is able. All types of commercial training are available to those who qualify. Low 2 pupils made some clocks last week and they are now learning to tell time.

High 6 pupils are looking forward to making an excursion to the Cycloorama on Friday. They are studying about Georgia.

Quite a surprise was in store for Low 6 last week. A new pupil, Milton Smith, came to the class from Honolulu. Milton gave them a better knowledge of one of the possessions of the United States. He let the children ask him questions about his native land and could certainly give interesting answers. They learned more from Milton in a day than they could have learned in weeks from a book.

Superintendent's Message

My Dear Girls and Boys:

Last week I wrote you about the importance of being financially independent. It is hard for small children to realize how important it is to develop the habit of paying our own way. I do not believe that a boy or a girl should receive anything other than a home and food and clothing from his parents without trying to give some value received for the favors which our parents have bestowed upon us. I think by cheerful manner, by the right disposition towards helping our parents, we really should show them that we are willing to pay our own way. I do not mean that we should earn the money to pay for food or clothing, but that we should pay our parents by showing a willingness to co-operate with them. I should like to mention specifically one thing this week that I hope will help towards our financial independence. We have, as you know, a little school banking system, and every school may participate in the program. I am anxious that you should think of the amount you put in this bank as something that you will keep through the years; something on which you can call in case of very great need; and something that you do not intend to spend for Christmas, or some trivial purpose. The aim and purpose of this school bank is to develop financial independence, and regardless of whether your allowance is five cents a week or 25 cents a week, some part of it should go into this school bank, and should go there "for keeps." I actually believe that if somebody had taught me this lesson when I was a child, and had told me the importance of saving some part of every dollar that I earned as a reserve for emergencies, that it would have been one of the greatest lessons that could have been taught to me in early life. I am trying to give this advice to you, and I want you to observe it.

Always Your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Five-Minute Biographies

DIAMOND JIM BRADY

He Offered a Million Dollars for a Bride.

By DALE CARNEGIE.

DIAMOND JIM BRADY, the Haroun Al Raschid of Broadway, died during the World War, and his passing robbed the Great White Way of one of its most incredible phenomena. While he lived, Brady threw the wildest parties this weary old world had seen since the days when the old Roman emperors dined on the nightingales' tongues. Sometimes he had as many as five parties whooping it up all at once in five different parts of the town. Sometimes these parties lasted for 17 riotous hours, and cost as high as a hundred thousand dollars. He was fond of presenting his guests with souvenirs to take home with them—little knick-knacks and mementoes, such as diamond brooches or diamond watches worth a thousand dollars apiece.

Diamond Jim, the good-time Charlie of Broadway, was born in a cheap flat above a saloon which his father kept on the waterfront in New York; he learned to pop the cork out of a bottle before he learned his Mother Goose. Yet he himself never drank a drop of liquor in his life. During the years when he reigned supreme on Broadway, he squandered hundreds of dollars on liquor, buying more champagne and Rhine wine than any other man in the western hemisphere. But he gave it all to his friends. While they drank themselves under the table, Diamond Jim sat by and quenched his insatiable thirst on 14 or 15 cents of root beer.

He weighed 250 pounds, and loved to eat. He devoured a 15-course dinner every night with usually two or three helpings of all the main courses. Then he would eat a pound of chocolates and take a box of peppermints along to the theater. He sent hundreds of boxes of candy to his friends each week. His candy bill alone averaged between $2,000 and $3,000 a month. He detected tea and coffee, but he had a passion for orange juice. He drank a whole gallon of orange juice before he even tucked a napkin under his bottom-most chin, and he often guzzled another whole gallon with his meal. Once he ate six chickens at a sitting. This sounds fantastic, but in his old age, when he underwent an operation, the doctors discovered that he had a stomach six times the normal size.

How did Diamond Jim Brady make his millions? He was one of the most expert salesmen that this high-pressure country ever produced. Besides, he was lucky. He got the breaks. He started selling steel cars in the early days when the railroads were equipped with wooden coaches. The country was expanding. Railroads were being flung like lariats from ocean to ocean and from Canada to the Gulf.

When he first started selling steel cars, they were still an experiment. No one wanted them. So he was given what turned out to be a phenomenal contract. This contract gave him 33 1-3 per cent commission on every car sold. Presently every railroad in the nation was clamoring for steel cars. And they had to come, hat in hand, to Diamond Jim Brady, to get them, for at that time he had no competitors. So he made $12,000,000 selling steel cars. He was a product of his age. If he had been born 50 years later and tried selling steel cars today, he might not have been able to pay his grocery bill.

Diamond Jim made himself famous from Skowhegan to Santa Fe by one of the weirdest publicity stunts ever heard of since the days of Barnum. He literally bedecked himself with diamonds. He owned a different set of jewelry for every day in the month, and he frequently changed his jewelry as often as six or seven times a day. He used to ramble down Broadway bespangled with no less than 2,548 scintillating diamonds and 19 rubies. He wore priceless shirt studs made to represent bicycles and automobiles and cuff links made like locomotives and freight cars.

DIAMOND JIM BRADY.

He had 5,000 handkerchiefs, 200 suits, 2,548 diamonds and 19 rubies. Drawn for the New Yorker by Reginald Marsh. Reproduced by permission.

He went to preposterous lengths to spend his money. He had a farm in New Jersey where, on gala occasions, the cows were milked into pails heavily plated with gold. His billiard table was inlaid with carnelians and lapis lazuli. His poker chips were made of onyx and mother-of-pearl. He paid an interior decorator a third of a million dollars to furnish his house, and every year he gave away all his furniture to his friends and bought himself new furnishings.

He presented Lillian Russell with a bicycle plated with gold and studded all over with hundreds of diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds. And when the shapely Lillian pedaled that bike up Fifth Avenue—well, things happened to the traffic!

Diamond Jim owned 5,000 handkerchiefs and 200 suits of clothes, and he never permitted himself to be seen in public without a Prince Albert and a tall silk hat. Even if he was only riding a handcar down a stretch of western track with no one but prairie dogs to see him, Diamond Jim still wore his Prince Albert coat and his stovepipe hat and carried his diamond-studded cane.

Diamond Jim's stomach was six times its normal size, then so was his heart. For years, he lent money with a lavish hand to almost everyone who came to him with a hard-luck story. He knew he would never get most of it back, but he didn't mind. "It's fun to be a sucker," he said, "if you can afford it."

When he knew that he was going to die, he discovered that he held notes and I. O. U.'s for a fifth of a million dollars; and one of the last things he ever did was to destroy every note in his possession just to make sure that his executors wouldn't try to collect them.

"If I'm gonna die," he said, "I'm gonna die. But I ain't gonna leave trouble and heartache behind me."

When he died he left practically all of his great fortune to charity. His diamonds and rubies and emeralds were estimated to be worth $2,000,000. These were taken out of their settings and put into rings and sold again; so that many a woman today, without suspecting it, is wearing a stone that once enhanced the expansive charms of Diamond Jim.

Everyone "loved" Diamond Jim, yet he always remained a bachelor. He laid a million dollars in Lillian Russell's lap and asked her to marry him, but she refused. And once he said, "There ain't a woman in the world would marry an ugly-lookin' guy like me," and he laid his head on the table and cried like a baby.

Your Questions Answered

Q. To what extent does inadequate housing exist in the United States?

A. Studies conducted by the Works Progress Administration and the Department of Commerce from 1934 to 1937, covered 204 localities and showed that of more than eight million dwelling units, 13.9 per cent needed major repairs; 19.9 per cent had no private baths or showers and 14.6 per cent had no private indoor toilet. In addition, an increasing number of low-income families are doubled up or overcrowded, due to general housing shortage.

BRIDGE LITE

By HAROLD SHARPSTEEN.

DEFENSIVE NOTRUMPS. All types of defensive notrump overcalls in the Culbertson system are definitely strength-saving bids.

ONE NOTRUMP OVERCALL. Against an adverse opening one-suit bid, a defensive overcall of one notrump means business. Defender is willing to play the hand at notrump, portraying a hand containing 3-1-2 or more honor-tricks, opponent's suit stopped at least once, potential stoppers in the unbid suits. The hand is almost as strong as an opening one notrump bid.

TWO NOTRUMP OVERCALL. This strong defensive bid promises five honor-tricks minimum, a balanced hand, a sure stopper in opponent's suit, at least six winning tricks.

RESPONSE. Partner should raise to three notrump, with a balanced hand, about 1-1-2 honor-tricks, or take out in any six-card or longer suit with a weak, unbalanced hand.

THREE NOTRUMP OVERCALL. A three notrump overcall is a stab at game, whether made against an adverse opening suit bid of one or three. Hand usually contains 4 to 4-1-2 honor tricks, a stopper in opponent's suit, a solid minor suit and tentative stoppers in the unbid suits, as over a three spade opening, bid three notrump holding:

S-K 6 D-A 7 H-Q 10 9 C-A K Q 7 6

Partner should hesitate to disturb the notrump without a long suit that will take care of itself.

FOUR NOTRUMP OVERCALL. A forcing four-notrump overcall is employed only against an opening shutout bid of four. Hand usually contains 5 honor-tricks minimum and is the equivalent of a takeout double. Partner must show his best suit. Opponent opens four hearts. Bid four notrump defensively, holding:

S-A K J 8 D-K J 10 9 H-8 C-A K Q 8

SEED CATALOG---SPRING

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

The arrival of the seed catalog is the first sign of spring for the gardener. Although the garden may be covered with snow, and the soil as immovable as rock, the sun has ceased declining, and every day favors us with a few more minutes of daylight—what better sign of spring!

This early interest is not all wishful thinking on the part of the gardener and the seedsman, for gardening is a serious hobby or duty, as the case may be, and demands continued thought on the part of anyone who will practice it with competence.

These early weeks when inclement weather keeps us indoors should be devoted to fireside gardening, or planning for the spring and summer show of color. What mistakes did we make last year? How will we correct them this year? Was that border of bright marigolds too tall? Wouldn't sweet alyssum be better as a trim for the front yard planting of flowers? These are the questions we should ask ourselves in January.

The answers are usually to be found in the seed catalog. Unlike books of a similar purpose in other industries, the garden seed catalog is an educational volume, which contains an almost unlimited fund of information about the heights, colors, growing habits and cultural needs of flowers and vegetables. Some of them are even so complete (they list thousands of varieties) that they are used in agricultural schools as text books.

It is important for you to know, for instance, that a certain variety of zinnia grows 18 inches tall, while for in a border planting it would be another might grow only six inches, manifestly bad taste if you confused the two and placed the taller variety in front and thus hid the shorter one.

The amateur gardener can also find much profit and pleasure in these days in reading magazines and books on his hobby, and relating them to problems at home. In this connection it is a good idea to get thoughts down on paper, drawing the garden, with fixtures and plantings placed on a scale map. This can be changed as new ideas are found, and by the time planting season rolls around, you will know just where everything should go, will be able to get through the rushed days of April with a minimum of effort, and have a better looking garden besides.

Seed Boxes for Early Start.

The earlier the seeds of annuals which are to furnish the main summer display can be started, the earlier they will begin to bloom and the longer will be their season of beauty. Get seed boxes ready by easy stages, picking them up in convenient depths and sizes as they can be found, and then when planting time comes along in March, which slides along almost before you know it, everything will

WHAT TO DO IN JANUARY.

MULCHING: January is the accepted month for mulching shrub beds as well as perennials and roses. The best material for this purpose is a mixture of peat moss and sheep or cow manure.

FERTILIZING: Bone meal, raw, is the best material for fertilizing roses and bulbs as they are placed in the ground. A light application of bone meal or sheep manure is good for the lawn at this time to promote winter stooling.

PRUNING: Take the tall stems out of roses, remove the dead wood from all shrubs, both deciduous and evergreen. The flowering shrubs that bloom after the first of June should be pruned now. Spring flowering shrubs should be pruned after they have bloomed next spring.

SPRAYING: Now that fruit trees are dormant they should have a thorough dormant spraying using sealecide or dry lime sulphur for the peaches. Dormant spraying for scales is most important and should not be overlooked.

Be ready for the spring seed-sowing bee.

Get in clods of earth from the garden to dry in the seed boxes. After the soil has thawed and dried, bake it in a hot oven to kill weed seeds and insects that may be lurking in the soil. Stow it away and mix with a little pulverized sheep manure and have it ready to sift into the seed boxes when the time comes. These are details usually left until the last minute, but their preparation early in the season will go a long way towards making the raising of plants from seeds a success and will do away with the usual delays. If the soil is prepared and sifted and set away, it is a short job to get the seeds planted.

Be on the lookout for panes of glass to cover the seed boxes and pick up a bundle of pot labels to mark the rows when you think of it. Some of the finest small gardens are made each year from annuals started indoors in seed boxes in a sunny window.

Grow Annuals Like the Florist Does. Is it possible for amateurs to grow in outdoor gardens annual flowers as large as those which have become a common sight in florists' windows?

This question cannot be answered for all amateurs, because so much depends upon skill, the weather, soil very greatly. But it can be stated without reservation, that every amateur flower grower can greatly improve the quality of his annual flowers by proper care and feeding, especially by supplying ample plant food. Fast growth is more important to annuals than to other flowers, because they have so little time to reach maturity. They must attain the greatest possible size and vigor between the time seed are sown and the date which nature decrees flowering shall begin.

To obtain the maximum growth, the soil in which they grow should be well prepared. Plow or spade to a depth of at least six inches as early in the spring as possible. The soil should be friable, or crumbly. Loosen heavy clay with sand, coal ashes, or peat moss.

After the soil is prepared and smoothed a complete modern plant food should be spread over the area at the rate of four pounds per 100 square feet and raked into the top soil. This initial feeding should be supplemented by an application of plant food at the rate of two pounds per 100 square feet, eight weeks after seeding.

With careful watering and cultivation you will be surprised at the manner in which annual flowers respond to this treatment. Do not crowd the plants. See that each has room to develop its full beauty.

Jackets Trip Vandy For 1st S. E. C. Win

Commodores Rally in Second Half To Take Short-Lived 35-34 Lead.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Georgia Tech's erratic sophomores recovered after a gallant last-half rally by Vanderbilt last night to emerge with a 49-43 victory in their first home and Southeastern conference game of the season.

Leading 28-19 at intermission as a result of some accurate goal shooting by Captain Walter Haymans and Sophomore Carlton Lewis, the Jackets suddenly discovered the Commodore they thought dying was not dead yet.

Bowlegged Pinky Lipscomb staged one of the greatest one-man offensive spurts ever seen on the floor of the Tech gym during the hectic last-half and nearly snatched the game from the slightly bewildered Jackets. Lipscomb fired 16 points through the hoops from all angles, 11 of them coming in the final semester.

His brilliant work shot his team into a 35-34 short-lived lead at one time—the only time the Commodores held an advantage all evening.

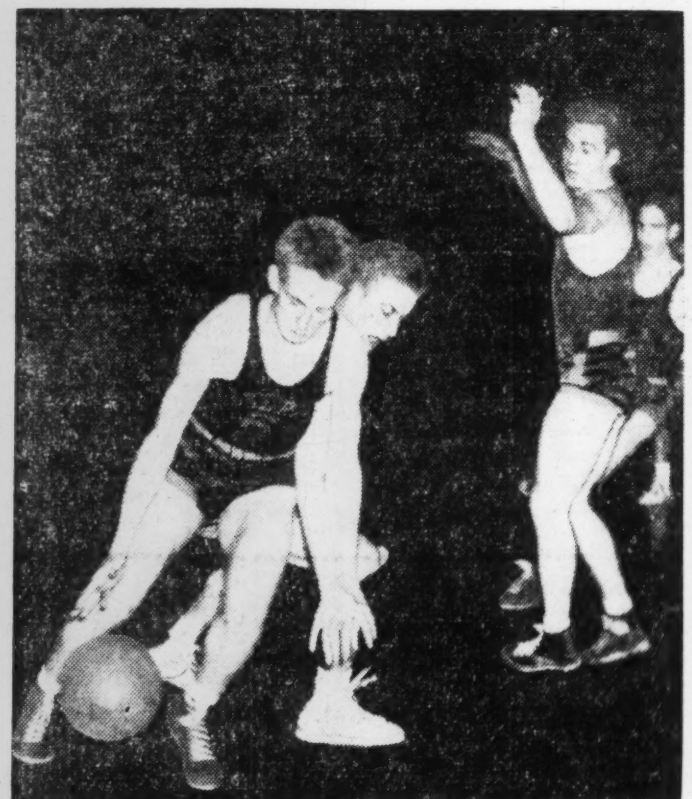

TECH SUBSTITUTES.

However, Coach Roy Mundorff substituted a new batch of sophomores for the ones in the game, who were having a bad case of St. Vitus dance at Lipscomb's shooting. The Jackets immediately settled down. George Webb sank a field goal to regain the lead and the Techs were never headed.

The last-half spurt of the Commodores turned the battle from a sloppy exhibition to an interesting game. Passing on both teams was as wild and woolly as the old west in the first half and numerous coffers.

AGGIES TO PLAY BUCKEYES IN '40

Trojans and Pitt on Ohio State's Schedule in '41 and '42.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Ohio State University today selected Texas A. & M., undefeated and untied in last season's play, for a football game here October 5.

The game, to fill an open date caused by the withdrawal of the University of Chicago from football, is dependent upon the Texas school's arranging its playing dates to conform.

The 1941-42 schedule for the Buckeyes, given final approval, included two-year agreements with the University of Southern California and Pittsburgh and the return of Missouri to the Ohio schedule in 1941 and Indiana in 1942.

Following are the 1941 and 1942 cards:

1941—September 27, Missouri; October 4, at Southern California; October 11, open; October 18, Purdue; October 25, Northwestern; November 1, at Pittsburgh; November 8, Wisconsin; November 15, Illinois; November 22, at Michigan.

1942—October 3, Indiana; October 10, Southern California; October 17, Purdue; October 24, at Northwestern; October 31, at Wisconsin; November 7, Pittsburgh; November 14, at Illinois; November 21, Michigan.

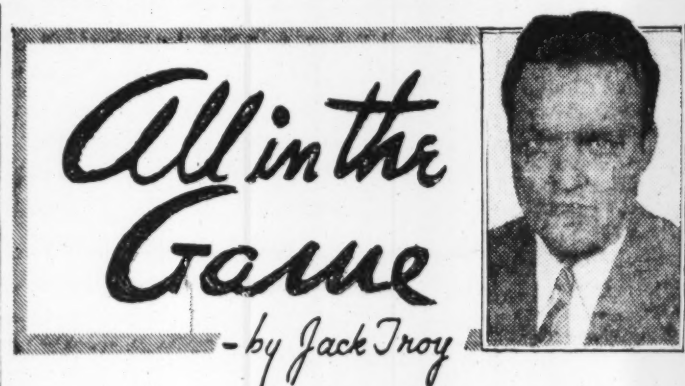

Ben Chapman Signs Cleveland Contract

CLEVELAND, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Outfielder Ben Chapman, of the Cleveland Indians, surprised the dopesters today by signing a 1940 contract without prolonged argument.

Regarded as a probable holdout, Chapman agreed to a reported $15,000 salary—the same as last season. He was the 11th Indian to sign.

All in the Game
—by Jack Troy

From Peachtree road to Gordon street
It comes in waves, the same old beat,
The same old plea—the same old din;
"Tell me, Pal, can those Crackers win?"

And were it June instead of January
Still there'd come the same old query,
The music old—the words worn thin;
"Tell me, now, can those Crackers win?"

The age-old song is still the best—
J. Fan wears his heart upon his vest,
And clear the call comes o'er the bin—
"Tell me, Pard, can those Crackers win?"

Many a pensive soul peers out rain-spattered windows these days and dreams of spring, new buds on the trees, the cheerful chirp of birds on the wing, but most of all the shout of lithe-limbed athletes dressed in flannel suits and the smell of peanuts and the vendors' hot dogs at the ball park.

They dream of happy hours spent in the sun, of good-natured tirades directed against the brothers in blue.

It's a great clan that goes to make up the dyed-in-the-sun baseball fan. I speak of the man in the bleacher, the man in the street—old J. Fan with the 50-cent piece.

Old J. Fan wouldn't give a dime a dozen for all the golf matches—if they were placed end to end for his convenience. He would give less than that for a field trial. And even less for a chance to sit in on a game of basketball.

Instead, old J. Fan sits pensively, even moodily, gazing out the rain-spattered windows and dreaming his dreams.

"Will that Burge hit? . . . Who'll be a good guy to stick with on those fly balls?" . . . Who looks like a good bet on doubles? . . . Maybe that Hafey will be a good double man . . . the left field corner is made to order for him. . . . What's that Richards thinking of with no center fielder or second baseman lined up yet?" And so it goes.

Old J. Fan is content to sit with his dreams, but he really wishes you could do something about the calendar and hurry spring along. He'd support baseball the year around.

CALL OF THE WILD.

Down at historic Waynesboro, in Burke county, the bird dog clans are gathering today. The call of the wild is strong in men who love dogs and glory in great field performances.

Some of the country's outstanding bird dogs—and bird dog men—are converging on Waynesboro. And for four or five days, from sunup to first dark, the quail whose habitat is peculiar to the course staked out will find no hiding places good enough to elude the keen noses of the pointers and setters.

The trim little bob whites will not be harassed very much, however. They might be a trifle scared when the handlers fire their guns to show judges whether or not their charges are steady to shot and wing, but none of the shots will take effect on them.

Field trials are not designed to slaughter, or even kill any of the birds. They merely are a proving ground of bird dog merit and skill. And the birds necessarily must be a part of the show.

That's why field trial men are such ardent conservationists. They realize more than any other men who go into the field what it means to have birds. For, without birds, there could be no field trials.

Hence, when field trial men go out to hunt—and the more enthusiastic do it sparingly—they never kill more birds than they can use themselves. They en-

KERN TO COACH WEST VIRGINIA

Ex-Carnegie Tech Mentor Succeeds Dr. Marshall Glenn.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 13.—(AP)—William F. (Bill) Kern, gridiron coach at Carnegie Tech for three years, today was selected as head coach of West Virginia University, a school with an enrollment of 3,000 and ambitions to return to power on the gridiron.

Appointment of the 33-year-old blond-haired, chubby mentor, who was named "coach of the year" in 1938, fulfilled student and alumni demands for a major college coach to guide the Mountaineers back to the gridiron pinnacle attained under Dr. Clarence Spears in the early '20s.

Kern, who resigned at Tech last Monday, was recommended for the post by Director of Athletics Roy M. Hawley. The appointment was made by the university's board of governors in a special session here. Kern succeeded Dr. Marshall Glenn, who resigned last December at the end of one of the Mountaineers' poorest seasons.

Fulton County Board Urged for Athletics

An effort to organize an athletic association to govern all athletics of Fulton County High schools will be made at a meeting Friday night at East Point.

The movement is being sponsored by the South Fulton Herald, a paper published by the Writers' Club of Campbell High School, of Fairburn.

Tentative plans call for a basketball tournament, a baseball league in the spring and a football league next fall.

Crackers To Start Spring Drills March 5

Earl Mann Figures 1940 Roster Boasts Several Bright Pitching Prospects.

Contracts yesterday were forwarded to 26 Cracker players as President Earl Mann went through the annual ritual of dropping sealed envelopes in the mail box near the Ponce de Leon ball park.

The Cracker squad which will go to camp includes 31 players—five of whom already are signed. The five who have signed include Manager Paul Richards, Connie Ryan, a second baseman; Willard Marshall, outfielder; Rene Cortes, pitcher, and T. J. Bankston, pitcher.

Manager Paul Richards will head the vanguard of battery men to the Savannah camp about March 5. Lester Burge also will be taken along to get in some extra practice at first base.

Richards' camp assistants again will be Guy (Pea) Green and Sir Richard Nicholas. Mann figures that there are a number of bright young pitching prospects among the list of moundmen to whom contracts were sent yesterday.

The impressive list of pitchers follows:

Pitchers—Luman Harris, Larry Miller, Tom Drake, Wayman Kerkstock, Onnie Robinson, Mack Stewart, Pete Stein, Bob Durham, Bob Chipman, Charlie Burgess, Lewis Carpenter, Emile Lochbaum, Elwood Lawson, Harry Johnston and Frank Gabler.

The Crackers will take a total of 17 pitchers to camp, including the two boys already signed. And among the brightest of the bright young rookies are Chipman, Burgess and Stewart, who has undergone an operation for the removal of a blood clot on his leg. That seemed to hamper him all last season.

The remainder of the Cracker squad will include:

Catchers—Manager Richards, Larry (Doc) Smith and Dewey Williams.

Infielders—All Anderson, Burge, Tom Hafey, Dudley Parker, R. E. Smith and Connie Ryan.

Outfielders—Emil Mailho, Marshall Mauldin, Willie Duke, Winfrey Brown and Willard Marshall.

Hence, it is to be seen that the bulk of the squad is pitchers. And it might be Manager Richards can get seven or eight winners out of the list and not have to seek elsewhere for help.

It is very likely that three catchers will be carried. There has been too much catcher trouble in the past because of injuries.

If no other center fielder is obtainable before the camp ends, Marshall Mauldin, one of the league's outstanding defensive fly catchers, will return to center and be flanked by Mailho and Duke.

Of course, there is always a chance that a boy like Winfrey Brown, a left-handed hitter who really smashed the potatoes Greenwood last season, might make the grade.

Stork Visits Home Of Johnny Phillips

Johnny Phillips, ex-Georgia Tech and Y. M. C. A. basketball star, was making the rounds of his favorite haunts yesterday with a broad smile on his face and a box of cigars under his arm.

The cigars were being passed out cheerfully to one and all, for Friday night a six-pound baby boy was born to Johnny and Mrs. Phillips. Mother and baby are doing fine, and Johnny himself is on the mend.

PROGRESSIVES PLAY U. S. ROYAL

Hogansville Quintet Beat J. P. C. Last Year; Cubs Meet All-Stars.

U. S. Royals, of Hogansville, will furnish the opposition for the J. P. C. quintet tonight at the Progressives' court on Pryor street. The J. P. C. Cubs will meet the Alliance All-Stars in a preliminary game starting at 7:30 o'clock.

Hogansville defeated the Progressives last year, breaking a record the Atlanta team had run up of not having been beaten on their home court in eight years. The game was played early in the season, and though the Progressives later defeated Hogansville in a return game, the edge to the eight-year record had been done.

With seven consecutive victories completed this season, Coach Walton Laney's team bids fair to enjoy a highly successful year. The boys are expecting to tear into the Royals tonight with a vengeance.

Laney will start Morris and Hyman Katz at forward, Steve Browdy, center, and Minsk and Ginsberg, guards. Greenberg and B. Browdy will be ready as replacements.

The Cub-All-Star game should be interesting. Several of this year's Cub players were members of the Alliance squad last year.

Wednesday night the Progressives tackle another strong team. The Dixie Aces, of Chattanooga, will come here with the enviable record of 13 straight victories and no defeats. They easily trimmed Peerless Mills, a team which beat J. P. C. last year in an over-time game, and have scored 591 points to date, an average of 45.5 points per game. The Cubs will play Hapeville Aces in Wednesday night's preliminary.

Packers, All-Stars In Bowl Go Today

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—(AP)—The champion Green Bay Packers tie into a select team of stars from rival National league clubs tomorrow in a "pro-bowl" football battle that was postponed a week ago because of rain. Indianapolis is expected to be a perfect weather and a larger crowd.

Tom Gallery, director of this lone league-sanctioned post-season encounter, predicted a sellout throng of 16,000 if today's sunshine is duplicated tomorrow by kickoff time at 2 o'clock (P.S.T.).

Gators Take Second Straight From Bulldog Quintet, 36 to 25

FLORIDA LEADS 20 TO 11 AT HALF, YINSHANIS STARS

Gators Use Same Tactics As Last Night Against Bulldogs.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Jan. 13.—(P)—Florida's surprising Gators turned the tables on the University of Georgia Bulldogs again tonight, 36-25, to make a clean sweep of their two-game Southeastern conference series.

The Florida five defeated the Athens cagers 45-36 last night to snap Georgia's undefeated record. Playing the same hard, fast game as last night, the Gators took the lead shortly after the opening gun and were never headed.

Roy Chatham, tricky Georgia guard, put the Bulldogs into a 4-2 lead at the outset but the Florida combine clicked for six straight points to take a lead. Florida led 20-11 at the half.

Ahead 30-20 with seven minutes of play remaining, the Florida five put on a stall that held the Bulldogs in check. Four times they took the ball out of bounds in preference to shooting free throws. It was the same kind of finish as in the opener when the Gators held the Georgia five to one point in the last seven minutes.

Frank Yinshanis topped the evenly divided scoring honors with nine points, while Ellish and Chalker of Florida, and Moore of Georgia substitute, dropped in eight points each.

The win gave Florida a record of two victories against two defeats in Southeastern conference play, while it lowered Georgia's conference mark to two defeats against a single win.

Tennessee Cagemen Defeat Alabama, 26-23.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 13.—(P)—Tennessee defeated Alabama 26-23 here tonight before 3,000 basketball fans by taking a 7-point lead at half-time and checking a second-half Alabama drive. Both teams made eight field goals, but the Vols countered 10 out of 17 free throws while Alabama made good only seven out of 18.

Ed Hudson, Alabama, with 13 points, paced individual scorers. Bernie Mehen scored 12 for Tennessee. The Crimson Tide played without George Prather.

Bitsy Grant Defends U.S.L.T.A.'s Methods.

Disagrees With Barnes That Game Is at Lowest Ebb.

By TOM McRAE.
The U. S. L. T. A. never has looked upon Bryant Grant as their fair-headed boy and Bryan has never lost any love for them, but Bitsy thought Bruce Barnes, the pro net star, treated this august body unfairly in some of his remarks to reporters Friday in St. Petersburg.

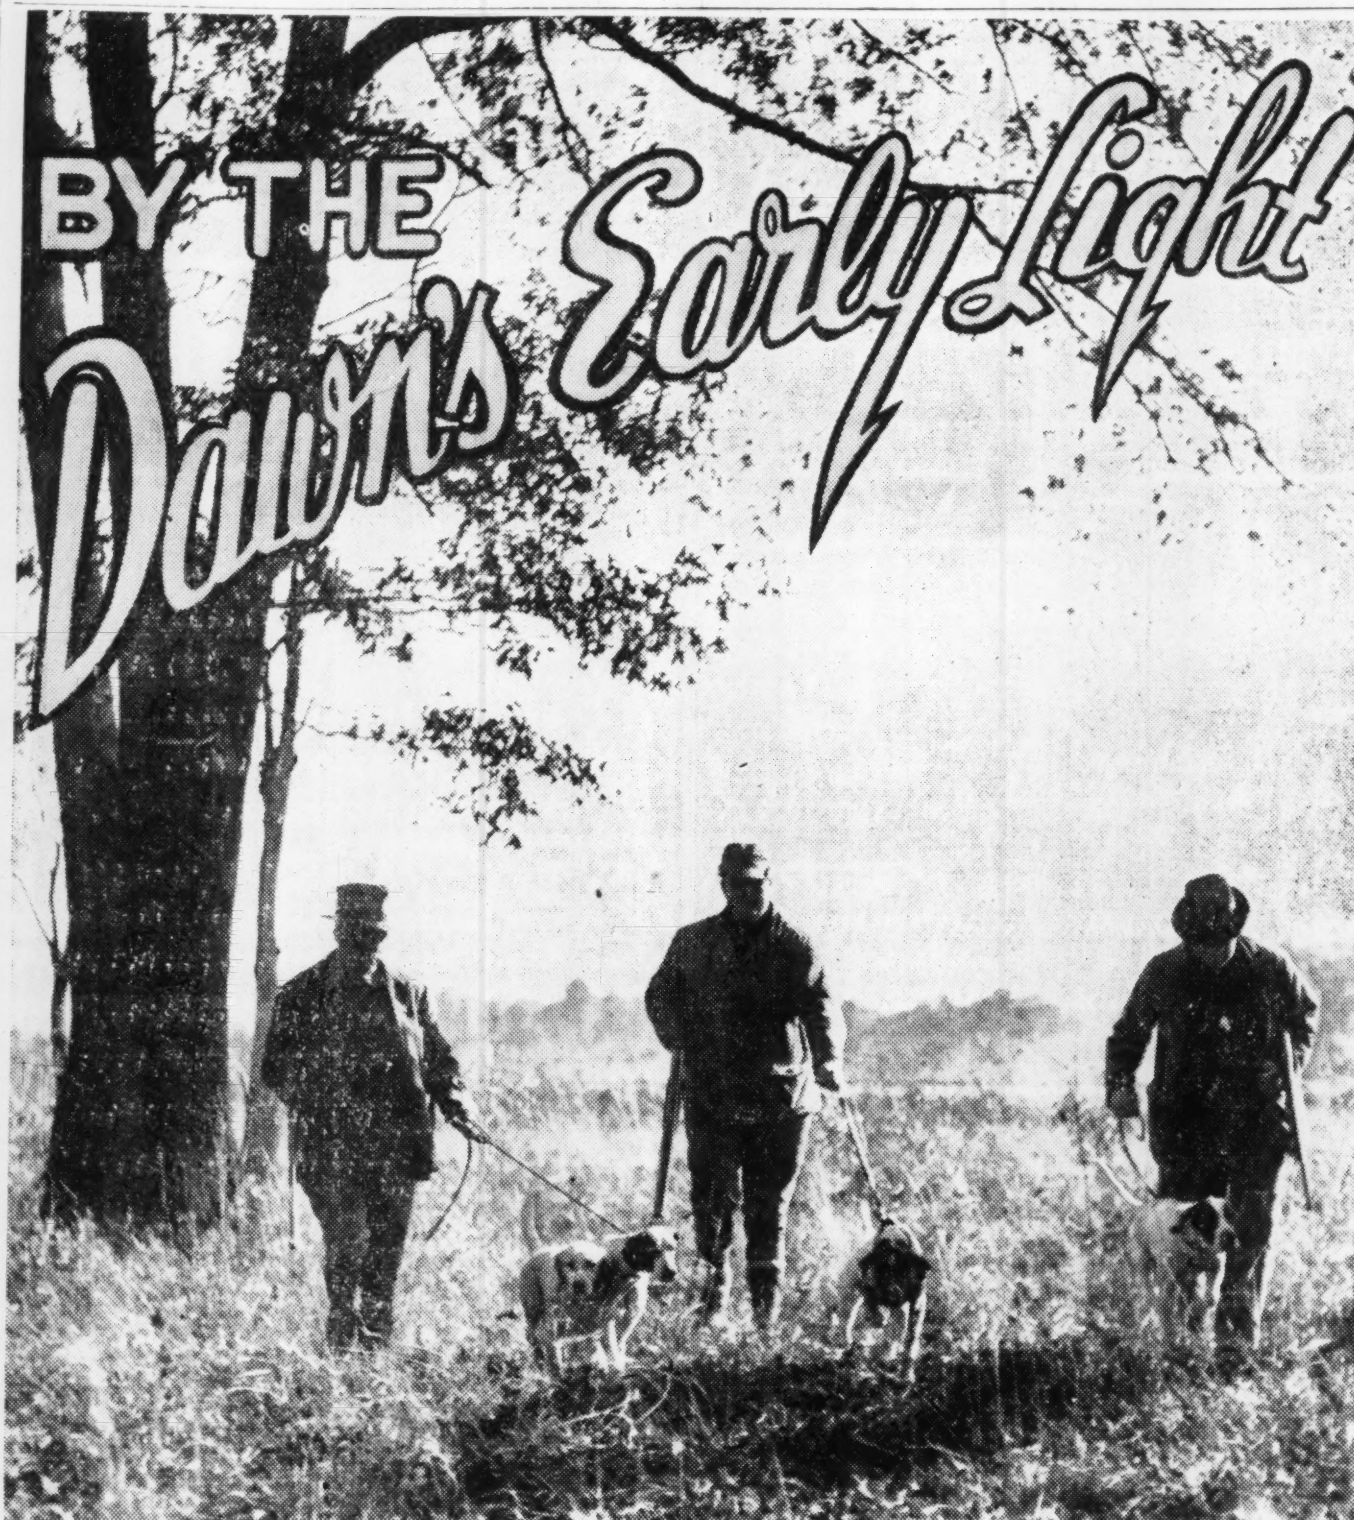

Barnes said tennis is at its lowest ebb in history. Asked if he agreed, Bitsy said, "No. No, I wouldn't say that. I don't think the game is at its strongest, but I think it is a far way from being at its weakest."

Barnes says open net tournaments might prove the salvation of tennis. Bitsy believes the day of the open tournament is coming. He says it may be five years, though.

It may be Barnes is a little off in his accusations that amateurs now make a 12-month business out of tennis. A new rule in the amateur code which allows only eight weeks' expense money seems to be working. Gene Mako and Wayne Sabin were suspended by the U. S. L. T. A. It looks like the day of the tennis bum is over.

The pro netman said the reason the St. Pete tournament couldn't get any stars was because they could not afford to pay them. Chances

Homer Norton Gets Contract for 5 Years

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Jan. 13.—(P)—Mild Homer Norton, a man who strode from the doghouse to the top of the football coaching heap in four months with a great Texas A. & M. team, signed a new five-year contract today.

Rewarding by the same athletic council that had pondered dismissing him before completion of the '38 schedule, Norton received a salary increase and the security he demanded. Although the Aggies' 1939 schedule has not yet been drawn, there were reports that Norton, with eight of this year's No. 1 ranking team and Sugar Bowl kings returning, would face one of his roughest schedules.

Norton came to A. & M. in 1934 from Centenary.

OKED FOR FINN.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(P)—The Amateur Athletic Union has given its approval for Tasito Maki, famous Finnish runner, to compete in several meets in this country, Secretary Dan Ferris said today.

Crackers To Play Piedmont Y Today

Powerful Atlanta Club Plays Flashy Alabama Team; Seeks Return Go With Celtics.

The powerful Atlanta Crackers, beaten only by the world champion Celtics in 13 games this year, that defeat a 44-40 decision, this afternoon continue their campaign for the southern championship when they meet the flashy Piedmont (Ala.) Y team at Sports Arena. The Alabama quintet comes here with a record of nine victories in ten starts and from all accounts will give the local machine a real battle.

The Crackers are not convinced that the Celtics are their superior. Coach Shep Lauter insists his boys played their worst game of the season against the pro wizards last Wednesday night, yet the locals were able to make it hot for Hickory Banks, Saunders, Herlihy and company from whistle to whistle.

Virlyn Moore was badly crippled in the third quarter, but he sank 12 points. Fred Bradford and Lamar Murphy were ill and hardly able to play. Besides, Lauter believes his boys will not be jittery the next time they play the men of magic.

Officials are working on the return game and hope to have an announcement shortly.

Virlyn Moore will be in uniform this afternoon, but may not play. Examination has revealed pulled ligaments in the star forward's leg. Bo Johnson, Bob Lieb, the sensational guard, Bradford Murphy, Gene Warlick, Ed Bellamy and Cherry Foster will be ready for action.

A preliminary game at 2:30 will send the Crimson Bulldogs against the Techwood Musketeers, an outfit composed of several Tech football stars including Buck Murphy, Bob Ison and Junior Anderson, member of the 1938 cage and grid teams at the Flats.

The main game will start at 3:30. A small admission will be charged.

Crackers Defeat Peerless Five, 34 to 28.

THOMASTON, Ga., Jan. 13.—The strong Atlanta Cracker quintet took its 12th victory in 13 starts tonight by beating the Peerless Blue Devils, 34-28, in an overtime game marked by extremely rough play.

The score at the end of the regular game was 24-24.

CRACKERS: Bradford (10) P., Foster, Johnson (7) C., Warlick (4) G., Lieb (7) G., Cracker subs: Murphy (6), Peerless subs: Lester, Causey.

NORTH FULTON TO HIRE RIDLEY AS GOLF TUTOR

Hook Sandow Will Remain as Professional at White Course.

By JACK TROY.

The Constitution learned yesterday on unimpeachable authority that Charlie Edens, popular young James L. Key pro, is due to move over to the Piedmont park golf course in the spring.

As a matter of fact, Edens already has taken over the concessions at Piedmont.

Chick Ridley, who has been pro at Piedmont for many years, is due to take over the pro's duties at the new North Fulton county course, which is expected to be ready for play during the summer.

In his term of service at Key, Charlie Edens has won quite a following among the city's municipal players. He is recognized today as a fine teacher.

Ridley is one of the city's oldest municipal pros in point of service and it seems that he has been slated for the pro duties at the new North Fulton layout for some time.

Hook Sandow, pro at John A. White, was considered for the Piedmont position, but it is understood that Sandow prefers to stay where he is. He has quite a following at the White course.

Official announcement of the transfers may not be made for some time. But the fact remains that the groundwork has been laid. And the transfers amount to fine promotions for both Edens and Ridley, a former state amateur champion.

Ogilvie New Head Of Senior P. G. A.'s

SARASOTA, Fla., Jan. 13.—(P) Election of Dave Ogilvie, of Augusta, Ga., as president of the senior division of the Professional Golfers Association was announced today.

Ogilvie was named to succeed George Sargent of Atlanta as some 60 of the nation's links veterans teed off in the first round of the National PGA Seniors' tournament.

W. C. Sherwood of Memphis was elected vice president and Captain Charles Clark of Chicago re-elected secretary.

Sarasota was awarded the 1941 tournament.

Slugging Worth More, Mize Tells Cardinals

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—(P)—Johnny Mize, of Demorest, Ga., wasn't satisfied with the offer General Manager Branch Rickey made him today, so the Cardinals' slugging first baseman has a date Monday to talk things over with President Sam Breadon.

Mize had his first contract confab for 1940 with Rickey last Wednesday and another was scheduled for today. The second, however, was limited to a telephone conversation after Johnny overslept.

"I feel I should be offered more of an increase after the season I had," Mize said. He led the National league in batting and home runs last year.

Pitcher Bill McGee also talked contract with Rickey today, but none was signed. Morton Cooper, another pitcher, likewise saw Rickey and afterwards it was announced the young right-hander had signed a contract for 1940 late last season.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Mr. Stanley Frank writes a very interesting and controversial basketball article in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, entitled, "Take Away the Backboards." Coach Paul Mooney, of Columbia University, is quoted as being decidedly in favor of this drastic move.

He says, in part, "Make the players shoot at open baskets . . . and you'll see science and skill replacing sheer luck and height as the most important factors of the game. . . . Force him (a player) to make a clean shot through a clear basket, and he'll quit throwing ridiculous shots."

"Take away the backboards and you'll take away the only excuse for cluttering up the courts with overgrown oafs, whose only reason for being in the game is their excessive height. A bad shot can be turned to a team's advantage if it has a big guy who can tap the rebound off the backboard into the basket."

All of which is very interesting and even more provocative. Without taking either side of the question, here are some of the opinions expressed by leading basketball coaches in our section of the country:

Coach Roy Mundorff, of Georgia Tech, gave us the most direct answer to the question, "What do you think of abolishing the backboards?"

"I don't like the idea," he replied without hesitation. "If you do, the game will be changed materially. As I see it, the only way to take away the advantage of tall men is to bar them from playing by setting a maximum. Understand now, I'm not advocating that. But there's nothing to keep a tall man from dropping balls in the basket with or without backboards."

"Take away the backboards and you take away some of the scoring. Basketball is primarily a scoring game. And the interesting game is a high scoring one."

Coach Elmer Lampe, of Georgia, was almost emphatic in his answer. "I am not in favor of abolishing backboards," he said. "It would make the ball fly out of bounds a lot. It would be more difficult to focus a shot. The short shot would become more difficult. And goals are tough enough to make now."

"However, the idea might be all right to experiment with."

The only man we could find who was in favor of the change was Dutch Dehnert, coach of the World Champion Celtics, who played the Crackers the other night.

"Take away the backboards," he said, "and you will make for better shots. There will be more accuracy. More time will have to be taken on shots, which will do away with a lot of the wild shooting. It will make a better game for spectators by making it a more skillful game."

Coach Shep Lauter, of the Atlanta Crackers, was not in favor of the movement, although he admitted it had its advantages. "It would create more roughness under the basket because now the ball hits the backboard and bounces back where one man can get it. If there was no backboard, the ball would merely fall off the rim and there would be a rough scramble for it. It would reduce scoring and I'm not sure spectators would like that. The tall men would still have an advantage."

"However, on the other hand, it would make scoring more of an art and would certainly develop some great shots."

Shaw will have a full schedule while here. He is scheduled to talk at Boys' and Tech High schools, at the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs and the Businessmen's Club during his stay.

Wilbur Shaw Drives Here During Week

Wilbur Shaw, winner of the 1939 Indianapolis S p e e d w a y race, will make a two-day appearance in Atlanta Monday and Tuesday in the interest of the Firestone safety bureau.

Feature of each day will be a public safety talk and safety driving demonstration on Techwood drive, just north of Grant field. Both demonstrations will start at 3 o'clock.

Shaw will have a full schedule while here. He is scheduled to talk at Boys' and Tech High schools, at the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs and the Businessmen's Club during his stay.

Hartsfield, Corum on Big Bowl Program

By JACK TROY.

If there was any pressing problem presented at the final meeting of the Atlanta Touchdown club's bowl committee yesterday it was the plaintive plea made by Fred Sington, "Are we going to be able to seat all the folks?"

There has been an unprecedented demand for tickets to the Friday affair which is to include the four southern bowl coaches, other coaches from the Southeastern and Southern conferences and sports writers from all over Dixie.

It was announced yesterday that Bill Corum, sports editor of The New York Journal-American, will be present as one of the guest speakers. Corum has made public appearances at previous sports functions here.

WADE AND LAYDEN
Mayor William B. Hartsfield is on the program to welcome the visitors. Elmer Layden and Wallace Wade are the other speakers, besides Corum.

A total of 50 visiting coaches and writers already have accepted. And the big bowl event at the Ansley will have a capacity attendance of around 700 people. Facilities of the combined city and Dinkler rooms are needed to accommodate everyone.

Visitors have been instructed to register at the Ansley hotel by 11:30 Friday morning. A couple of preliminary events have been arranged for the entertainment prior to the "kick-off," which is scheduled at 7 o'clock Friday night.

The committee yesterday stressed the fact that all the affairs are strictly stag.

VARIED PROGRAM.
Events of the big bowl party itself will include Hartsfield's welcome, speeches by Wade, Corum and Layden, presentation of the handsome "most valuable" trophy to Howard Ector, of Georgia Tech, and the showing of the four bowl pictures. The coaches—Bob Neyland, Tennessee; Jess Neely, Clemson; Red Dawson, Tulane, and Bill Alexander, Tech—will explain their pictures as they are shown.

The big bowl party, as pointed out yesterday by Pup Phillips, will mark the greatest gathering of Southeastern and Southern conference coaches on record. At least 30 coaches of the two conferences are expected.

As a sports sequel to "Gone With the Wind," the bowl jam-boree is in a class by itself. There has never been a sports function in the south its equal.

The Bowl committee of the Atlanta Touchdown Club yesterday held its final meeting on plans for the big jamboree this Friday. The committee is shown above in extraordinary session, so to speak, in the Davison-Paxon directors' room. The members include, left to right, seated, President Everett Strupper, Huck Ebersole, Fred Sington and President-elect Buster Kilpatrick; standing, O. B. Keeler, Muggsy Smith and Pup Phillips.

IN GEORGIA'S OUTDOORS

FASTEST FIELD IN HISTORY SEEN FOR HUGE MEET

Leading Owners, Trainers Convene for Annual Competition.

By JACK TROY

Waynesboro is not going to miss very far, it at all, having practically all of the top setter and pointer dogs of America in competition during the annual trials of the Georgia Field Trial club, starting Monday.

Fred Jordan, president of the oldest Georgia club, was a youngster in knee britches when the Georgia state was founded around the turn of the century. And he tried in vain yesterday to recall a previous event of as much promise.

From all over the country leading owners and handlers are taking topflight dogs to the historic little town in Burke county. And prospects are that five full days of running will be necessary to complete the list of events.

Among some of the leading dogs entered are:

Asa Wallace's Mr. Commissioner, Missouri all-age champion; Col. McNaughton's Cavalier, last year's Waynesboro amateur winner; Raymond Hoagland's Tip's Topsy Top, southeastern regional all-age winner last year; Neppen's Carolina Jake, Pinehurst all-age champion; George Crangle's H. M. Curry's great, Homewood Star Dust; E. H. Vane's Martini and Maniboba Jake; Bob Sealy's "Dot" Sealy Momoney, and many others, including Monie Ferst's The Georgia Breeze.

GREAT TRAINERS

The great trainers of the bird dog world, headed by George Crangle and his sons, Earl and Jimmie Crangle, and Fred Bevan, are located in Burke county and include Bob Bevan, Thomasville, N. C.; C. Bert Black and Son, Acre, Ga.; Dewey English, Hush Point, N. C.; Ed Mack, Fairview, Union Springs, Ala.; John Gardner, Red Bank, Miss.; John Garris, Safford, Ala.; Chesley Harris, Haynesville, Ala.; V. E. Humphreys, Goliad, Texas; George Payton, Michigan City, Miss.; C. L. Prickett, Saint Matthews, Tenn.; Bradman, Grand Junction, Tenn.; Prather Robinson, Madison, Miss.; Luther Smith, Cleveland, Ohio; June Welchel, Spartanburg, S. C.; Fred Wilson, Quitman, Ga.; Marvin and Sam Yount, Newton, N. C.

Dr. Bobbitt, of Winston-Salem, is owner of the present national champion, Sports Peerless Pride, a setter. Other prominent out-of-state visitors will include M. G. Dudley, Greenville, S. C.; Dr. Sam Orr Black and R. Z. Gates, Spartanburg, S. C.; Mrs. J. A. Davis, Alkner, S. C.; Dr. J. A. Davis, Kingsport, Tenn.; E. H. Vane, Merion, Pa.; and Asa Wallace, Kansas City Mo.

$1,000 PRIZE.

For the open event there is a stake of $1,000, which is divided as follows: $500 for the winning dog, $300 for second place and $200 for third place.

Members' stake winners receive cups.

The annual trial is being held in the largest town in the largest county in the largest state east of the Mississippi river. Burke county is one of the leading agricultural counties. It also is one of the counties taking a very definite and leading role in conservation and fire prevention. Charlie Skinner, chairman of the board of county commissioners of Burke county, is very much interested in the work and has been instrumental in having such a plan put into force. A full-time, paid forester is employed. The county also is divided into three fire districts with paid fire marshals in charge of each district. In addition, volunteer fire crews have been organized and are functioning throughout the county.

There is a great deal to be said in behalf of the annual trial which starts Monday because it certainly has all the earmarks of being one of the finest ever held.

Waynesboro Trials Draw 'Bluebloods'

Humphreys, Robinson Pointers Meet for First Time Since September.

By GEORGE M. ROGERS.

Major bird dog competition has captured the interest of sportsmen and bird hunters alike the country over.

This week all eyes are focused on Waynesboro, Ga., for the period beginning tomorrow.

The Georgia Field Trial Association program, featuring a $1,000 guaranteed purse in the open all-age, should prove one of the highlights of the midwinter field trial season. For one reason the length of heats will be one hour, which are a beginning of the endurance tests which have their climax in the national championship with a grind of three hours.

Another reason that the Georgia club should shine will be the quality of the entry list. Meeting again for the first time since last September on the Canadian prairies will be the white and orange pointers of V. E. Humphreys, of Goliad, Texas, and those handled by Prather Robinson, of Yates Center, Kan. In the Humphreys' string are such famous individuals as Spunky Creek Coin, the Saskatchewan chicken champion of 1939, owned by the Kansas oil magnate, E. J. Shaffer, of Hutchinson; Young's Billie, owned by H. E. Yokum, of Austin, Texas; and the young devil, winner of a year ago, Island Park Hunch, owned by Dr. M. T. Kessler, of Breckenridge, Texas. Young's Billie has been a consistent starter and winner in the southwest all fall.

This does not mean that the focus is entirely upon the southwest and Texas for the top money at Waynesboro, next week. George Crangle and Fred E. Bevan, both have their training kennels at Waynesboro, and they should have little trouble in holding the Georgia banner high.

In the Crangle string are such nationally known dogs as Neppen's Carolina Jake, owned by Dr. W. F. Vail, of Greenwich, Conn.; Tip's Topsy Top, owned by Raymond Hoagland, of Cartersville, Ga.; Fred Bevan will undoubtedly show Homewood Star Dust, owned by the amiable H. M. Curry, of Waynesboro and Pittsburgh, Pa.

TENDERFOOT TALES

The following letter received by Earl Lord, educational director of the division of wild life, is so encouraging to those who are trying to promote wise game conservation policies in Georgia that it is worth repeating.

January 8, 1939.

Mr. Earl V. Lord, Division of Wild Life,
State Capitol,
Atlanta, Georgia.

Dear Mr. Lord:

The Trion Junior Rangers Club was organized November 27, 1939 by our district ranger, J. D. Foster. The club consists of 110 boys sponsored by the Trion Lions' Club with Andrew Floyd as advisor. We elected Harold Hammond and Richard Garmany as Chief Junior Rangers. We then set to work to have a supervised program in cooperation with the wildlife division.

We closed 450 acres with signs that read "Junior Rangers Game Reserve." These are patrolled daily by groups of boys.

OFFENDERS IGNORANT.

If nothing happens we plan to put on an educational program as we find that the greatest violators of the law offend out of pure ignorance.

We realize that we cannot participate for the prizes of the 4-H club or a trip to Wisconsin, but if public interest keeps up we are planning a trip to Wisconsin. We have a move on foot whereby we are going to take the district ranger, 12 boys and the advisor for a two weeks' trip and study their plans and accomplishments.

Our future aims are to complete the work now started, to practice what we preach, to be the best club in the state and to have other clubs visit us for study as we have two cabins and a fire tower where we can keep them overnight.

We will welcome any suggestions from the department as to what other clubs are doing or how we may improve ourselves.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Andrew S. Floyd,
—THE TENDERFOOT.

22 BANTAMS, 20 CHUKORS.

We hardly had organized when to the surprise of the club 20 chukors were sent to us by the state. This added great interest and the boys immediately started building holding pens and rearing pens.

We have 22 bantam hens and plan to hatch our birds for propagation. They will be placed on property that is closed by the owner with contracts drawn up by our club and the owner. Our ranger has supplied us with the contracts made out by the state. We have ten contracts to date and 500 acres in one group, all connecting. This land will be patrolled by the junior rangers and the state ranger. In the summer we will patrol the streams and check fishing licenses.

The birds started the club to thinking and we began to wonder why there were so few birds in this section. After a few trips over our local fields we found that because of poor farming methods which caused a food shortage each winter, the birds had gone to other places more inviting. We also found a shortage of cover and protection for the birds. The ranger suggested from our findings that we could make a project that could be used as an example for our neighboring communities and farmers to come and see. We got permission to take a 5-7-8 acre field that was badly run down in a wooded area for this project.

FIELD WITHOUT FOOD.

The field had coverage for the birds but no food. Ranger Foster pointed out that nothing grew around the edges of the field close to the woods and suggested that we plant lespedeza. He explained that it helped the land by keeping it from washing, put minerals back that had been taken out by poor farming and provided shelter and food for native birds.

Surrounding the field is a heavy woods with sumac along the edges with a heavy growth of blackberry vines. We wanted to be sure to protect the coverage so we cut a fire lane with the contour of the hill. We placed the green pines with needles upward in the shallow washes, having lespedeza to hold the soil that washed in and the pine needles to hold the seed. We used the waste for conservation. Mr. Foster suggested that we plant the lane in a cover crop so we used lespedeza with a clearing on both sides. This will stop washing and the spreading of fire as well as provide food for outdoor life.

We have a large stream of water with a dam on our property but the stream is only good for water power. Poor enforcement of game laws caused this stream to be seined and netted and even fished out of season.

Mr. Foster suggested that we build a breeding pond and raise our own fish. We are digging one 60 feet by 20 feet to run from 6 feet to 6 inches deep.

We have organized boy patrols to check hunting licenses and to hand out applications. To date we have checked and turned in 93 licenses. We send a copy to the state and one to our ranger.

Yet there is little chance for the state legislature to convene and remedy the situation in time. Maybe interested Georgians can get together at Waynesboro and back some plan which will obviate a future recurrence.

"Darhe" in the right-hand corner of this page, received his name in an odd way. He was such a fast little setter that he was always getting ahead of the pack and frequently was lost for a moment. In one of his first workouts, in telling the pun's whereabouts, the negro boy yelled "Dar he behin' dem pines." And the name stuck.

At Miami last week at the opening festivities of the $10,000 Metropolitan fishing tournament, top decoration honors in the yacht division was awarded to Com. V. P. Warren, of Star Island and Atlanta, for his boat "Annie Laurie."

The next big dog event for the state will be the continental trials at Quitman next week.

State Losing Out on Technicality; Continental Next Big Event.

By MELVIN PAZOL.

With the nation's outstanding dogs and handlers converging on Waynesboro tomorrow for the Georgia field trials attracting some of the country's best known sportsmen, it doesn't exactly seem to be the best sort of publicity to mention that Georgia is almost sure to lose her share of federal wild life funds because of the poorest technicality.

In Dixie's Fields and Streams

County-wide forest fire protection in Burke county will, in the opinion of Fred C. Jordan, president of the Georgia Field Trial Association, go a long way toward continuing the event as one of the leading field trials in the country.

Fred Jordan is nationally known as a setter man. Following in the footsteps of his famous father, Uncle Charlie Jordan, Fred has continued to boost the long haired breed; but Friday Fred Jordan was neither talking setters nor pointers. He was talking conservation. It of course resulted from a discussion of the forthcoming Georgia Field Trials, which open tomorrow for a 4-day stand at Waynesboro, Burke county, Georgia.

FIRE BLACKED OUT.

Officials of this organization and owners of the grounds on which the trial is run annually, long ago realized that in order to protect the game and forest resources of the community that uncontrolled forest fires would have to be given some application equivalent to the "black out." As a result of this foresightedness the land owners and county members of Burke county have been co-operating for over a year with the State Division of Forestry in maintaining county-wide fire protection.

The first pair of dogs down in tomorrow's trial, will inaugurate the 40th annual running of the Georgia Field Trials. This fact undoubtedly proves that the members of the Georgia Field Trial Association are conservationists—that the protection of their grounds has been an important factor in the long successful record of this club.

Fred Jordan feels that the field trial organization has existed by main strength and awkwardness, rather than public support. The infinite possibilities of an event of this kind are not entirely appreciated by the state at large. Drawing prominent sportsmen from all over the country, it offers an opportunity of advertising the state advantages to a vast clientele interested in purchasing properties and homes in the Empire State.

SECOND GENERATION.

The Georgia Field Trial Association is already in its second generation. Other active members following in the favorite sport of their fathers include Charlie Skinner, Bob Neely, Sidney Jones, Joe Reynolds, and Peyton Thompson, capable secretary of the outfit.

Present-day members point with pride to three things that have never changed in the 40 years of trials, and that the club has always given every class of dog a fair and equal chance to display his wares; that the event has never been called off, cancelled or postponed, and that every year, the cash prizes advertised have been paid as the winners are announced.

So today all roads lead to Waynesboro, the largest town in the largest county in the largest state east of the Mississippi.

Shark at Carrabelle Yields Pliers, Cans

CARRABELLE, Fla., Jan. 13.—Several parties from Atlanta, Thomasville and Macon made large catches of speckled trout and red fish the past week. The cold weather has brought these fish into the river. Fishermen have been rewarded with satisfactory catches whether using the old-fashioned reed pole and line, or casting outfit with artificial bait. Shrimp is the bait used for speckled trout.

The unusual story of the week goes to a commercial fisherman who landed an eight-foot shark near Dog Island, which is about four miles out into the gulf from Carrabelle. In splitting this shark for the liver, it was found that the shark had swallowed a pair of pliers, two eight-ounce milk cans and a small fishing reel. The line on the reel was intact, and the reel was not rusty. With cleaning and oiling the reel was ready for use.

Fly, Bait Casters Meet Monday Night

The Atlanta Fly and Bait Casting Club will hold its first meeting of 1940 Monday night at 8 o'clock in the large ballroom of the Kimball House. Every member is urged to be present and have a voice in formulating the plans for the year. The entire meeting will be devoted to a constructive program for the coming year. Refreshments will be served.

Pelicans in the London zoo are being conditioned to a meat diet because of the shortage of fish due to war conditions, the Bureau of Fisheries reports.

DUCK INVENTORY FOR SOUTHEAST SET WEDNESDAY

Novel Methods Will Be Used in Annual Waterfowl Roundup.

The sixth annual duck, geese and swan inventory in the southeastern states will be held on January 17, it was announced from the regional office of the Biological Survey yesterday.

Airplanes, blimps, rowboats, trucks, private yachts and motorboats will be used, according to James Silver, regional director. Last year one of the deputy wardens used a locomotive whistle to scare up the ducks so he could count them.

The coastal areas will be covered by aircraft and blimp from northern Maryland to Pensacola, Fla. The United States coast guard, United States navy, United States army, and private planes and blimps will assist in the count.

The inventory of ducks, geese and swans is taken yearly in January for the purpose of determining numbers of waterfowl and for determining the needs for protection of the various species.

In addition to regular field officers of the Biological Survey, the state game department game wardens and wild life rangers of Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Maryland will assist in the count. No fewer than 250 men will submit reports on their observations. Season on ducks and geese closed on December 29.

Other sections of the nation will conduct a similar inventory during January.

SHOULD PROTECT RABBITS-ELLIOTT

Citing the findings of a recent biological survey investigation, Charlie Elliott, director of the Georgia Wild Life Division, Saturday pointed out the need for greater protection of the common cottontail rabbit.

"We have no law protecting this valuable little animal," Elliott declared, "and this is lamentable, for it is not only a valuable food, but also a fine fur producer."

He referred to the threat on the fur industry which the war in Europe might bring about and said he hoped to see a closed season and other regulations provided for the cottontail.

GAME VIOLATORS NET GEORGIA $211

The State Division of Wild Life collected $211 as its share of fines assessed violators in six south Georgia counties from September through December 31.

The figures were released Saturday by Fred Brewer, chief of the Plains district, who said that the amount would be more than doubled when returns are made from trials held late in December.

Brewer said that a majority of the fines came from persons hunting without licenses.

Squirrel Season Closes Monday

Georgia's long season on squirrels, which opened last August 1 in 18 north Georgia counties, will close Monday, the State Wild Life Division announced Saturday.

Following the close of the season on deer January 5, and waterfowl December 29, the end of the squirrel season leaves only doves, quail, turkey and rabbits for hunters to shoot. There is no closed season on rabbits, but the dove shooting closes January 31, and quail and turkey remain open through March 1.

Boys' High, Jordan Clash Tuesday in Big Seven Feature Game

UNBEATEN FIVES PLAY FOR LEAD AT HENRY GRADY

Typists Meet G. M. A., Smithies Battle Columbus,
Canton Is Off.

By ROY WHITE

Jordan, from Columbus, and Boys' High, two undefeated leaders of the Big Seven basketball race, will battle Tuesday night on the Henry Grady court in one of the week's outstanding prep features. Commercial will play G. M. A. at College Park in the other game for Atlanta, as Tech High journeys to Columbus for its Tuesday game. Canton drew a bye for Tuesday.

Another scrap involving the leadership will be fought Friday night in a doubleheader on the Henry Grady court when Jordan plays Tech High and Columbus meets Boys' High. Canton plays at G. M. A. in the other Friday game, with Commercial having an open date.

While members of the Big Seven are battling for leadership and runner-up positions, members of the North Georgia Interscholastic conference will settle a couple of grudge battles between themselves, preparatory to the tournament late in February.

Particular interest will be centered about that Jordan-Boys' High game Tuesday night, for both teams have won a couple of games and the winner will certainly rate one of the favorite spots in the first-half race.

Columbus High, after one game, hasn't placed among the leaders, but with one of the best balanced teams in the league should rate before the second week is over.

GOOD TEAM

All the teams look to be much better than in previous years, and after another couple of games should be particularly interesting to watch, and with 11 players scoring 12 points or more in two games, there won't be any run-away in the scoring race.

Tech High and Boys' High have planned a B game Tuesday night in a preliminary to the Boys' High-Jordan game. That B game should be well worth while, just as was the reserve football game last fall.

The week's schedule:

'Bama, Vols Place Four Men Each on 1930-1940 Eleven

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 13.—(P)—Fred Russell, sports editor of The Nashville Banner, came up today with an all-star southeastern conference football team for the past decade—1930-1940.

Alabama and Tennessee, each placing four men, dominated the first team, with Vanderbilt, Louisiana State and Ole Miss contributing the remaining three players.

Russell's second team, more representative, was made up of three former Alabama players, three from Tulane and one each from Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, L. S. U. and Vanderbilt.

The writer placed 89 players on his list of honor. These, he said, had been chosen by sports writers as all-conference players since 1930.

Russell's all-star first team: Ends, Fulton (Alabama) and Tinsley (L. S. U.); tackle, Simpson (Alabama) and Kinnard (Ole Miss); guards, Hickman (Tennessee) and Safford (Tennessee); center, Hinkle (Vanderbilt); backs, Dodd (Tennessee), Howell (Alabama), Feathers (Tennessee) and Cain (Alabama).

His second team: Ends, Smith (Tulane) and "Catfish" Smith (Georgia); tackle, Lee (Alabama) and Moore (Georgia Tech); guards, Safford (Tulane) and Marr (Alabama); center, Gracy (Vanderbilt); backs, Zimmerman (Tulane), Stichter (Alabama), McEver (Tennessee), and Mical (L. S. U.).

With Clark Jones turning in the top five game total of 511 for Columbus, Ga., High school, his team defeated Commercial High by a count of 2,380 to 2,317 on the downtown alleys Saturday afternoon.

"Mac" McElroy's 519 set topped the Commercial High boys. Other inter-city prep school matches will be scheduled at frequent intervals on the Atlanta drives.

2 St. Louis Coaches Resign Grid Posts
ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—(P)—The football coaches of both universities in St. Louis—James G. Conzelmann, of Washington University, and Cecil B. Muellerleile, of St. Louis University—have resigned, it was disclosed tonight in surprising announcements.

Neither resignation had anything to do with the other.
Both schools are members of the Missouri Valley Conference and their annual game is bitterly contested.

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 13.—(UP)—Helped by a hole-in-one, Clayton O. Heafner, Linville (N. C.) professional, moved into the lead in the 72-hole Oakland open golf tournament today with a total card of 209 at the end of the third round.

Heafner, high up among the leaders since the tournament started, shot a par-breaking 62 despite a stiff wind that hampered many of the nation's finest golfers. He put this with a 141 for the previous 36 holes to give him a two-stroke lead over Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Texas, who carded 211 for the 54-hole total. Heafner got his hole-in-one on the difficult 191-yard second hole. Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, went into third place behind Demaret with 144-68—212, moving up from the ranks with a day's performance that equaled Heafner's. Hogan, White Plains, N. Y., followed with 145-68—213, and Paul Runyan, a fellow townsman, put together a 143-71 for 214.

Bowling

The mixed doubles bowling team of Wyatt and Baker will bowl in the handicap mixed doubles event on January 27 as Wyatt and Baker will bowl in the Wyatt, judge of the superior court of Troup county, and Mrs. Wyatt (the former Sara Baker) were congratulating this popular couple Saturday on their recent wedding that took place at LaGrange.

Miss Ruth Jones, of the Ladies' City and Commercial leagues, had the unique experience of collecting 17 counts of seven and one strike within 25 frames in the sweepstakes Saturday evening.

Glenn McConnell was outstanding with a five-game series of 542 as his Pennsylvania team won the first half title in the Sinclair league in a match with P. D. five.

Members of the Fire Makers Club, of the Campfire Girls, had a bowling outing at the downtown alleys Saturday morning. Ann Seitzinger, president; Elizabeth Anderson, secretary; Florence Williams, treasurer; Elizabeth Thomas, social chairman, were among the officers who attended the bowling party. Others included Martha Lindsey, Amy Lou Zamp, Joyce Slate, Marjorie St. John, Cathryn Harwell, Emily Sanford and Madeline Hosmer.

With Clark Jones turning in the top five game total of 511 for Columbus, Ga., High school, his team defeated Commercial High by a count of 2,380 to 2,317 on the downtown alleys Saturday afternoon.

"Mac" McElroy's 519 set topped the Commercial High boys. Other inter-city prep school matches will be scheduled at frequent intervals on the Atlanta drives.

2 St. Louis Coaches Resign Grid Posts
ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—(P)—The football coaches of both universities in St. Louis—James G. Conzelmann, of Washington University, and Cecil B. Muellerleile, of St. Louis University—have resigned, it was disclosed tonight in surprising announcements.

Neither resignation had anything to do with the other.
Both schools are members of the Missouri Valley Conference and their annual game is bitterly contested.

Messrs. Kenneth Rogers, Tom McRae and I will be ambling along toward Waynesboro today. And I do trust Mr. Rogers will slow down when the big monument on the square comes into sight a quarter of a mile away. We went by a piece last year.

However, if Mr. Rogers does happen to miss the monument again—there is this much certain to be said: He won't make the mistake of ordering that May colt again.

It was pretty cold in the creek that day last January. And as Mr. Rogers stood up to his waist in ice-cold water and reflected on the ancestors of all May colts, he said then that it would be a long day before he ever got on one again. And I certainly hope that it is. He looked a trifle cold and wet, did Mr. Rogers.

Allen, Michaels Will Box Here bring one of his best, Young Allen, to an Atlanta ring.

Allen has been mentioned in a current boxing magazine as one of the leading southern heavyweights.

Michaels three weeks ago fought Pietro Georgi to a draw, and last week Georgi fought Johnny Paycheck, the sixth ranking heavyweight in the world to a draw in Florida.

Michaels, promising young Atlanta, in the East Point auditorium. It will be a ten-round fight and will be supported by a doubleheader attraction in the semi-final.

One of the semi-finals will find Emory Jackson and Battling Brosecoe in a six-rounder, with Benny Johnson opposing Young Terry, of Jacksonville, in the other half.

"Pa" Stripling has long been one of the most popular managers connected with the fight game in Georgia, but after the death of his son, W. L., "Pa" retired from the fight game. The old urge to return to the game he loved so well was so urgent "Pa" came back sometime ago and Thursday will

Players Free Agents By Landis' Decisions
CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(P)—Ken-esaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, in two decisions today, declared five youthful players free agents. They were Emil Ference, of the Niagara Falls (N. Y.) club of the Pennsylvania, Ontario, New York league, and Dave Hammes, Ted Werne, Ralph Mengelt and Peter Mish, of the Pargould (Ark.) club of the Northeast Arkansas league, which has a working agreement with the St. Louis Browns.

Skeet Shooters Set To Assault Records

Ben Smith, Harry Harkins, Mary Baldwin, Swift Tyler Ready to Defend Crowns.

By CLINT DAVIS.

Atlanta's Four Horsemen of skeet shooting happen to be a lady and three men. This aggregation of hard-riding gun swingers are truly death on clay pigeons.

Led by that all-time Atlanta city champion, Ben T. Smith, the quartet includes Harry Harkins, winner of many city, state and southern titles; Mary Baldwin, reigning city lady titleholder, and Swift Tyler Jr., present city junior champion.

With plans already completed for several big skeet events, Atlanta shooters will begin their annual attack on records and titles early in February. The roar of 12-gauge smoke-poles will be interspersed with the popping of smaller scatter guns in what will resemble the second siege of Atlanta.

While the four aces, whose smiles greet you from the danger end of the gun barrels above, hold the spotlight by virtue of previous titles, they may expect plenty of competition during the coming year.

Among Atlanta's top-ranking skeet stars who stand a chance to replace the present champions during the coming year are Bill Ward, Jack Tway, Clyde King, Roy Reagan, Judy King, Wilson Kemp, Mrs. Ben T. Smith, Mrs. Oliver Healey, Chester Mabry and Mrs. William Healey, to mention only a few.

Add to this array of stars the hundred and one mediocre shooters like you and me, that will shoot the semi-circles of the Capitol and West End Gun clubs during the present year, and it's easy to visualize the thousands of clay pigeons that will meet sudden death under a spray of steel pellets.

HENRY PRUSOFF DEFEATS RIGGS
ORLANDO, Fla., Jan. 13.—(P)—Bobby Riggs, ranking player of the world, was just another amateur to Henry Prusoff, six-foot Seattle player, here today as he blasted Riggs out of the semi-finals of the 13th annual Florida tennis tournament, 6-4, 6-1, 3-6, 6-1.

Prusoff, ranked 10th nationally, will meet Elwood Cooke, sixth ranking national player from Portland, Ore., Sunday afternoon in the finals. Cooke erased Charles Hare, English Davis cup player, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

In the final analysis, it was Prusoff's strong forehand cross-court shots that lured Riggs out of position and left him a helpless victim for the teasing drop shots that Prusoff fired into the right-hand service courts. The effectiveness of the strategy is evidenced by the fact that of the 115 points Prusoff earned throughout the four-set match, 53—or almost half—went for placements that Riggs was unable to touch.

Pauline Betz, defending champion from Los Angeles, will meet Mary Hardwick, second ranking English player, Sunday in the women's finals.

2 Jacks Work Together—Again
NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(P)—Jack Dempsey and the man who managed him to the world's heavyweight championship, Jack Kearns, today joined in their first business pact since Dempsey quit fighting as articles were signed for a 12-round fight at Detroit between Red Burman and Bob Pastor.

The splitup between the two surprised the sports world about a decade ago.

The agreement for a March 14 bout was put into writing at a turkey and champagne luncheon with all its attendant fanfare in one of Dempsey's midtown restaurants a year to the day after Burman beat Welshman Tommy Farr here.

The bout originally was intended for Miami, Fla., under Dempsey's promotion, but Kearns persuaded the parties concerned to stage it at Olympia stadium, Detroit.

Pastor was guaranteed $10,000 or an option of 30 per cent and Burman was given a guarantee of $5,000 or an option of 20 per cent.

Al is forgiven between Dempsey (right) and Kearns.

The local premiere of "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," co-starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, will take place at the Fox theater Friday. The production is filmed in technicolor.

Telling a highly dramatic and essentially human story against the magnificent pageantry of the Elizabethan court, "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" deals with the one great love in the life of England's most famous queen. The role of Elizabeth is one which Miss Davis, universally acknowledged to be the screen's greatest dramatic actress, was destined to play, and according to advance reports, she is every inch and fiber the Queen!

Side by side and pace by pace with her, strides Errol Flynn as Lord Essex. It is the type of role precisely suited to the handsome Irishman—that of a dashing soldier, victorious in defeat, irresistible in all adventures of the heart, the hero of the populace—truly a man among men.

The story opens with the return of Essex from a victory over the Spaniards at Cadiz. But instead of receiving a royal welcome from his Queen, he is upbraided by Elizabeth for not capturing the Spanish gold. Furious and hurt, he retires to his country castle. An Irish rebellion is the excuse Elizabeth uses to get him back to court, but hostile courtiers constantly plotting to rid themselves of the Queen's favorite, trick him into taking charge of the punitive army. Their plots against him prevent his receiving adequate supplies in Ireland, and his expedition fails. Angered because he believes the Queen has deliberately ignored him and his cause, he rides to the palace with his army to seize the throne, but his love for Elizabeth reasserts itself and he abandons his revolt. Whereupon Elizabeth, once again the Queen, condemns him to the block for treason. Although she soon repents, his pride and his true love for England prevent him from accepting a reprieve.

The supporting cast includes such names as Vincent Price, who plays the role of Sir Walter Raleigh, bitter rival of Essex; Olivia de Havilland as Lady Penelope Gray, lady-in-waiting to Elizabeth; and hopelessly in love with Essex; Donald Crisp as Francis Bacon, Essex's confidante and advisor; and Henry Stephenson, Henry Daniell, James Stephenson, Alan Hale, Ralph Forbes and hundreds of others.

Based on the Maxwell Anderson play which was a brilliant Broadway success, the screen play was written by Norman Reilly Raine and Armand MacKenzie. Michael Curtiz, who has directed such recent successes as "The Adventures of Robin Hood," and "The Sisters," directed the lavish production.

HENRY GRADY HOTEL—Spanish Room—George King and his orchestra, featuring Kay Nichols, Bud Dowling and Virginia Mauch-Girls, as vocalists, playing dinner music.

ANSLEY HOTEL—Rainbow Roof—Johnny Hamp and his orchestra, featuring Jayne Whitney, as vocalist, and McDonald and Ross, dancers, playing dinner music.

ATLANTA BILTMORE HOTEL—Main Dining Room—Al Apollon and his orchestra playing dinner music.

HANGAR RESTAURANT—The Swinging Troubadours, featuring Billy James and Connie Parsons, playing dinner music.

HOME RECORDER. Mickey Rooney made a recording of his newest song, "Singing Me to Sleep," at the home of Nat Pendleton, who has a complete recording outfit.

Rialto's "His Girl Friday"

When Hildy Johnson (Rosalind Russell), his former wife and former star reporter, announces that she is about to marry Bruce Baldwin (Ralph Bellamy), an insurance salesman, Walter Burns (Cary Grant), managing editor of the Morning Post, is appalled. Taking the couple to lunch, early in Columbia's new comedy-drama, "His Girl Friday", Walter schemes to get Hildy back again.

Confident that another whiff of printer's ink will change Hildy's mind about leaving him forever, Walter makes a deal with his ex-wife to delay her marriage long enough to cover the politically-inspired execution of Earl Williams, whom Walter has been defending editorially. Hildy, unaware that Walter intends to double-cross her, barges into the press room at the jail and shakes hands with the gang.

On the eve of the Williams hanging, Hildy manages to interview the condemned man and comes away convinced that he's being persecuted. Shortly afterwards, Williams is examined by an alienist and asked to re-enact the crime. Williams proceeds to shoot the psychiatrist with the sheriff's gun, and escape. Hildy, alone in the press room, sees the fugitive appears, quickly hides him away in a roll-top desk.

Walter, who has meanwhile been making life miserable for Bruce, Hildy's intended husband, is ecstatic when Hildy phones in her scoop. Walter comes dashing down to the jail to move Williams and the desk to a safer place. But Bruce indirectly ruins Walter's plans, and Williams is found by the police. Sheriff Hartman (Gene Lockhart), long a target of Walter's paper, happily arrests Walter and Hildy. Things look bad until—well, it will all be explained, starting Friday at the Rialto.

GABLE DONS PANTS WRONG SIDE BEFORE

Clark Gable went through two complete "takes" of the first scene of his new picture before discovering that he was wearing his pants back to front.

As a prisoner in a Guiana penal colony in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep," Gable wears a blouse and loose-fitting trousers that tie at the waist and pull on like a pair of convict pants. Fumbling for a cigarette between shots, he remarked to Director Frank Borzage that the pockets seemed to be in the wrong place.

"Only because you're wearing your uniform the wrong way around," answered Borzage.

Andrea Leeds, Bravest Extra, 'Lazy Star'

By HAROLD HEFFERNAN.
By the North American Newspaper Alliance.

HOLLYWOOD—Stars sometimes win battles with studio heads, but newcomers almost never do. Andrea Leeds is a rare exception. She is perhaps the only untied actress in Hollywood who ever made career capital out of a row with the boss—and a row with Sam Goldwyn, at that.

If it hadn't been for that rumormongering Goldwyn early in 1937, shortly after the producer had signed her for a trial term, Andrea might still be waiting for a chance to display her now widely acclaimed talents as an emotional actress.

Came time for casting "Woman Chases Man," and Goldwyn saw in the script a spot where he might try out his promising prospect, told Andrea about it and handed her a copy of the script.

Next day, so the story goes, she returned the script and amazed Goldwyn by refusing to take the assignment. The great Sam was pestered, purple and speechless when the girl turned on her heel and stomped out of his office.

Goldwyn recovered sufficiently next day to issue a statement.

"I've had stars slam doors in my face many times," said Sam. "But this is the first time in my career that an extra has ever walked out on me."

Today, among studio associates, Andrea is often referred to as the "laziest star" in pictures. Between scenes, she flops in a chair with a book—usually a volume carrying some social significance.

To keep her weight up to Goldwyn requirements, she follows a diet that features mashed potatoes and milk. She eats potatoes three times daily, drinks a quart and a half of milk and a bottle of beer—the latter by orders of the physician.

For the past three months, she worked simultaneously in Goldwyn's two current pictures, "They Shall Have Music" (current at Rhodes theater) and "The Real Glory," which was a little bit taxing, even though her role in the former wasn't such a big one. To save time, she took up residence in her dressing room on the lot, cooking her own breakfast, making her own bed, and generally conducting herself as would the average single working girl living alone.

In "They Shall Have Music," Jascha Heifetz and his immortal violin music are brought to the screen. In addition to marking the screen debut of the great Heifetz, "They Shall Have Music" also brings to millions of moviegoers all over the globe the thrilling music of the California Junior Symphony, an orchestra composed of 45 boys and girls who have been hailed as juvenile prodigies.

Roy Rogers Is Cast as Defender Of Jesse James at Cameo Tomorrow

Sleepy Slim and his Colorado Cowboys will appear on the stage of the Cameo theater today, for four performances. The feature attraction on the screen is "Down the Wyoming Trail," starring Tex Ritter, who between his action-filled scenes has the opportunity to sing several up-to-the-minute western song hits.

"History is brought to the screen in 'Days of Jesse James.'" Roy Rogers' latest western thriller which will have its first Atlanta showing at the Cameo tomorrow, through Wednesday. Also, admittedly outlaws and hoodlums, the James brothers have long been unjustly maligned for deeds they never perpetrated.

The picture depicts in thrilling detail the manner in which the racketeers of 50 years ago tried to hang their crimes on the shoulders of the James boys. Roy, as a young investigator for the banking commission, is sent to look into the bold bank robberies blamed on the James boys. He manages to join the James gang and rides with them on their holdups until he finds that their loot is only about one-tenth of what the bank robberies would net. Through an exciting series of events, Roy traces the bank robberies to their true source and sees that justice is done. Phil Spitalny Opens Friday At Paramount

In continuation of its policy of bringing big names in show business to their stage, the Paramount theater brings back for a return engagement, Phil Spitalny and his All-Girl "Hour of Charm" orchestra, starting Friday.

Spitalny and his company of charmers were well received by the city last January when they were at the Paramount for nine days playing to record-breaking audiences.

Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra are known throughout the nation by the medium of the radio. He produces one of the most entertaining programs on the air, "The Hour of Charm" broadcast, heard regularly over a nationwide NBC hookup.

With him are such featured artists as Evelyn, who besides playing the "magic violin" is also the concert mistress of the orchestra and makes most of the arrangements; Maxine, the girl beautiful, who possesses the deep and haunting voice; the Three Little Words, the harmony trio who made such a big hit in Atlanta last year; June Lorraine, a wonderful impersonator, who is making her first appearance in Atlanta, and of course the All-American Glee Club consisting of thirty lovely voices singing the songs you like to hear.

Critics throughout the country have applauded this talented organization because Phil Spitalny always gives his best and always comes out with a beautiful and entertaining show.

In conjunction with this stage attraction the Paramount is presenting on its screen "The Honey-Moon Is Over," featuring Stuart Erwin.

'LEAVE IT TO ME' NEXT AT ERLANGER

Play Booked February 2-3; Victor Moore Stars.

"Leave It to Me," the big Vinton Freedley musical with Cole Porter music and lyrics, and starring William Gaxton and Victor Moore will play at the Erlanger February 2-3.

Brooks Atkinson greeted the Broadway show as "a tumultuous comedy frank to music. A handsome carnival with a score that is swift, smart and ingenious." Burns Mantle said that "it starts Moore and Gaxton on another run" and that "Vinton Freedley may be proud of his job."

Walter Winchell acclaimed the show "a sure-fire hit" and wrote that it was "something to embrace," while John Anderson greeted it as a "winner by a landslide; large and lavish. A musical madhouse."

Hal Kemp's Band Stage Feature At New Roxy

Keeping the cast of his stage revue, appearing for a week beginning today on the stage of the Roxy theater, on its respective toes is comparatively easy these days for Maestro Hal Kemp. Particularly since he inaugurated a novel type of popularity contest among members of the band and performing artists, whereby the best individual performance of each show at the Roxy is selected by the balloting of the entire cast.

Kemp, who is the official counter, says he believes this method of personal performance checkup, is one of the best things the band has hit upon.

"The Smoothies," Janet Blair and our boys realize that to win the praises of their fellow performers is the acme of success," Kemp said. "I feel, too, that with a competitive practice such as this our shows are bound to be at best always."

The Smoothies—Babs, Charlie and Little—won the first award with their vocal arrangement of "The Little Red Fox." Jack LeMaire, the guitar-playing comedian, has marched off with the prize on two occasions, once for his "wacky" impersonation of a jitterbug—His double duty gives him a bit of an edge on the other performers.

Bob Allen, the romantic baritone, is one up on lovely Janet Blair, a new addition to the Kemp ranks. Bob's rendition of "South of the Border" won him the award unanimously both times. Johnny Cyr's exhibition drumming in "Tantrum," an instrumental novelty, and Hal Kemp's saxophone solo in "Star Dust" tied. Hal quickly refused any part of the award. He wants the votes cast for his performers cast for his performers only.

Beethoven's Life Film Subject At Emory

With Beethoven's immortal music as a background, "The Life and Loves of Beethoven," the French picture playing today and tomorrow at the Emory theater, turns out to be a sympathetic and vastly entertaining biographical screen study of the great composer from the time he left Bonn, in Germany, to take his residence in Vienna, where he died as his Ninth Symphony was being played in triumph.

The picture begins when Beethoven, already past youth, is in Vienna teaching music while composing his masterpieces. Desperately in love with Juliette Guicciardi, to whom he is about to propose marriage, he is overjoyed when she comes to him and asks him to improvise as she talks to him. Believing that she is about to tell him of her love, he begins the beautiful "Moonlight Sonata," which he ends in torture as he listens to her confess her love for another. This heart-rending sequence is played by Harry Burr and Jany Holt. Complete English titles are provided.

'Melanie' Gives Olivia Boost to Stardom

By LEE ROGERS,
Motion Picture Editor.

It's four weeks—one month—now since the big wind hit the screen at Loew's Grand theater.

Fifty-nine times, including the premiere, the technicolor film of "Gone With the Wind" has been run off for approximately 118,000 persons.

Many of the 118,000 have been back for the second—and even third—time. Last Thursday night was No. 2 for us.

We said when we saw the magnificent panorama of Margaret Mitchell's book for the first time amidst the fanfare of the World Premiere, it would take another seeing to fully comprehend this motion picture.

Second Guessing.

Random thoughts after the second observation.

It is still "Scarlett's" picture, just as was the book. Vivien Leigh gives as great a performance as any actress ever did. She is completely "Scarlett" and her southern accent is plausible. If she misses the motion picture industry's "Oscar" (Academy Award), someone will have tampered with justice's scales.

Hattie McDaniel stands out as a great actress. She is "Scarlett's" Mammy, and the way she throws around her "fittin' and turnin' Emily Post for 'Scarlett' and the entire 'O'Hara' family, or would never suspect she wasn't born on a plantation. Hattie and Ona Munson, the screen's "Belle Watling," have the most natural southern accents in the picture.

The introduction to the film—probably the longest list of characters and credits yet attached to a motion picture—is a spectacle worth seeing in itself. The credits are submitted over a background of typical Old South scenes—slaves, pines, old man river, cotton fields, etc.—in such a manner as to get the audience in the proper frame of mind for what is to follow. "Gone With the Wind," the title, floats across the screen as if each letter was a cloud.

Music Superb.

Max Steiner's music has missed a lot of praise it should have gotten in the picture. From overture to finale, musical accompaniments change with the tempo of the scene and almost tells the story itself without dialogue—or even pictures.

Gable still is Gable, and Olivia de Havilland's "Melanie" should win her some acting honor. Frankly, I'd rather be in Olivia's shoes than in Vivien Leigh's. Both gave superlative performances. But Miss Leigh was in the greatest and most colorful role in the film industry. What story, what film, what part can David O. Selznick possibly find to provide a step up for the little English girl who became the year's greatest star in her first picture?

Ready for Top.

On the other hand, consider Olivia. She proved she was a good actress. She has had few, if any, good roles before. She deserves a step up, and may expect better roles henceforth. Olivia can still play another role without people saying "she's slipping" when it might be the story's fault rather than her own.

There is still more to be obtained from the picture than even two showings will divulge. Manager Eddie Pennington has seen it seven times and still wants to see it again. Mr. Marsh saw it for a second time, with his wife, Margaret Mitchell, the author, Friday afternoon. "It improves with seeing it again" was his comment. Neither he nor his wife had seen it except amidst the fanfare of the World Premiere.

Selznick's interpretation of "Gone With the Wind" is the motion picture industry's greatest telling of a novel, but it isn't the greatest motion picture. It's too loosely knit together for that. But it is a fast-moving, entertaining revue which requires 60 minutes to unfold on the stage.

And So Was Born 'America Swings'

Capitol Show

When Atlanta's witness "America Swings" on the stage of the Capitol theater, starting today, they will see the brain production of one of the nation's leading women producers, Miss Gertrude Avery.

Miss Avery has been in the show business practically all of her life and has spent most of her time in booking star vaudeville acts and producing stage units and reports from other cities in which "America Swings" has been presented indicates that she has done her finest producing job in bringing to the stage this newest musical-vaudeville revue.

In organizing "America Swings" Miss Avery first secured a line of 10 beautiful girls and their dance routines which will be presented on the Capitol stage were rehearsed for many weeks before any other part of the revue was booked or organized. After she was sure that her line of American beauties were perfect in every detail, she then contacted some of America's foremost vaudeville acts and with them "America Swings" was born, a fast-moving, entertaining revue which requires 60 minutes to unfold on the stage.

Ten vaudeville acts are featured in this splendid revue headed by the Randolph Avery Trio, comedy knock-about stars; Gates and Claire, terpsichorean wizards of the silver stairs; the Gale Sisters of CBS and National Barn Dance fame; Tillie the Wonder Horse, a surprise act; James McNally in "Say It With Hats"; Pauline Rudnick, the acrobatic marvel; and a host of others with music by an 18-piece band.

On the screen the Capitol offers a home-spun story, "Jeepers Creepers," starring the Weaver Brothers and Elvira and special cast. A story which will have a wide appeal to those who really enjoy something a little different in screen entertainment.

Music for the Emory

Jany Holt appears with Harry Baur in the film biography of the world's greatest composer in "The Life and Loves of Beethoven," playing today and tomorrow at the Emory theater.

Just Babe to Mickey

Judy Garland stars opposite Mickey Rooney in "Babes in Arms" at the Plaza theater this week.

Sings at Ansley

Jayne Whitney is the featured singer with Johnny Hanco's orchestra at the Ansley hotel's Rainbow Roof.

DENTAL HEALTH IMPORTANCE CITED

Disregard of mouth health until pain and illness occur is one of the most common practices today, Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Public Health, said yesterday.

"The importance of dental health in a general health program cannot be overestimated when we take into consideration the number of diseases caused by unfavorable conditions of the mouth and the fact that such a large majority of our population have dental defects," he pointed out.

One of the unsolved problems of public health, he said, is putting into practice the knowledge now available on the subject of control of dental disease.

Beautiful Madeleine Carroll, English screen actress (above), will be heard in an original drama on the "Screen Guild Theater" over WGST at 6:30 o'clock tonight, while lovely Gladys Swarthout (below), Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano, will make her third guest appearance of the season in the "Sunday Evening Hour" over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

CHIN CURVE

Director Frank Borzage smokes a pipe which is the envy of Clark Gable and all the other actors in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Not Too Young to Love." The stem curves to follow the contour of Borzage's chin.

Why Be Fat

Thousands of women have discovered way to lose excess weight—with-out following strict diet lists, or taking exercises or drugs.

If you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is... First... eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating. Second... mix 1/4 of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with 1/4 of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. This you reduce calorie intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strict diet lists, strenuous exercises or taking drugs. Yet—in a test conducted by a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of seven pounds registered per month. This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch. Eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating, and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always made from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure. Try This Amazing Welch's Tomato Juice. If you think all Tomato Juice is alike, try Welch's new, vitamin-rich Tomato Juice. It is so rich and thick you can add 1/2 water or ice and still have a most delicious Tomato Juice.

Georgia Clubwomen To Sponsor April Edition of The Constitution

By BESSIE S. STAFFORD, of Atlanta, Editor of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

The offer of The Atlanta Constitution to issue a special edition sponsored by the clubwomen of Georgia was a recommendation brought by Mrs. A. M. Hill, of Greenville, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, to the executive board at the meeting held last October. Members accepted this recommendation to sponsor the edition and a central committee appointed to direct the effort was composed of Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Ralph Butler, of Dallas, general federation director; Mrs. Bessie S. Stafford, of Atlanta, federation editor; Mrs. Harvie Jordan, state chairman of press and publicity; and 10 district presidents. The important announcement is made on today's club page of Georgia federation, because The Atlanta Constitution's Sunday club page has been the official organ of the federation for more than 40 years. It is published every Sunday without expense to clubwomen, and is unique in its functioning, because other state federations bear the cost of publishing a magazine to carry official news. As editor for 18 years, and having other state magazines come over my desk that are issued with expense to clubwomen, the editor becomes conscious of the privilege Georgia clubwomen enjoy in having an official page in The Atlanta Constitution to call their own.

Earnest work has begun on this project, and the edition will be published on April 7. The beneficiaries will be the state and general endowment funds. The endowment fund of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs was begun from the proceeds of a special

Mrs. Clyatt Writes On Flower Contest

By Mrs. J. J. Clyatt, of Tifton, State Flower Contest Chairman.

Mrs. Rowland H. Latham, General Federation chairman for the "Golden Jubilee Flower Contest," writes: "Someone has called me the universal language. In the same vein we contend that flowers have a language of their own which can be understood by any human being in any part of the globe. Shakespeare sizes the fate of the man who has no music in himself as being 'fit for treasons, statecrafts and spoils'; and so do we deplore the plight of the person who finds in his nature no response to the appeal of flowers."

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has never had a flower of its own, and since the question has been considered sufficiently important to be legally debated by nations and states, a contest for adoption of an official flower for the federation has been included in the plans of the golden jubilee celebration.

It is the hope of the General Federation and of your Georgia chairman that every club will join in this effort to find a flower which will forever typify the aims and ideals of the largest body of organized womanhood in the world. I urge each club in Georgia Federation to suggest a flower, giving reasons for its fitness as the emblem of the Federation of Women's Clubs. From these suggestions sent in to me a flower "candidate" will be offered. There will be one candidate chosen from each state and the final choice will be made at the council meeting in Milwaukee in May. Please be prompt in sending in your candidate flower.

It is new inspire in us the best service that clubwomen have ever known. Watch the club page for accounts of progress made toward the success of this venture.

Tifton Club Members Give Guest Program

At the January meeting of Fitzgerald Woman's Club, the Tifton Twentieth Century Library Club was the guest club and members presented the program, having as main speaker Mrs. Nicholas Peterson. President of the local club, Mrs. R. V. Woodham, presided and graciously welcomed the visitors. President of the Tifton club, Mrs. J. J. Clyatt, responded and introduced the representatives from her club. With Mrs. J. J. Golden at the piano, Mrs. A. B. Mitchell rendered vocal selections and Miss Rainwater played a lovely piano solo.

Mrs. Isidor Gelders introduced Mrs. Peterson, telling of her outstanding work as a clubwoman and of her many worthwhile achievements. As state organizer of the National Consumers' Tax Commission, Mrs. Peterson brought interesting facts concerning this organization which was created a year and a half ago.

Mrs. Peterson stated that the purpose of the commission was mainly to study hidden taxes in order to put this information in the hands of all interested persons; to establish study groups of citizens for the purpose of studying local, state and national tax situation; to safeguard the consumer and uphold the standards of American democracy.

The flower committee composed of Mrs. W. K. Bryant and Mrs. Frank Clark decorated the rooms, and pages were Mesdames John Mann, Ralph McKenna and E. G. Scott. Three new members voted into the club were Mrs. E. P. White, Miss Dorothy Sanders and Mrs. Amy Sanderson. Mrs. Frank Fletcher and her committee were in charge of refreshments.

Mrs. Hudson Makes Splendid Report

Mrs. T. Charlton Hudson, retiring president of the Woman's Reading Club, of Columbus, gave a splendid report of activities for the past year at a recent meeting. The following is a resume of Mrs. Hudson's report:

"The Woman's Reading Club has a present membership of 32, with five honorary members. Dues have been collected to the sum of $218. Tallulah Falls school donation, $20. Representatives were sent to state conventions.

"The club promised to stand behind the state-wide movement to endorse the use of cotton bags for grocery containers and cotton dresses instead of rayon. Contribution of $26.50 is given by the club to the Rosenberg Milk Fund for school children. Members served in the annual on the annual tag day program for 'Better Babies,' and sold tuberculosis seals, totaling $18.50.

"Members serve on the boards of the Community Chest, Family Welfare Bureau, Public Health Nurse Association and Girl Scouts. Members have presented the Poets' Corner in the Carnegie library with two poems. Exhibits: Modern American and Modern English Poetry, by Louis Untermeyer, given by Mrs. Ralph Wright, and 'The New Poetry,' by Harriet Munroe, given by Mrs. Loyd Bowers."

Colonel Charles Willoughby, of Fort Benning, lectured to club members. An exhibit of pottery was put on by Mrs. Hudson and an instructive display of water colors from the collection made for the National Geographic Society of Thibet.

Under the Cherokee Rose

By Rose Marie

Clubs are required to pay per capita dues on the list of active membership only, but if it is desired to give associate members the privilege of membership, dues should cover associate membership. The payment of dues should be as regular as possible and in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Clubs are in good standing if dues are paid on or before January of each fiscal year of the federation. It is suggested that it would be helpful if each club would select a month as a regular time for paying dues, and remit during that month each year. Club treasurers are requested to send dues to the district treasurer who will forward dues to the state treasurer. Enrollment of members should be sent with annual dues.

Each season of the club year has its signs. The publication of the Federation Year Book is one of late summer, followed by the opening of the club year. In its pages are found, ready to serve, officers, chairmen and presidents of the individual groups that represent the 30,000 members of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Do these figures signify anything to you? They should be filled with encouragement that the strength of the federation has not been lessened during a difficult period, and that we go forward to meet the many responsibilities that are ours today. As the largest organization of women in Georgia, the club women are naturally depended upon to cooperate in the various departments. The chairmen of these departments are awake to present needs and are ready to help.

The tenth anniversary of the Women's Club and the 100th anniversary of the city was recently celebrated in Stone Mountain. Penny Art Fund Chairman Issues Statement on Definite Achievement

By Mrs. J. A. Corry, of Barnesville, Penny Art Fund Chairman.

Spotlight of attention, of federated clubwomen should be focused upon definite achievement to be included in reports to State and General Federation chairmen. As Georgia's chairman of the penny art fund, my report must be sent in to the general chairman by March 15, and to date only 10 clubs have mailed me their pennies. One penny for each member for art. This project creates a fund which is used for prizes to be presented to the club women who have done the best work in their respective communities to promote art and art appreciation. Georgia has a special chairman for this fund and each club member is asked to contribute one penny a year toward this fund. Clubs report to the district chairman of art, who in turn reports to the state chairman. Each local club treasurer sends the pennies to me as chairman of penny art fund, and all pennies remain in the state. With the pennies thus received, the state art chairman purchases prizes which are works of art. These prizes are awarded at the state convention.

Art activities which may be undertaken by clubs working for honor ratings are: (a) Form art study groups; write essays on art; learn to know American artists and sculptors; have art lectures; report visits to art galleries and private studios. (b) Put on art exhibitions in clubhouses, libraries and community houses. Make them social events. Have the artists present as guests when local art is represented. (c) Crafts work is on the increase. Workmanship, materials, color and design should be of a high standard. Start art and crafts classes, exchanges and shops. Hold art festivals and anti-ue shows. (d) Special credit will be given to clubs reporting number and valuations of art purchased by members. If a member buys a work of art as a gift for herself or is presented with one, it should be counted on the club's activities. It is only through the report of the state chairman that the national judges can make their decision as to honor ratings. States are graded on the basis of art activities and the percentage of increase in number of clubs sending in pennies. The winning entry in the General Federation contest will receive a work of art, purchased in the state where the convention is held. Second and third prizes will be valuable books on art. No club is eligible for award of any kind unless it adopts the penny art fund as part of its regular activities and sends in a penny for each member.

An exhibit of paintings of Francis Speight, of Philadelphia, and of James Couper Wright, of California, now of the University of Georgia, were displayed at the Woman's Club in Columbus this week. It was sponsored by the Columbus Art Association, of which Edward Shorter is president. Mr. Speight's canvases were of landscapes and figures in oils. Mr. Wright exhibited water colors. Both artists have been recognized nationally. Mr. Wright has recently come to Georgia to serve as assistant to Lamar Dodd, head of the art department of the University of Georgia.

May, Maypole in center, surrounded by May flowers. June, brides and grooms posed atop wedding cakes of several tiers; roses in profusion. July, Fourth of July motif. August, summer sports provided the pattern. September, Harvest decorations. October, Halloween decorations. November, Thanksgiving. December, decorations symbolic of Christmas.

Douglas Women Take Active Part In Club Affairs

Douglas clubwomen held one of the most outstanding meetings of the club year on Thursday with 42 members and 3 visitors present. Members sang "Happy New Year," after Mrs. J. W. Wallace, the president, had called the meeting to order. Pledge to the flag was led by Mrs. W. T. Cottingham. Mrs. R. W. Woodruff read the collection.

The treasurer reported a balance of $67.85. Mrs. J. L. Cochran, chairman of the building fund, made a pleasing report of the work of her committee and other committees, who had contributed to the fund, swelling the amount to a sum near $1,000. Mrs. Maxine Townsend, the librarian, made the report for the library committee, stating that there were 721 books circulated for December and that the children evidenced a keen interest in the Christmas story reading. Upon recommendation from the executive board, a motion was made and carried, to buy six dozen sets of silver for the club house.

Mrs. Comer Kitchens, corresponding secretary, read a letter from the executive secretary, assuring the clubwomen of the donation to the student aid fund. She also read membership from Mrs. W. M. Snow, Mrs. Bessie P. Vickers and Mrs. J. S. Davis.

The roll was called, and members answered with New Year's resolutions. Mrs. Wallace read an inspiring editorial on resolutions, and made interesting comments. Mrs. Preston Williams was welcomed as a visitor.

Mrs. O. U. Meeks, second vice president, presented the following library extension program: Mrs. W. L. Stovall gave a very enlightening paper on Pulitzer — the awards, the prize-winning authors and their works for 1939. This splendid paper was more evidence of the effective work that Mrs. Stovall has done as chairman of the library extension committee.

Professor T. H. Rentz talked on "Public Agencies and Adult Education." In speaking of education in the south, Professor Rentz recalled how the south had shown undaunted spirit in staging one of the most remarkable comebacks in the history of the world. He read excerpts from an address delivered by Governor Mitchell to the Georgia legislature in 1816, and compared it with the recent Roosevelt to congress, both speeches reflecting the same uneasiness and grave apprehension over a world crisis. He pointed out that the patriotism of our people is taken much for granted, and advocated the organization of a forum for our city, to stimulate interest in the problems facing our country.

Mrs. C. A. Collins, who is a complimentary member of the club, beautifully played piano numbers. Social hour hostesses were Mesdames W. V. Waters, Fred Blair, W. L. Stovall and Oscar Duggan.

'Junior Fire Patrol' Is Discussed By State Conservation Chairman

By MRS. J. M. MURRAH,
Of Columbus, State Conservation
Chairman.

As chairman of conservation in Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, startling facts regarding forest fires in Georgia have been brought to my attention which offer to clubs and to the individual club members a unified, well-planned concerted program in 1940. One of the most alarming problems to face will be the official report of the U. S. Forestry Service that Georgia, for the calendar year just ended lost a total of $5,563,830 in young timber, which was one of the worst fire years in the history of this state, and was up 21 per cent above the previous five-year average of $1,579,672 as given by the report.

Adding to the alarm which this report causes is the report of other states showing that seven of the fourteen southern states reduced their losses. Only Oklahoma and Mississippi showed a higher increase in actual losses over that of Georgia. The total number of fires in the state during the year in woodlands was given at 25,000, or an average of about 50 acres per fire consumed.

The Georgia situation is being called to the attention of the federation along with other organizations by a communication from the acting director of the southern states forest fire commission, W. L. Shaddix, 207 Haas-Howell Building, Atlanta. The commission has been organized about a year, but 20 years had previously been devoted to the forest fire problem by many of the volunteer directors of the organization, and with noticeable results in savings of timber in local areas.

The federation is asked to join with other organizations in a concerted drive this year to enroll all rural school boys in a "junior fire patrol." About twelve of such patrols are active, as the result of recent nation-wide and south-wide radio broadcasts sponsored by the commission. These patrols are located in rural communities near Bacontin, Royston, Bowman, Armauchee, Powder Springs, Carnesville, Augusta, Macon, Roberts-town and Franklin. The plan is to organize a patrol in each rural school district throughout the state. The work is done by one boy selected and who accepts the responsibility as "organizer." He is given free membership in the commission, U. S. Forestry, state forester, extension workers and by a number of affiliated civic and commercial groups working in harmony for the one result—"self-help."

The specific co-operation to be sought of the federation on the unified program is, first, to send representatives to the south-wide meeting to study forest fires. This meeting will be held at the Tutwiler Hotel, Birmingham, Ala., on February 24. The second specific request made to Georgia federation is to assist local teachers in each of the county schools in the distribution of available forestry literature and to encourage groups of school boys in joining the "junior patrol." The third move is to encourage any and all civic clubs, farm groups and individuals in putting the forest fire loss first in 1940 major programs. "The situation is dangerous and so serious that it justifies every ounce of energy and any financial help which can be commanded. It is one which state foresters tell us they cannot cope with in the absence of public sentiment and added funds," stated Mr. Shaddix in a conference with federation representatives.

"Women's clubs are pioneers in this conservation work, said he. "They have been active more than a quarter of a century on it, but the public has certainly let them down and the result is the annual $500,000 per month tribute to our greatest enemy, yet our greatest friend—"fire."

Among Georgia directors of the forest fire commission are Columbus Roberts, Dr. M. D. Collins, M. D. Mobley, Frank Heyward, Jr., Dr. Willis A. Sutton and Frank M. Means, treasurer, son of the former president of Emory University. The total "junior firemen" active with the commission exceeds 500 members—46 of whom are Georgia boys.

General Federation Director Discusses Fiftieth Anniversary of the Organization

of Dallas, General Federation Director.

Here is 1940, and the 50th anniversary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and what an eventful 50 years this has been! Georgia club women are joining clubs from every state in the Union in helping to make the celebration a glorious one.

In Georgia, the month of March has been designated as General Federation month and every club in the state is urged, some time during the month, to have a meeting, a birthday party or a celebration of some kind in honor of our "Mother Organization." And at the same time, have as special guests the charter members. This can be a very simple or elaborate occasion but should be most interesting.

If you fail to find the program material you like in The Clubwoman, a card to the office of General Federation at 1934 N. street, N. W., Washington, D. C., will bring a wealth of suggestions.

Club women are busy women, and we do not often advocate looking backward, for we are all so intent in looking and going forward, but on this occasion it will be profitable to deliberately stop and take inventory. A 50th birthday is a perfect time for this. In reviewing this history we can find what we as club women have accomplished and be better prepared to map out what we hope to accomplish during the years to come. Not only review the history of the General Federation but also that of your own club and what it means to your community.

How many organized moments for welfare, beautification and culture in your community owe their beginning to the Woman's Club?

Some districts have already selected the club women in their midst who is most outstanding for long continuous membership and leadership. Those who have not, please keep this in mind and make your nominations at your spring meetings, as these women will be especially honored at the state meeting in Gainesville.

As a very fitting climax to our celebration a special Woman's Club edition of The Constitution will be published. A very generous per cent of all advertising will be given to the Georgia Federation for state and General Federation foundation funds and we feel a deep appreciation to The Constitution for its interest and cooperation. However, if any club wishes to make a special birthday gift to General Federation, it will be gratefully received.

Serving with your director on the Golden Jubilee Committee are the following very efficient chairmen, any of whom will be delighted to assist you in any way possible: Song and march contest—Mrs. H. J. Shingler, Ashburn; General Federation flower contest, Mrs. J. J. Clyatt, Tifton; extension, Mrs. E. M. Bailey, Acworth; pageant, Mrs. Alva Maxwell, 2479 Dellwood drive, Atlanta; Speakers Bureau, Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, Athens; publicity, Mrs. Harvie Jordan, Henry Grady hotel, Atlanta; radio, Mrs. Katherine Connerat, 165 14th street, Atlanta; Junior club participation, Mrs. H. J. Whitehead, Comer, and Mrs. R. C. Fryer, Jr., Manchester.

Student Aid Girls Voice Appreciation

The following letters came to the office of the Student Aid Foundation just before Christmas. One shows what her loan meant to a girl from middle Georgia. The second letter accompanied the final payment on a loan to a girl from south Georgia.

The first one writes: "I am writing to tell you how happy I was when I received the check from you. It came in the middle of exam week, just when I needed some kind of stimulus to carry me through the rest of the week and my examinations. It was a perfect one."

"I appreciate, to the utmost, your interest in me, and I shall do my best to try to make the loan a worth-while one. Thank you so much."

The second letter says: "Enclosed is my check for $77.93 which, I understand, pays in full principal and interest, my loan from the foundation. I want to tell you again how very much I appreciate the consideration and many kindnesses I have received from this organization."

Savage, brother of the groom, was his best man.

Misses Juanita and Betty Joe Storey, sisters of the bride, lighted the altar tapers and a musical program was given by Mrs. Edward Cantrell and Miss Lydia Thomasetti.

The maid of honor wore a princess model of romance blue velvet and carried pink rosebuds. The bride wore an empire gown of cream satin and her tulle veil fell from a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses showered with lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was an old fashion cameo brooch.

Mr. and Mrs. Savage left for a motor trip, Mrs. Savage traveling in a cadet blue woolen costume suit—the coat trimmed in blue fur. Her flowers were lilies of the valley.

Upon their return to Rome they will reside in an apartment on Russell street.

LABOR ACT POLL WILL BE TAKEN BY U. S. CHAMBER

Membership To Vote on Four Proposed Changes in Law; Elimination of Majority Rule Favored.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce, voicing fresh criticism of the National Labor Relations Act, announced today that its membership would be polled on four proposed changes in the law.

The questions to be submitted in a mail referendum were described as conclusions reached by the Chamber's committee on management. They are whether there should be:

Elimination of the majority rule provision so that an employer would be required to bargain with a labor organization only as representative of those workers who have given the union express authority to represent them.

Withdrawal of protection of the act from employers during any strike time as they violated terms of an agreement reached through collective bargaining.

Extension of the act to cover unfair labor practices by employers or their representatives.

Insertion in the act of a "clear definition" of the extent of interstate commerce in which an employer must engage before he comes under the act.

"I have visited colleges and schools by the hundreds all over the world, but nowhere have I seen another place like Berry College and Schools. There is no educational work exactly like it in the world and there is nobody like Martha Berry."

Dr. Cooke addressed more than 1,500 students and visitors in the Mount Berry chapel. He was introduced by Miss Berry.

Dr. Karl Reiland, pastor emeritus of St. George's church, New York, will speak tomorrow at the last exercises of the anniversary.

SURVIVORS OF DEAD MINERS GIVEN PAY

Bodies Are Brought to Surface by Grim-Faced Rescue Workers.

BARTLEY, W. Va., Jan. 13.—(AP)—The silent, saddened survivors of 92 men known dead or given up for dead today received the last pay envelopes of the victims of the nation's worst mine disaster in more than a decade.

The 92 lost their lives last Wednesday when an explosion roared through the branching tunnels of the Pond Creek-Peachbottom Coal Corporation's No. 28 mine.

The pay checks were distributed as some of the 51 bodies recovered were brought to the surface by grim-faced, exhausted rescue workers, who have labored four nights and three days in the dangerous gas-filled depths.

The company announced it would distribute food and other necessities to the victims' families "as long as necessary."

MRS. ESTELLE SCOTT.

SICK CHILD WEEPS FOR MISSING PARENT

Lonesome Son Also Wonders
If His Mother Is Ever Coming Back.

Two-year-old Shirley Ann Scott was ill yesterday and crying for her mother, Mrs. Estelle Scott, who disappeared from her home at 696 Glenwood avenue December 11 and has not returned.

One other child, too, is waiting for his mother to come back. He is Donald, 4. The last time he saw his mother she was leaving the house. She told him she was going to the store. He has waited a long, long time now and he wonders if she really went to the store. But he and his little sister keep on hoping that mother will return to them.

The woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Wilson, also of 696 Glenwood avenue, said Mrs. Scott left her husband and returned from a trip to Miami, Fla., only about a week before she disappeared. They thought it might be possible she had gone back to Florida but they have had no word from her.

She was described as being blonde, blue-eyed with fair complexion, weighing between 90 and 100 pounds and 5 feet 5 inches tall. Anyone with information concerning the missing mother was urged to communicate with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson.

Urban League

By JESSE O. THOMAS

The purpose of the Bulletin is to chronicle the worth-while things done for, by, and with the Negro, as a basis of increasing inter-racial good-will and understanding.

The following accomplishments have been culled from the reports of the various branches of the National Urban League:

ATLANTA. A nondiscriminatory clause has been inserted in the contracts for the construction of new housing projects in the city. The executive secretary directed that the "A. J. Cantrill" training school, painters' institute, and general labor institute have now been carried on successfully for seven, two and two years, respectively. A charter for negro painters has been obtained through the guidance of the league.

Among indigent groups in the city, a program including handicraft, canning and gardening has been executed through the Neighborhood Club Department.

BALTIMORE. There has been an increase in the employment of negroes among skilled craftsmen, social workers, policemen, nurses and public school guidance workers.

As a result of Urban League efforts, a negro Boy Scout executive has been appointed. Baltimore is now in third place among negro Scouts.

BROOKLYN. The membership committee of the Brooklyn Urban League has as its objective the assembling in Brooklyn of 10,000 negro contributors. In this undertaking the committee plans to: (1) Popularize the work of the league; (2) tap a comparatively undeveloped source of revenue; and (3) justifiably broaden the field of contributors to the social welfare of the negroes in Brooklyn.

BUFFALO. Occupational advances have been made in placements at the Chevrolet Motors plant, city health department and the Department of Social Work, Buffalo and Lackawanna, New York.

CHICAGO. The fourth statewide conference on negro youth convened in Chicago November 18 for a two-day session period. The movement began in 1935, under the sponsorship of the Chicago Urban League.

Occupational gains are indicated in many fields which either excluded the negro or limited his representation. The outstanding single advancement in the field of private employment has been with the Bell Telephone Company.

Detroit. Occupational gains are indicated in many fields which either excluded the negro or limited his representation. The outstanding single advancement in the field of private employment has been with the Bell Telephone Company.

Englewood, N. J. A city housing committee was appointed as a result of the work of the executive secretary, N. P. Dotson Jr. The appointment of a local housing authority is anticipated.

Fort Wayne, Ind. Sixteen per cent of the much-talked-about houses constructed under the direction of the Fort Wayne Housing Authority and renting for $2.50 a week are occupied by negroes.

Kansas City. New openings for negroes have been obtained in the various durable goods establishments.

Twelve hundred copies of "Facing the Future"—an occupational guide to students and out-of-school youth—have been distributed by the league during the past year.

Little Rock. A training school for household employees has been established as a result of the efforts of the Urban League of Greater Little Rock and the Little Rock public school system has agreed to sponsor the project under its vocational department.

Los Angeles. The movement began in 1935, under the sponsorship of the Chicago Urban League.

Miss Kathleen Glisson To Become Bride of Charles E. Fleming Feb. 24

MISS KATHLEEN GLISSON.

Engaging the interest of a host of friends throughout the state is the announcement made today by Rev. and Mrs. Fred Lawrence Glisson of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Sara Kathleen Glisson, of Atlanta, to Charles Edward Fleming, of Atlanta and Rome. The marriage of the popular young couple is scheduled for February 24, the ceremony to take place at the Inman Park Methodist church.

The lovely bride-elect is the only daughter of her parents, and the sister of John L. Glisson, assistant principal of Tileston school, in Wilmington, N. C. Her father is one of the best-known ministers of the North Georgia Methodist Conference, having served pastorates in Elberton, Inman Park and Park Street churches in Atlanta, and in Griffin. He was also superintendent of the Methodist Children's Home, in Decatur, and prior to that time he served churches in Arkansas, Arizona, Texas and New Mexico.

Mrs. Glisson was before her marriage Miss Ouida Kathleen Dunbar, daughter of the late John David Dunbar and the late Mrs. Ellen Stephens Dunbar, of Macon, who was a direct descendant of Alexander Stephens. On her maternal side, the bride-elect is the great-granddaughter of the late David Dunbar, prominent pioneer of North Carolina, and of Mrs. Leila Kate Brown Dunbar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Brown, early settlers of Talbot county, Georgia. On her paternal side her great-grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Glisson, descendants of the Shiver and Clark families of Wadley and Augusta.

Miss Glisson received her early education at the Griffin schools and Girls' High school in Atlanta, after which she attended LaGrange College for two years, where she was a member of Kappa Phi Delta sorority, the Gamma Rho, the Student Government Association and was art editor of the Scroll. During her sophomore year she was awarded signal honor by being named one of the six outstanding students of the college.

The bride-elect completed her education at Emory University where she received an A. B. degree in education. Since her graduation she has been a popular teacher in the Atlanta public school system at Formwalt school, and has become prominently identified with the city's educational and cultural circles. She has served as recreation chairman of A. M. Y. U. for the past three years.

Slender and graceful of figure, the bride-elect possesses the brunette type of beauty, with brown hair and expressive brown eyes. Her engaging personality has won for her countless friends among Atlanta's young social contingent, and she will be a welcome addition to young matron ranks.

Mr. Fleming is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Fleming, of Clarkston, and the grandson on his paternal side of W. D. Fleming and Mrs. Amanda Cauthen Fleming, of Hart county, formerly of South Carolina. His maternal grandparents are Stephen P. Bond and Mrs. Polly Bowers Bond, of Canon.

The groom-elect is the brother of Mrs. Myrtle Holbrook, Atlanta; Mrs. T. G. Phillips, Canon; Mrs. D. F. Turner, Americus; Mrs. C. F. Dagle, San Diego, Cal.; Sam and William Fleming, of Atlanta; J. C. Fleming, Cumming; Neal Bond Fleming, of Boston, Mass.; and James Fleming, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Following his early education in the Cumming and Marietta schools, Mr. Fleming entered Emory University, where he graduated with a B. S. degree in engineering. At Emory he was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and the Engineers' Club.

He is connected in business with the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company in Rome.

And that the John Ogdens gave one of the smartest breakfasts of the season prior to the horse show, part of the Orange Bowl celebration where Atlanta held the spotlight.

Mickey Rooney, who is vacationing at the Roney Plaza, didn't bother to go to the opening of Hialeah Park—he couldn't get in. Tropical Park the other day because he is only 19. Seems rather nice to write about Atlantans down here where sand gets in your shoes and sun gets in your eyes. Peachtree on Miami Beach

By MAUDE KIMBALL MASSEN-GALE.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 13.—Recent society lifted its jeweled jorgnettes and with one accord made the week-end racing season at beautiful Hialeah Park the most brilliant in the history of the Miami Jockey Club. And along with the "Colonel's Lady" and "Judy O'Grady" were a generous sprinkling of Atlantans and celebrities of other places.

The clubhouse and boxes were a riot of colors, fashions that challenged the tropic skies for unusual hues, and as the thoroughbreds pounded down a fast track we saw . . . Mrs. Harry English of Atlanta, dressed entirely in white, fox-trimmed coat and a smart off-the-face turban, and was in the S. A. Lynch box. For the first time in the history of Hialeah the Lynches left the day of the inaugural for New York. In the box, however, were Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Lynch Jr., playing host to several important guests who motored down from Palm Beach and other places.

Remember Rosemary Townley, who was married not-so-long ago to George Smathers, of Miami? She attended the races Friday with her sister, Mrs. C. Larimore Perry, and elected to wear the most stunning "ensemble" of beige with matching turban. Mrs. Perry chose the yippee yellow for her top coat and the maid of honor and only attendant, John Hunter Hanna Jr., of Washington, was best man.

The bride wore a traveling costume of blue crepe with coat of gray caracul. Her hat and accessories were blue and her flowers were a cluster of purple orchids. The maid of honor wore a princess model of dusky rose and a picture hat. Her flowers were pink roses.

The bride was given in marriage by H. S. Brown. Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Brown entertained at a reception at their home on Mont Alto for the bride and groom after the ceremony.

Mrs. Julian Cumming, grandmother of the bride, and Miss Ida May Patton assisted in entertaining.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanna left on a motor trip to Florida and will visit Havana before returning here February 1. They will reside in an apartment at Claremont on Second avenue. Mr. Hanna is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hunt Hanna, of Washington.

Mrs. George Wight, former Atlantian, is hostess to the young debas and gave a lovely tea in their honor Friday at her home.

Mrs. Lindsay Hopkins is visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. P. Ludwig Jr., at her beach home, where Sally is taking an important part in publicity matters pertaining to the Children's Theater Inc., all better entertainment for the underprivileged or any others, who might enjoy better music and plays.

The lure of the Surf Club on Miami Beach attracted Frank Hawkins, Atlanta capitalist, this week. He was observed dining in the palm-lined patio with Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Goddard of Atlanta, as the guests of F. Lowry Wall, president of the Miami Beach First National Bank.

W. R. C. Smith, better known as "Captain Dick," dined in the Biscayne room atop the Columbus this week, with his former next-door neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Holcomb. The socially prominent William Wardlaw was leaving the same hotel for an afternoon in Miami Beach.

'Union Signal,' W.C.T.U. Organ, Marked By Outstanding Articles

By MRS. MARY HARRIS ARMOR of Atlanta, Editor Georgia
W. C. T. U.

Allow me to call attention to the last issue of the Union Signal, official organ of the National W. C. T. U., appearing January 6. It is a 24-page issue replete with scientific and health articles which appeal to youth and to the educators of youth. At the last national convention at Rochester, N. Y., it was decreed that, beginning January, 1940, the first issue of the Union Signal each month will be a 24-page educational number, containing temperance and other articles designed for youth wherever social welfare material is of interest.

One-fourth of the present circulation of the Union Signal is among educational institutions and business and professional men and women. This 24-page edition, with little organization matter, will make a stronger and wider appeal to these. The other three issues each month will be devoted more largely to W. C. T. U. interests and will prove essential to informed, active, powerful membership. In the January 6 number of the Union Signal Dr. Izora Scott, national director of legislative work, at Washington, says: "The second regular session of the 76th congress convened January 3, 1940. All bills introduced since the opening of the first session in January, 1939, have at the present moment the same status as they had at the adjournment of the first session; except the one on neutrality, which was amended at the special session called last September.

The two bills in which the W. C. T. U. is most interested are the Neely motion picture bill—S. 280—which has passed the senate and is resting in the house committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce; and the Johnson liquor advertising bill—S. 517—which is on the senate calendar and may come up for a vote early in January.

The latest announcement by the United States Post Office Department states that the Frances Willard postage stamp will be put on sale first at the post office in Evansville, Ill., on March 28. It will be a five-cent stamp, as will those of Louisa M. Alcott and Jane Addams, the other two women so honored among "Famous Americans." The color will be blue. The Washington Star, in its issue of December 17, 1939, speaking of this series of postage stamps, said: "The President specified the values in which the stamps will appear."

Mrs. R. H. McDougall gave an illustrated talk on Alcohol Education at Druid Hills Woman's Missionary Society recently showing the different stages of drunkenness. She said: "The only way in which to truly estimate the stage of drunkenness which a person has reached is by the concentration of alcohol in the blood. Scientists are agreed that more than five parts of alcohol to 1,000 in the blood is a death dose; hence it is no exaggeration to say that an accumulation of one-fifth of that amount means one-fifth of the way towards death." She then proceeded to illustrate with manikins the various stages. She said: "One or two drops of alcohol to 1,000 in the blood 'delighted and devilish'; three parts of alcohol to 1,000 parts of blood 'delinquent and disgusting'; four parts alcohol to 1,000 parts blood 'dizzy and delirious'; more than four parts to a 1,000 'dazed and dejected'; five parts to 1,000 'dead drunk'; more than five parts and death closes the scene."

Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, state president of the Georgia W. C. T. U., attended the meeting of the state board of managers of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, at Macon, on Wednesday.

Mrs. McDougall, leader of the Membership Campaign for 1940, reports that Savannah, another of the largest unions in the state, has "held fast." The campaign for membership goes merrily on, new members coming into our ranks almost daily. Mesdames J. R. Wellborn, H. H. Friddell, A. W. Voight and Wilbur Brown are "Home Protectors." Mesdames Bonnie M. Dixon and Susie Budd are "Home Defenders," and Mesdames W. V. Strother, Robert Travelate, Robert McDougall and Mary Harris ARMOR are "Guardians of the Home."

Miss Florrie Beck Weds James Swiney

The marriage of Miss Florrie Katherine Beck and James Warner Swiney was solemnized recently at the First Presbyterian church. Dr. E. D. Patton, pastor emeritus, performed the ceremony in the presence of the families and a few close friends.

The couple's only attendants were Mrs. C. D. Ketchum, who was matron of honor, and J. Wiley Scott, best man.

The bride wore a powder blue crepe gown and black accessories. Her tiny modish hat was of rose velvet trimmed in gold, and she carried a lace handkerchief belonging to the matron of honor. A shoulder bouquet of yellow roses and lilies of the valley completed her costume.

Mrs. Swiney is the daughter of Julius Samuel Beck, of Marietta, and the late Mrs. Belle Phillips Beck. She attended high school and college at Montreat, N. C., before making her home in Atlanta. Two Generations of Atlantans Occupy the Social Spotlight

Miss Rogers Weds Jack Williams On Monday

The marriage on Monday morning of Miss Margaret Rogers and Jack Williams Jr., of Waycross, takes place in the chapel of All Saints Episcopal church. The impressive ceremony will be performed at 11 o'clock by Rev. James Duncan, assistant rector of the church, in the presence of a limited number of relatives and close friends of the popular young couple.

Among prominent Waycross relatives and friends here for the marriage are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Williams, parents of the groom-elect, and his sisters, Misses Eva Williams, Betty Williams, Mrs. Julian Lines and Mr. Lines, Dr. and Mrs. Braswell E. Collins, Miss Louise Breen, Jack Jennings, Charles Mayo and Steve Coleman.

Mrs. Annette Peoples Dickey and Mrs. Florence Peoples Whitaker, of Chattanooga, Tenn., aunts of the bride-elect, and her cousins, Miss Louise Peoples, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eugene Peoples, of Chattanooga, arrive today to attend the service uniting Miss Rogers and Mr. Williams.

Mrs. Oscar T. Peoples, another aunt of the bride-elect, and her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Peoples, will motor down from Cartersville for the Rogers-Williams ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Vaiden will arrive today from Augusta, and will be numbered among the important out-of-town relatives coming to Atlanta to attend the auspicious event.

Mrs. Dickey entertains at dinner this evening as a complimentary gesture to her niece, and the immediate relatives of the bride-to-be and groom-elect. Mr. Williams will be honor guest at the bachelors' dinner to be given this evening by Julian Lines, of Waycross, guests to include members of masculine members of the Rogers-Williams bridal party.

After their marriage and upon their return from their honeymoon in tropical climes, Mr. Williams and his lovely bride will reside in Waycross, where the groom-elect's distinguished family is identified with social, cultural, religious and newspaper circles. They will be attractive acquisitions to the younger married contingent of society.

Mrs. Julian S. Carr and her young son, Julian Carr Jr., are the charming subjects in the photograph below. Mrs. Carr was before her marriage Miss Anne Coppedge.

Mrs. Cecil Stockard Jr., one of Atlanta's loveliest young matrons, and her little daughter, Lucy, posed for this attractive photograph.

A charming trio consists of Mrs. Frank Player and her young daughter and son, Cora Fleming and Frank Anthony Player Jr.

Mrs. G. F. Willis Jr. is shown with her attractive daughters, Charlotte Willis and Helen Willis, in the above photograph made by Neblett studio.

Mrs. William J. Peabody, the former Miss Cecilia Lawton, of Jacksonville, Fla., is pictured with her young son, William Jr.

Dancing, Riding and Skating Popular Debutante Hobbies

By Sally Forth.

NOW THAT the furious pace of debutante activities has slackened, the season's attractive buds are finding time to indulge in their favorite pastimes, both in this city and on sunny Florida shores, where many have migrated for extended visits.

Curious as to the activities most enjoyed by the prominent group of belles, Sally did a little "snooping" in order to let her readers in on what the debs really like to do. Upon investigation, she found that Mary McGaughey is a devotee of driving, this hobby having been inspired by her luxurious new car, presented her by her aunt, Miss May Haverly, on the "heels of her decision" to become a debutante.

After careful consideration, Selma Wight, dainty secretary of the Debutante Club, named dancing as her hobby, as did Virginia Papy and Virginia Willis, who was the first of the season's buds to announce her engagement. Virginia's marriage to Alvin Cates Jr., you know, will be a social event of January 30.

Beck Wight who, with her sister, is now sojourning at Miami Beach, Fla., lists swimming as her favorite pastime, a sport in which she will have ample time to indulge while on Florida shores.

"Bobo" Spalding, the club's popular president, just couldn't concentrate on one hobby. She "dotes" on dancing, tennis and roller skating, and is equally graceful in each diversion.

Julia Block is the proud possessor of a collection of miniature tea sets, her china having been assembled from all over the world. A crown Darby tea set, bought in England, holds first place in her handsome collection.

Priscilla Blackett and Georgia Bohn named riding as their hobby. Priscilla, who is enrolled at Wellesley College, in Wellesley, Mass., has a mount stabled near the college campus, and enjoys frequent rides on the rustic trails near the school.

Other buds naming riding as their favorite pastime were Nancy Calhoun and Jean Oliver, who can be found almost daily cantering along the rustic trails bordering Atlanta's northside.

Apropos of her status as a debutante is attractive Jane Osburn's selection of dancing as her hobby. Sally might almost have guessed this, for Jane is a sought-after

Honorary Patrons Named On Grand Opera Committee

The list of honorary patrons whose co-operation was enlisted and promptly enrolled in the Atlanta Music Club's services toward producing grand opera in Atlanta on April 22, 23 and 24, includes names of music lovers, whose service to Atlanta is highly appreciated. These prominent music lovers were guarantors in former glorious years of grand opera.

As the Atlanta Music Club is the only guarantor this year, contributors were not sought in presenting the 1940 season.

Composing the committee extending invitations to honorary patrons were Mesdames Harold Cooleedge, Hugh Hodgson, Floyd McRae Jr., Alex King Jr., and Howard Smith Jr.

Mrs. Howard Cooleedge is president of Atlanta Music Club, under which auspices Metropolitan grand opera will be presented here in April. The list of honorary patrons includes the following well-known Atlantans: Mesdames H. M. Atkinson, William T. Healey, John W. Grant, Samuel M. Inman, Frank Lowenstein and Richard W. Johnston.

Others forming the committee are Governor E. D. Rivers, Mayor W. B. Hartsfield, Preston S. Arkwright, Arthur Acklin, Ivan Allen, J. P. Allen, Philip Alst, John A. Brice, F. W. Blalock, W. Brownlee.

Also former Governor James M. Cox, Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun, J. Bulow Campbell, Asa G. Candler, C. Howard Candler, Richard Courts Jr., Ryburn G. Clay, Samuel C. Dobbs, Carling L. Dinzler, Jackson Dick, Jesse Draper, Benjamin Elsas, Marcus M. Emmett, T. K. King.

Miss Juanita Meador, of Athens, To Marry Herman Boyd Upchurch

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. John England Meador announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Juanita Meador, to Herman Boyd Upchurch, of Athens.

The lovely young bride is the only daughter of her parents and the sister of Richard Henry Meador. She is a very popular member of the younger social set in Athens, having graduated from Athens High school and attended the University of Georgia where she was a pledge to the Alpha Delta Pi social sorority and took quite an interest in other college activities making a wide circle of friends among her classmates.

The groom-elect is the younger son of Mrs. C. L. Upchurch and the late Mr. Upchurch, of Athens. His brothers are George, John and Bernard Upchurch, and his only sister is Mrs. Alex Gaines, of Atlanta. Mr. Upchurch, also graduated from Athens High school, later attending the University of Georgia and Clemson College, where he was a member of the Chi Phi social fraternity and at present is associated in business with the firm of C. L. Upchurch and Sons, Inc.

February 17 has been selected as the date of the marriage of this popular young couple, and will take place at 5 o'clock at the First Methodist church, in Athens. After a wedding trip they will reside in Athens.

Many parties have been planned for the betrothed couple, the date and nature of these affairs will be announced later.

Miss Keyes To Wed Mr. Lavroff At First Christian Church Feb. 10

Interest centers today in the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Mary Frances Keyes and Viacheslav Lavroff. The wedding of the popular young couple will be solemnized at the First Christian church on the evening of February 10 at 8:30 o'clock. Dr. C. R. Stauffer will perform the marriage in the presence of friends and relatives of the couple.

Prior to and during the ceremony music will be presented by Mrs. Sam Johnson, soloist, and Mrs. Robert Cunningham, organist.

Miss Keyes will be given in marriage by her father, Robert Payne Keyes. The groomsmen will be Andre Mahoff, Fred Reed, Raymond Styles and Henry Walker. Miss Charlotte Petty, cousin of the bride-elect, will be maid of honor. Dr. Hal Davison will be Mr. Lavroff's best man. The bridesmaids will be Misses Jo Keyes, of Cullman, Ala.; Jo Clemons, Jean Johnson and Elizabeth Huguley.

After the ceremony there will be an informal reception at the home of the bride-elect's parents, the members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests.

During the evening the bridal couple will leave by plane for their wedding trip.

Preceding their marriage Miss Keyes and Mr. Lavroff will be honored by a number of social affairs. The first of the series was a luncheon and opera party given by Miss Elizabeth Huguley yesterday at her home on Peachtree Way.

MISS JUANITA MEADOR.

Miss Meador's engagement to Herman Boyd Upchurch, of Athens, is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John England Meador, of Athens. The marriage of this popular couple will be solemnized on February 17. Miss Keyes, whose be-

Ruthanna Burt's, Elizabeth Grove's and Bungle Fuller's favorite pastime is bridge, which they play with amazing skill.

Mary Virginia McConnell's hobby is painting, and Sally is informed that she aspires to become a portrait painter. The pretty deb has studied painting for several years, and is unusually talented in this field.

Florence Jones' ability to cook puts her a league ahead of many other buds whose knowledge of culinary activity is but vague.

The old adage, "the way to a man's heart is still holds true, and Sally hears that Florence's apple pies have often tempted diet addicts to "forget the whole thing." Caroline Candler is also a gifted cook, and lists this as her hobby.

Lillian Klein's hobby is her dog, "Bunch," a very remarkable canine. "Bunch" is a merry Sealyham, and is the dainty deb's constant companion.

Georgia Adams' favorite pastime is music, a field in which she is unusually talented. Sally hears that the belle's many friends like nothing better than to sit enthralled while she coaxes rich melodies from the gleaming mahogany piano in the drawing room of her home on Andrews drive.

Georgia is also a kindergarten teacher, having taught for the past three years at the St. Philip's Cathedral church school.

Margaret L'Engle is a badminton enthusiast, and Sally is informed that the belle is eagerly anticipating the return of "the good ole' summertime" when she can "catch up" on the practice of her favorite sport.

Allie Malone has two oil portraits to her credit, having painted these last spring while enrolled in the art class at Agnes Scott College. The gifted deb is again enrolled at the popular Decatur college, and is energetically pursuing the study of her hobby.

A sideline with Allie is the collecting of perfume bottles and rare fragrances, and Mrs. Harry Malone confesses that her daughter's dressing table sports an enviable collection of both perfumes and containers.

Harmony of color and line hold a fascination for Ann Pappenheimer and Peggy Dutton, two of the season's loveliest deb's, who have spent many hours studying interior decorating.

George Dargan's hobby is sketching with charcoal and Sally hears that she possesses more than her share of talent in this line.

Constance Knowles, vice president of the Debutante Club, has no hobby! When pressed for a statement, however, she confessed that she is enthusiastic about both bridge and dancing.

Anne Harris is a travel addict, having traveled extensively both in this country and abroad.

Anne you recall, attended school in Florence, Italy, and her recent return to this country was delayed because of the foreign war.

Anne Suttles' weakness for scrapbooks has inspired her to collect quite a number of them, and Sally hears that the popular bud has scrapbooks and keepsakes from several European countries as well as from numerous cities in the United States.

Josephine Sanders is a "bookworm" at heart. The attractive deb's books may be found at the breakfast table, in the automobile, and just anywhere she happens to be. Josephine confessed to Sally that she is often "traced by her books." Betty Jones is also a devotee of literature, and has an enviable collection of books.

AND SPEAKING OF debutantes, Dame Rumor has it that wedding bells will peal forth for two attractive members of the current debutante club, both the belles in question being of the blond type of beauty. One bud is an adopted Atlantian, her home being in a near-by town, but rumor has it that her heart belongs to an admirer "back home." Her many Atlanta swains will be disappointed to learn that she will not be a permanent resident here.

The other deb in question is a member of one of the city's most prominent and beloved families, and Sally hears that before long she will become the bride of a handsome swain who is a native of Macon, but attends school at more University. He has been her constant escort at the many debut parties and the choice of the lovely belle as his wife will not come as a surprise to their many friends.

CUPID was definitely "on the job" when Charlotte Golden, of Columbus, attended Sunday school at the Presbyterian church in Columbus, for that is where the prominent belle met Tommy Boyd, to whom her engagement is announced today.

Tommy followed the introduction by inviting both Charlotte and a friend of hers to go with him to a Sunday school party, and though the girls were amused when he stated that he could "take care" of them both, they were convinced of his attractiveness as a host when he showed them a grand and entertaining evening.

The bride-elect announced to her friends after the party that Tommy was the best-looking and most charming man she had ever met—and that is quite a nice compliment coming from a belle of Charlotte's unquestioned popularity.

The courtship of the young couple blossomed into a betrothal despite the fact that the activities of the bride-to-be included spending June Week at the United States Military Academy at West Point, and attending numerous house parties throughout the south.

A former student at Agnes Scott College here, Charlotte is a member of the Columbus debutante coterie, as well as a valued member of the Junior League of that city.

"JUST LIKE MY CHRISTMAS TREE—"
Little Cary Latimer, daughter of Mrs. Frances Weinman Latimer, caught by Kenneth Rogers' camera at the Piedmont Driving Club.

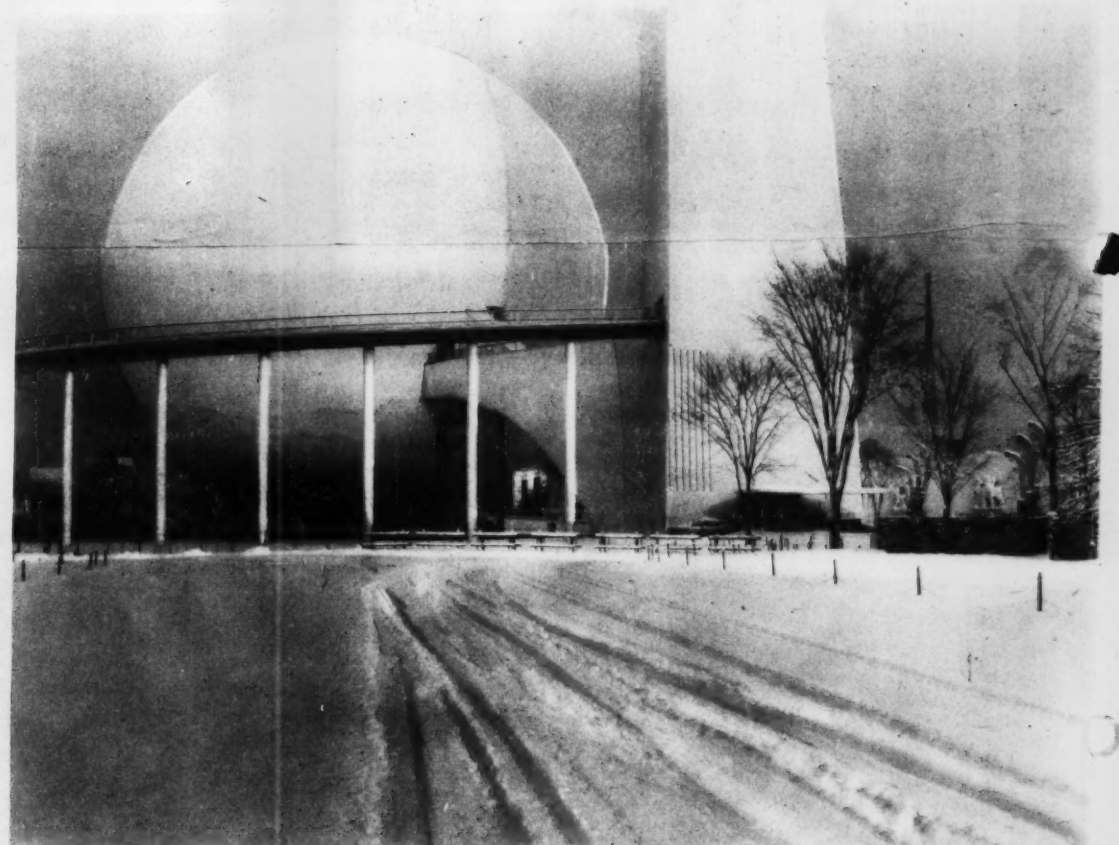

Spring fashions feature lace

THE LURE OF LACE—The witchery lent by lace is exemplified by this model, seen through the delicate lacework of a green and white embroidered evening gown. At left, is a bewitching lace ensemble. The black daytime dress has velvet bows lining the neckline. A dramatic veil overflows from the brim of the contrasting white hat, almost to the waist. At right, a dinner dress of navy wool lace, superimposed over white pique.

Winter blankets New York World's Fair in snow

THEME CENTER AMID THE SNOWS—The 200-foot Perisphere, which houses the spectacle democracy, and the Trylon after the first heavy snowfall since the New York World's Fair was completed.

(Left)
GOING HOME—The Soviet building at the New York World's Fair is being dismantled for return to Moscow, where it will again be set up. Note the scaffolding about the 79-foot heroic stainless steel figure of a worker on the pinnacle of the pylon in the center. The huge statue, bearing aloft a red star, is to be taken down in sections.

HELP YOUR CHILD build a strong body. Give him cod liver oil! For many doctors claim nothing takes its place in helping children build sturdy bodies and sound teeth. Also in aiding adults recuperate after illness. And now THERE IS A BETTER WAY TO TAKE COD LIVER OIL... SCOTT'S EMULSION!

- 1—Scott's Emulsion has all the values of cod liver oil and is four times more easily digested.
- 2—Easily digested—The exclusive method of emulsifying the oil permits digestion to start in the stomach, whereas digestion of plain cod liver oil does not begin until the oil passes into the intestines.
- 3—Easy to take—Scott's Emulsion has a pleasant taste. Easy to take and retain by children and adults.
- 4—Economical—Scott's Emulsion is an economical way to obtain the Vitamins A and D so necessary to strong bones and sound teeth.

INSPECTION
—Karlsberg cadets, in their dress winter uniforms, turn out for inspection before one of the commanding officers of the faculty on the parade ground outside the school barracks.

ALL IS NOT MILITARY AT KARLSBERG—At the annual ball, fair women and brave young men stop for supper at 10—to eat, and perhaps store up memories of pretty eyes seen across a brimming glass.

Sweden's "West Point"

On the outskirts of Stockholm, in a seventeenth century royal castle, is Sweden's "West Point"—The Karlsberg Military Academy—where young Swedish men are trained for all branches of the army. Sweden is mobilizing. Because of the Russian-Finnish hostilities and the threat to her shores nearly 150,000 men are now under arms compared to the normal standing force of 20,000. Graduates of the school are being called to put into action their military training. These pictures show a few phases of cadet life in Sweden's famous military academy.

FAR FROM CANNON'S ROAR—Thoughts may be far from cannonading and bombing as this young Karlsberg cadet sits out a dance with his Swedish sweetheart, but in the background are racked the bayoneted muskets, a grim reminder of the battles that may be fought to protect Sweden's threatened shores.

A POINTER FROM THE COMPASS... FOR BETTER LIVING!

1. AROUND THE GLOBE... in the South or the North... you hear two words that are understood in scores of languages... "Canada Dry." They are words that mean... in the international code of good living... the world's finest ginger ale!

2. THE GOODNESS, the bouquet and the inimitable flavor of Canada Dry come from the choicest ginger root... selected by Canada Dry's own resident expert on the Island of Jamaica.

3. LET THE CHILDREN drink Canada Dry. This healthful beverage contains no artificial stimulant. It provides plenty of energy—but only in the form of food. It's gingervating!

4. BECAUSE OF ITS PURITY and wholesomeness... its ability to aid digestion and well being... Canada Dry is often recommended by physicians to convalescent patients.

5. SERVE CANADA DRY in your home... order it at leading hotels, clubs and restaurants. You'll find no other beverage so delightfully pleasant... in both taste and cost!

AT WHITE HOUSE RECEPTION—Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court Charles Evan Hughes and Mrs. Hughes photographed leaving their home for the White House where they attended the annual dinner and reception for members of the judiciary.

LOOKING DOWN STREAM from Logan's Mill on the Calhoun-Rome highway just after a recent snow. This spot is an old Gordon county landmark and was made by Gus Boaz, of Calhoun, Ga.

ROUND RADIO—One of Gustav Jensen's most striking creations is this spherical radio set. The tuning-dial forms a large illuminated ring around the base. The mechanism is in the bottom section, while the music emanates from the illuminated louvers in the upper section.

A DESIGNER'S DESIGNER—Gustav Jensen was born and educated in Copenhagen, Denmark, but came to New York in 1919 penniless and friendless. He obtained work in a studio, then went from job to job, but in a few years his amazing versatility attracted attention. Now he is honored in his profession, recognized as a designer's designer, and a recipient of numerous medals for his work. He is shown here improving the appearance of a jar, while some of the hundreds of packages and jars he has styled form an impressive background.

WHERE "WORLD'S RICHEST GIRL" WILL RESIDE—Overlooking the Ottawa river is the palatial residence—official home of the United States ministers to Canada—which will be occupied by the former Doris Duke and her husband, James H. R. Cromwell, recently appointed the United States envoy to Canada.

NOMINATED for post of minister to Canada. James H. R. Cromwell, shown at Palm Beach, shortly after he had been nominated by President Roosevelt for the post of minister to Canada.

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

AN INNOCENT VICTIM

VANGER'S PLOT SEEMED SUCCESSFUL. WITH MATEA'S FAMILY DEAD, HE'D MARRY HER AND WIN CONTROL OF THE DIAMOND LANDS.

NOW GROOT CARLUS STAGGERED FROM THE BLAZING HOUSE. THIS WAS AS VANGER PLANNED. CARLUS MIGHT BE USEFUL.

"WHERE ARE THE OTHERS?" THE GIANT PANTED. "INSIDE," MATEA SOBBED.

THEY WERE SHOCKED TO FIND THE DOORS LOCKED BUT THEIR MIGHTY STRENGTH BATTERED THEM DOWN.

AND TOGETHER THEY BROUGHT THE VILLAIN'S INTENDED VICTIMS TO SAFETY.

TARZAN STRODE TOWARD VANGER. "THE DOORS WERE LOCKED," HE SAID ACCUSINGLY.

"MY DOOR WAS LOCKED, TOO," VANGER ANSWERED. "BUT IT WAS WEAK AND I BROKE IT DOWN. CARLUS DID IT!"

"THAT'S NOT TRUE," GROOT CARLUS PROTESTED. "I HEARD KEYS JINGLE IN HIS POCKET," THE VILLAIN INSISTED.

"YOU LIE!" CARLUS ROARED. "SEARCH HIM," VANGER DEMANDED.

CARLUS PALED. VAN BOEREN'S JAW SET STERNLY. "SO, CARLUS, THE GUILT LIES ON YOUR HEAD!"

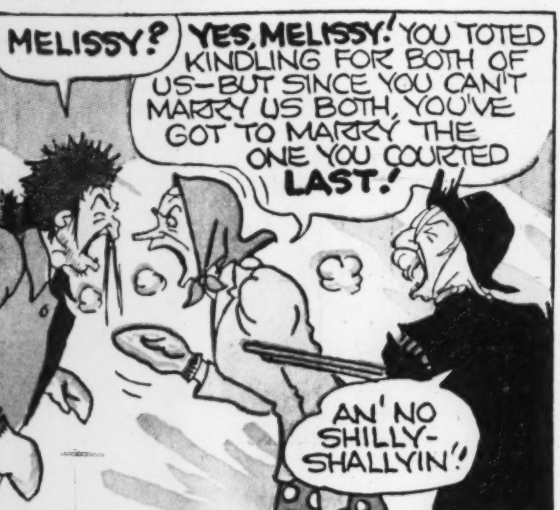

NEXT WEEK:

Little Orphan Annie

QUIETLY, AND WITH UNERRING INSTINCT, ANNIE HAS GONE DIRECTLY TO THE ONE PERSON WHO CAN SAVE HER UNCLE JOHN----

BUT, JOHN, YOU QUIT HARPE, SCARP & TITLEMAN BECAUSE YOU REFUSED TO HELP ANSON JOG ROB JASPER KEY'S POOR OLD PARENTS--THEY'RE THE CROOKED ONES----

NO, JILL-- IT WAS ALL LEGAL-- NO ONE ELSE, THEN, EVEN SUSPECTED HE WAS A THIEF, MUCH LESS A MURDERER----

OF COURSE I HAD A RIGHT TO QUIT THE FIRM-- BUT I HAD NO RIGHT LATER TO BRING ACTION AGAINST JOG ON THAT SAME CASE--

BUT IF YOU HADN'T, NO ONE EVER WOULD HAVE FOUND OUT HE'S A KILLER AND A THIEF-- IT'S ALL SO WRONG! SO TERRIBLY UNFAIR--

MAYBE-- BUT TECHNICALLY, I WAS UNETHICAL-- AND NOW HARPE HAS ME WHERE HE WANTS ME-- OH, I'LL BE DISBARRED-- HARPE'LL HANDLE IT QUIETLY, OF COURSE--

HA! LIKE FUN HE WILL! I'LL SEE TO IT HIS LIFELONG TIE-UP WITH ANSON JOG IS HEADLINED ALL OVER TOWN--

WE'LL FIGHT! NO HOLDS BARRED-- HE MAY DISBAR YOU, BUT WE'LL RUIN HIM! I'LL CALL HIM NOW AND GIVE HIM A CHANCE TO BACK DOWN--

THREATEN HIM, EH? NO, TALLY-- THAT AMOUNTS TO BLACKMAIL-- I'LL NOT ADD THAT TO MY OTHER SINS--

OH, I WAS A SAP-- TECHNICALLY I DID WRONG-- BUT MORALLY, AS IT'S TURNED OUT, I DID RIGHT-- AND I'D DO IT AGAIN-- BUT GAD-- THE DISGRACE IT WILL BRING JILL--

NONSENSE! IF YOU HADN'T DONE AS YOU HAVE, I'D DESPISE YOU-- OH, JOHN, I'M SO PROUD OF YOU--

SAY-- WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN, YOUNG LADY? WE'VE BEEN WORRYING ABOUT YOU--

ME? OH, I'M SORRY--- WHY, I--- I-- JUST TOOK A LITTLE WALK-- GUESS I WENT FARTHER'N I SPECTED TO---

NICK'S HEARD-- HE'S SENT FOR ME-- SEE! I TOLD YOU WHEN HE SAW HOW EASILY WE COULD GET RID OF THAT PUR. TECUM, NICK WOULD COME BACK TO US-- WE'LL BE BIGGER THAN EVER-- YOU'LL SEE--

GOT TO HAND IT TO YOU, "JUDGE" HARPE-- YOU'RE SLICK-- YEAH-- I HOPE SO--

SO-- I HEAR YOU PLAN TO DISBAR THIS YOUNG TECUM-- ARE YOU SURE YOU CAN DO IT? HE'S A SMART YOUNG FELLOW--

HO! HO! GOT HIM COLD, NICK-- SMART? WHY, HE LEFT HIMSELF WIDE OPEN-- STUPID! I'M SURPRISED YOU'D HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH HIM--

YES? LOOK! HE HATED ANSON JOG-- THAT'S WHY HE QUIT YOU-- THAT'S WHY HE WENT AFTER JOG-- THAT'S WHY YOU NOW CAN RUIN HIM, EH?

OF COURSE-- UNETHICAL-- HE HASN'T A LEGAL LEG TO STAND ON--

SO-- IT WAS BECAUSE TECUM TOOK THE CHANCE OF DISBARMENT THAT ANSON JOG IS SHOWN UP FOR THE THIEF AND KILLER HE IS-- THE SAME MURDERER WHO TRIED TO GET ME KILLED--

BUT, NICK! I DON'T SEE--

SO-- OLD NICK NEVER LETS DOWN A PAL-- OR FORGIVES AN ENEMY-- OR HIS PALS-- YOU WERE ANSON JOG'S FAIRWEATHER FRIEND-- SO--O--O, "JUDGE" HARPE OLD NICK IS GOING TO GIVE YOU SOME VERY GOOD ADVICE-- WITH TIME--TABLES!
